Established 1875

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1934

NUMBER 1

FOUR-FIFTHS

OF TOBACCO GROWING LAND-OWNERS HAVE SIGNED ACREAGE CONTRACTS—TWO HUNDRED THIRTY CONTRACTS SIGNED DURING PAST WEEK.

Five hundred and sixty Boone county tobacco growers on Tuesday morning of this week had signed government AAA reduction contracts on 2220 of 2700 acres of burley tobacco grown in this county according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner. This amounts approximately to 82% of the tobacco acreage grown.

Two hundred and thirty contracts were signed the past week which represents the most active week of the entire campaign. Official word was received the past week to extend the closing date so that the remaining 18 percent will have an opportunity to cooperate with their fellow growers in reducing the huge surplus so that all growers may receive a living wage for their crops.

The County Campaign Committee is expected to meet the first part of the week to set dates for the holding of Community Control Board elections. All growers expecting to sign contracts are urged to do so immediately so that they may have a vote in setting up of their community and County Control Boards. No solicitations will be made as it falls the duty of every grower expecting to sign a contract to do so of his own free will. Contracts may be had from any of the County Campaign Committee or at the County Agent's office.

Those growers who signed contracts the past week include the following:

R. C. McNay, Wilbur Rice, C. M. Arrasmith, John Hartman, W. W. Rector, Raymond H. Ashcraft, W. M. Hodges, Boone Williamson, Harry B. Adams, Mrs. Myra Ryle, W. T. Carpenter, C. K. Wood, A. G. Hodges, J. A. Seabree, G. F. Green, S. L. Riggs, J. S. McNeely, Thomas Coyne, William J. Stephens, Colin Riggs, John Baucum, Edgar S. Graves and Mrs. E. M. Crigler, W. H. Presser, Rev. O. L. Poole, Jesse Wilson, Finn Bros, Mrs. Mollie E. Rouse, Mrs. Martha Northcutt and Mrs. J. Walter Jenkins, Mrs. Laura K. Dillon, N. W. Carpenter, Ralph Jones, John S. Ryle, Mrs. Nannie C. Pope, J. S. Cason, H. B. Adams, Milton Gaines, George C. Kreylich, Willie Dringenberg, J. E. Weaver, William Bagby, Lucien Stephens, Albert Smith, W. O. Rector, Mrs. Jennie Bullock, George P. Nicholson, John W. Ryle, Mrs. Mamie Stephens, Cason Brothers, Robert W. Rice, William Phelps, Pat Code, W. H. Smith, N. G. Herrington, Charlie M. Riley, J. S. Eggleston, Mrs. Nan Baker, Louis C. Littrell, Mrs. Jessie Wilson, John Utzinger, Sam Patrick, Edward Rogers, Ed Barnard, W. M. Whitson, Hugh Semones, S. L. Craven, C. S. Finwell, J. R. Allphin, Jesse Sturgeon.

WORKING HOURS

AND MAN QUOTO CURTAILED BY ORDER FROM STATE HEADQUARTERS—PROGRESS ON PROJECTS GREATLY IMPROVED BY CHANGE.

A telegram from Louisville, state headquarters for C. W. A. work, was received at local headquarters last Friday afternoon announcing a change in working hours. Instead of working thirty hours per week, the men were cut to fifteen hours. Orders also were received to reduce the quota of workmen by 20 per cent.

Leaders here, however, feel that other orders will be received soon to relieve the condition, which quite naturally works a dire hardship upon those who had expected to work thirty hours for at least a few more weeks.

Unless an alteration is made in the present arrangement it is thought that many of the projects now under way in the county will not be completed.

It has been rumored that the number of men will be doubled with two shifts working fifteen hours each. If this is the case the project work may be finished.

STOPS RUNAWAY TEAM

Former Tax Commissioner J. S. Cason stopped a runaway team driven by Chester Rice, of near Burlington, late Monday afternoon. The team became frightened and the driver was unable to control them. Mr. Cason observed the team as they approached and jumped from his car in time to stop them, probably avoiding serious injury to both horses and driver.

STEPHENSON-RYLE

A marriage that came as more of a surprise to their friends and relatives was the union of Miss Virginia Stephenson and Mr. Wallace Ryle, both of near Burlington.

The young couple were united by Rev. F. E. Walker, pastor of the Baptist church, of which both young folks are members. The ceremony took place at the church parsonage last Saturday afternoon.

The bride is the daughter of Claude Stephenson, of Crescent Springs, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Stephenson, with whom she made her home. She is an active member of the B. Y. P. U. organization and a leader in many other local activities.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryle, of near Limburg, and is one of our most successful and respected young farmers. He is a graduate of Burlington high school.

The happy young couple are planning to make their home with the parents of the groom. They have the best wishes of the entire community and in which this newspaper heartily joins.

SCHOLL-TOWNSEND

Luther Hubert Townsend, 23, a former citizen of Boone county, and Miss Alice School 21 of Miami, Ohio, were united in marriage last Saturday, Jan. 20, at the home of Rev. W. T. Spears, of near Union, who performed the ceremony.

The bride is a native of Miami, where the groom now is employed and makes his home. He is a son of M. L. Townsend, who is well known in this county, having lived near Union for a great many years.

The Recorder joins the friends of the young couple in best wishes for a happy married life.

There will be a special service and special music at the Burlington Baptist church next Sunday morning. The annual every member financial canvass is scheduled for Sunday afternoon, while the text for the evening sermon of Rev. Walker will be the First Commandment. The public as usual is cordially invited to all services.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Morgan entertained Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. John Ryle and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Ryle at their beautiful home on the Burlington and Florence pike last Sunday. The dinner was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Ryle, who were married recently.

Dr. and Mrs. K. W. Ryle and Claud Greenup were in Georgetown, on Wednesday of last week.

Friends of Mr. George Blythe are gravely concerned over his serious illness. All fervently hope that his condition will improve soon.

Miss Martha Blythe spent Tuesday night with Mr. and Mrs. K. P. Botts in Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hickman, of Cynthia, spent a few hours in Burlington last Sunday afternoon. Mr. Hickman is employed in the office of one of the leading tobacco warehouses there.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Maners, and Maurice Clinkscales, of Williams town and Miss Helen Broderick, of Erlanger, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Combs at their home here last Sunday.

HI-Y HUSKS CORN

Some dozen or so members of the Hi-Y Club at the Burlington high school, accompanied by Prof. E. E. Kirkwood, one of their advisors, spent several hours at the home of Robert Hankinson in the Waterloo neighborhood last Saturday, where they assisted in husking a large quantity of corn. Mr. Hankinson has been ill for some time and unable to carry on his farm work.

TWO INJURED

WHEN AUTO PLUNGES OVER BRIDGE ON THE WALTON-BEAVER ROAD—CLAUDE MARION CLARK SUFFERED A SKULL FRACTURE WHICH IS SAID MAY PROVE FATAL—HIS BROTHER SUFFERED SEVERAL MINOR INJURIES.

Claude Marion Clark, 27, Dry Ridge, is in a critical condition, and his brother, Merrill Clark, 25, Williamstown, is in a serious condition at St. Elizabeth Hospital, suffering from injuries received when their auto plunged over an unguarded creek bridge on the Walton-Beaver road early Sunday and crashed into a tree.

Claude suffered a skull fracture and other injuries. His condition was unfavorable Monday. Merrill suffered a right arm fracture, possible left leg fracture and other injuries. His condition was fair Monday.

The accident occurred shortly after the brothers had left Mary Catherine and Anna Flynn, sisters, at the home of their aunt, Mrs. Agnes Ryan, on the Walton-Beaver road 2½ miles from Walton. The bridge is about 100 yards from the Ryan farm.

Both girls heard the crash and ran to the wreckage, piled against the tree. The auto failed to make a turn at the bottom of the hill and crashed over the side of the unguarded bridge into the tree, several feet from the bridge platform.

The brothers were taken from the wreckage and the ambulance of J. Scott Chambers, Walton undertaker, removed them to St. Elizabeth Hospital.

The girls said they and the Clark boys had attended a dance at Florence Saturday night. The brothers are the sons of John S. Clark, tobacco grader, Williamstown.

HEBRON LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hunter Pastor
Sunday School at 10:00 o'clock.
Mr. Edwin Waltin, Supt.

Sunday evening services at 7:30 o'clock, to which all members and friends are cordially invited. The Rev. J. H. Laughner of Covington, Ky., will be with us to give an illustrated lecture on The Life of Martin Luther. The combined choir of Hebron and Hebron Luther leagues will furnish special music.

Choir rehearsal Thursday evening, January 25, 7:30 o'clock, at the church.

G. A. HOLD MEETING

The G. A. meeting of the Big Bone Baptist church was held January 1, 1934. Our leader, Miss Mae Huey took charge. We elected new officers for the year, also received one new member. We were rated as an A-1 class the past year. The next meeting will be Sunday morning, February 14.

Willie Mae Butler, Reporter.

DONATIONS

TO BURLINGTON HIGH SCHOOL TO BE ERECTED SOON—CHAMBERS & GRUBBS AND MAYHUGH CO. OF WALTON GIVE SCHOOL ELECTRIC SCORE BOARD AND MATERIAL FOR BLEACHERS.

Both players and followers of the Burlington basketball team are rejoicing at the news of the approaching installation of a modern electric score board in the high school gymnasium.

The new board was purchased from the J. D. Mayhugh Manufacturing Co. of Walton, by the progressive undertaking establishment of Chambers and Grubbs, of Walton, and donated to the school by them.

This news was followed by the further welcome information that the Mayhugh company would furnish the material for the erection of a double row of bleachers around the court. It is said that the work on the construction will be done by C. W. A. workers.

Seating capacity of the auditorium for the basketball games will be almost double, according to estimates, when the new bleachers are installed. The new score board and seats will be ready for use in the Florence game on Feb. 3, when an overflow crowd is anticipated.

PLAYING GOOD GAME

We are in receipt of the following letter from the CCC camp at Wooten, Kentucky. It is self explanatory:

"The Editor
"Boone County Recorder
"Burlington, Kentucky
"Dear Mr. Editor:

"Leslie Williams, a Boone county boy from Walton, Ky., is captain of the basketball team organized by this company and is playing splendid ball. On January 12th the team traveled to Jackson, Ky., and defeated Breathitt county high school, one of the best teams in Breathitt county and on January 20th were defeated by CCC Co. 547 of Noble, Ky., in an overtime game. Company 547 is a team composed of stars from northern Kentucky cities.

"Yours truly,
"Walter Fender

"Wooten, Ky."

HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND KITCHEN FURNITURE

BRING GOOD PRICE
The sale held last Saturday at the residence of Mrs. Emma Schild, at Florence, Ky., in charge of Col. R. G. Kinman, was reported as very successful. All articles brought very satisfactory prices.

Mr. Kinman stated to the Recorder that there was one of the largest crowds in attendance he had ever witnessed at such a small sale.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

ATTEND GOVERNOR'S CONCILIATION MEETING

A. B. Renaker, Cashier of the Peoples Deposit Bank of Burlington and Esq. G. C. Ransom, Assistant Cashier of the Verona Deposit Bank, represented Boone county in the Governor's Agricultural Conciliation Conference held at Maysville on last Saturday.

The purpose of the meeting was to work out a better credit system for the farmers of Kentucky. Boone county was congratulated on the splendid work being done along the line of Agricultural Credit.

ANNUAL POULTRY SCHOOL

The annual Boone county school will be held at the town hall in Florence on Wednesday, February 7th. Arrangements to have two special speakers on poultry production and poultry disease problems have just been completed by the County Agent.

These schools were held in the past under the supervision of the County Agent. The County Extension Poultry Committee and the College of Agriculture have met with splendid success. The schools are free and a part of the Boone county Agricultural Program. The part school this year should be the best held to date. All poultrymen are invited to attend.

4-H TOBACCO SALE SATURDAY

The Northern Kentucky 4-H Tobacco sale will be held at the Kenton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse in Covington on this Saturday, January 27th. According to County Agent, H. R. Forkner, 4-H and Utopia club members of Boone, Kenton, Campbell, Grant and Gallatin counties will take part in the event.

Seventy-eight Boone county and five Utopia club members are eligible to take part in the sale. Tobacco will be delivered on Friday or in time to be on the floor by 7:30 a. m. Saturday morning. Prizes will be awarded in the morning for the best crops and baskets of various grades. The sale will begin at 1:00 p. m. in the afternoon following a general 4-H meeting at the noon hour.

It is hoped that as many members as possible will be able to take part in this event. Several hundred dollars in premium money is to be awarded members taking

NEIGHBORS STOP FIRE

A number of neighbors who responded to a fire alarm rushed to the farm of James Head near Union last Sunday afternoon and soon exterminated a field fire which was threatening Mr. Head's residence. Teams and plows were utilized in stopping the flames. It is thought that someone passing thru the field dropped a lighted cigarette, which started the fire.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY

ENTERTAINED JAN. 18

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Florence Baptist church was delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. Ed Snyder on Jan. 18. There were 26 members and a number of visitors present. The program was under the leadership of Elizabeth Delahunty as follows:

Year Hymn—"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Watchword.

Hymn—"Blessed Be the Name."

Pageant—Mrs. Davis and Rouse.

God the Father and Missions—Mrs. Myers.

Prayer and Missions—Mrs. Whitson.

Early Church and Missions—Mrs. Thompson.

Jesus and Missions—Mrs. Fossett.

Reading with Music—Mrs. Beemon.

Mrs. L. L. Clore, Pub. Chmn.

FLORENCE SCHOOL

WINS LOVING CUP

Final reports of the sale of Anti-Tuberculosis Christmas Seals in Boone county show Florence school to be the winner of the loving cup awarded the school selling the most seals per pupils. The 370 pupils enrolled in the Florence school sold $41.93 worth of seals, making an average of more than 11c per pupil, which is an enviable record.

Belleview school, winner of the contest last year, was a close second, averaging more than 10c per pupil. Individuals reported selling the most seals were Elizabeth Aiken, Hebron $2.05, and Buster Hensley, Burlington, $1.46. Other schools have not reported on this item.

Proceeds of the sale amounted to $121.45, which is a gain of almost $25.00 over last year's sale. This is also a gain over the sales in the past three years.

A list of the schools participating in the seal sale follows, showing averages:

School	Pupils enrolled	Sold.	Av.
Florence	370	$41.93	11c
Belleview	69	7.57	10c
Burlington	235	19.71	8c
Constance	90	5.50	6c
Hebron	275	15.95	5c
Walton	215	12.24	5c
Verona	130	6.00	4c
New Haven	250	10.39	4c
Petersburg	132	2.16	1c

1766 121.45 6c

Half of the proceeds of this sale must go to Louisville to help maintain the work of the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association. The other half, minus $7.00 expense of the sale, remains in Boone county to do health work here.

The schools of the county have done a splendid work in the sale and are to be commended for their interest in this worthy cause. Also is my desire to thank everyone who has contributed in any way toward the success of this anti-Tuberculosis Seal Sale.

Mary Louise Renaker, Chairman, Boone County Seal Sale.

News from Cincinnati states that Dr. E. W. Duncan is somewhat improved. He has been a pneumonia patient in a hospital there for several weeks and he was reported very low last week.

HOPEFUL LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hunter Pastor
Sunday School at 10:00 o'clock.
John Surface, Supt.

Morning Worship at 11:00 o'clock. Subject of the sermon, "God's Recompense for Labor."

All members and friends are cordially invited to attend the Sunday evening service, January 28, at the Hebron Lutheran church, 7:30 o'clock, when Rev. J. H. Laughner, of Covington, Ky., will give an illustrated lecture on the life of Martin Luther. Special music will be furnished by the Hopeful and Hebron combined choir.

Choir rehearsal will be held at Hebron church Thursday evening, January 25, at 7:30 o'clock.

MERCHANT

HELD UP AND ROBBED OF FIFTY DOLLARS IN CASH LAST SUNDAY NIGHT AT LIMBURG—SLENDER CLUES BEING FOLLOWED BY LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

Three men held up and robbed J. P. Brothers at his merchandise establishment at Limburg last Sunday evening and made away with a loot of approximately fifty dollars in cash.

Just as he was about to retire at ten o'clock someone called him by name and requested that he come down from his living rooms above the store and sell them some gas. Since they called him by name Mr. Brothers quite naturally thought that they were local people and went down to accommodate them.

When he was about to place the hose in the tank one of the men stuck a gun in his ribs and invited him inside the store, where a second of the trio ransacked the money drawers and cash register. All checks, however, were untouched. The car left in the direction of Hebron.

A short time after Sheriff W. B. Cotton received a call from Emmett Riddell's residence near Constance and Mr. O. O. Oton and Deputy Frank Walton were there at once. When they arrived at Mr. Riddell's residence they were confronted by a man who gave his name as Gullfogle and who said that he was a taxi driver from Newport. He told the officers that the three men had hired him to drive them to Erlanger, but that when safely out of town they had ordered him into the rear seat at the point of a gun and one of their number took the wheel. One of the men, he said called Brothers by name and seemed to know Boone county roads very well.

Officers here are working diligently on the case, assisted by greater Cincinnati police, and they hope to be able to bring the culprits to justice, although the clues upon which they are working are very slim.

KIRBY FOSTER DEAD

A telegram was received here early Wednesday morning, news of which was conveyed to us just before press time, relating the death of Kirby Foster, former Burlington citizen. The wire was received by Mrs. W. T. Carpenter, sister-in-law of deceased. Mr. Foster made Burlington his home for years, but has lived in Jacksonville, Fla., for the past 35 years. He died Tuesday morning.

MYSTERIOUS CALL

ANSWERED BY L. W. AYLOK, LIMBURG GARAGE OPERATOR—CAR REPORTED IN DITCH NEAR HARVEST HOME PROVES TO BE NO CAR AT ALL.

L. W. Aylok, garageman, who operates an establishment at Limburg, answered a call Tuesday night which was causing him a great deal of concern Wednesday morning. As Mr. Aylok stepped from the general store of D. R. Blythe in Burlington Tuesday night on his way home a man called from a car which was parked on the opposite side of the street. The man in the car inquired if his name was Aylok and upon being answered in the affirmative said that a man was waiting for him to pull his car from the ditch near the Harvest Home grounds. Mr. Aylok's informant gave the name of a man in Grant county whom Mr. Aylok had known for years and he went at once to the scene. When he arrived there he found no car, nor was there any trace of any having been in the ditch there or anywhere near there. The matter still is a puzzle and is placed alongside the "unsolved" when our informant failed to give his name. When the J. P. Brothers robbery is called to mind it is regarded a very good time to keep one's eyes open in this part of the county.

The marriage will take place on March 3, in Christ church, Oyster Bay, N. Y.

Two-Way Police Radio System

What is believed to be the first two-way police radio communication system went under official test in Piedmont, Calif., by the police department, under special permission of the federal radio commission. The new system permits officers in patrol cars to "talk back" to the central station, or to communicate with each other. The set is so compact it may be operated from a motorcycle.

With Frances Herron of Los Angeles, Miss Miller also was ranked No. 1 in the girls' doubles. Miss Miller is eighteen, and has been playing four and a half years.

SPECIAL SQUAD OF POLICE TO HANDLE GOTHAM'S ALIENS

Foreign Born Criminals Keep Law Enforcing Officers on the Jump.

New York.—There are so many criminal aliens in this city that it has become necessary for the police commissioner to organize a squad that does nothing but look after them. And they have their hands full, too. In consequence of their efforts 504 persons were deported while 596 cases were investigated during 1932.

The criminal alien squad was not organized until three years ago, but in that time the effort has proved its worth. It has clarified the law for the officials, who easily determine what class of people may be returned to their native countries. In order to cope with the situation, the 20,000 members of the police force were combed to get linguists who can talk the language of the persons coming into these investigations.

Who May Be Deported.

Just what criminals may be returned to their native countries as undesirable here is pointed out as follows by the commissioner:

Two classes of aliens are deportable—those legally in the country who have violated our laws and those who are illegally here.

The first group, despite the fact that they have obtained proper native passports and had them properly vised by the American consul, may be sent out of the country for violating the privileges granted them upon being permitted here. If they are convicted of a crime of moral turpitude within five years of their entry into the United States and sentenced to a period of over one year for this crime such aliens are deportable.

If after the five-year period has passed they are convicted more than once of a crime of moral turpitude and in each instance are sentenced to a period of over one year this makes them deportable. In this latter case both such crimes must have been committed after May 1, 1917, that being the date upon which this deportation act took effect.

The second group of aliens that are deportable are those who are illegally in the country. This is the class that the alien squad finds most active in crime. Their presence in the country in nearly all cases is because they have been unable to obtain the required vised passport to admit them here legally.

Many Ways of Entering.

The probabilities are that they were denied the visa by the American consul because for some reason they were considered undesirable immigrants in this country.

Such aliens resort to various means of entering the country illegally. They come by way of adjacent Canadian and Mexican borders; they ship as seamen and then desert the boat at an American port; they come as stowaways, as temporary visitors, and also by making use of false documents. They, of course, are deportable alone on account of being here illegally, provided, however, such illegal entry occurred after July 1, 1924. If the illegal entrant is here before 1924 and engages in crime, he is then deportable because of his criminal activities, as before stated.

Numerous cases come to the attention of the alien squad of aliens permitted here for temporary visits and who disregard this temporary status and remain here.

Find Lost Diamond Ring During Chicken Canning

Lancaster, Wis.—Unlike the person that killed the goose that laid the golden egg, and lost as a result a handsome income for the remainder of his life, Mrs. Ernest Johnson killed one of her roosters and recovered a valuable diamond which might otherwise never have been discovered.

Mrs. Johnson lost her engagement ring recently. She searched everywhere, but was unable to find it. At last she resigned herself to the belief that she never would recover it. The John, as own many chickens, and not long ago eight of them were killed and canned.

The gizzards had been set to one side and after the canning was done Mrs. Johnson started to prepare them for cooking. On opening the second she found her lost diamond.

Baloney Mightier Than Sword in Proper Hands

Partenkirchen, Bavaria.—A good, solid, hard, but elastic German sausage saved the life of Frans Baur, young son of a farmer in the Bavarian mountains, when he was attacked by an unknown assailant with a knife.

Frans, with a knapsack on his shoulder in which the sausage was stored away, came home from the market and was suddenly attacked by a man rushing from behind a shrub.

Frans pulled the sausage from his knapsack, brandished it like a sword, and knocked the assailant on the head so violently that he laid off and ran away.

Hungry Dogs Are Heirs

Portland, Ore.—Hungry dogs of Portland got a break here recently when Circuit Judge Taxwell ruled that portions of a will bequeathing $19,000 to care for strays. A home for dogs is to be built with the money, according to the will.

LET IT OUT

The irate producer stamped angrily up and down his office. Suddenly he stopped and gazed fixedly at the pretty actress.

"But why, why don't you like the part?" he asked heatedly.

"Because I don't, you idiot!" she retorted.

"Don't call me an idiot!" stormed the producer. "Do you want every one to hear?"

She looked mildly surprised.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she sweetly replied. "I didn't know it was a secret."

Couldn't Keep Up

Two colored boys were having an argument about ghosts. One of them claimed to have seen a ghost as he passed the cemetery the night before.

"What was dis heer ghos' doin' when you las' seen him?" asked the doubtful one.

"Yes fallin' 'behin', mistah; fallin' 'behin' rapidly."

COUNTY SCHOOL NEWS

HEBRON SCHOOL NOTES

The Piner teams invaded Hebron Friday night, where the Piner girls were easily conquered by the Hebron five, the Cardinals' chalking up a large score of 24-12 in their favor.

It was published in last week's issue that the Hebron boys had appeared to be coming out of their slump. However, it seems that they have had slight set back, as they were defeated on both Friday and Saturday nights. On Saturday night the Hebron girls again came out on top, surpassing the Dayton team. It was reported that these Dayton girls were rather an unconquerable team, but it proved very easy work for the Cardinals.

The Dayton boys (Green Devils) made up for the defeat of their girls, and as stated before, beat the Hebron five with an overwhelming victory. Perhaps they will come to the front again when they play Holy Cross on next Friday night.

The Literary Society held a program last Friday on which a debate was the specialty. The question debated on was, Resolved that the United States should adopt the British system of Radio control and operation. The negative side with James A. Stevens, Allen Kenyon and Mary C. Stevens debated against Kenneth Wohrley, Dorothy Mae Burns and Earl Heinbach on the affirmative.

The Senior class of H. H. S. are wearing their new class rings, which they received Friday. Mrs. Lilla Taber, musical teacher will hold a recital Monday afternoon Jan. 29. The program will be as follows:

Piano Solo—Mary Yates
Violin Solo—William Graves.
Guitar Solo—Gaines Stevens.
Violin Solo—George H. Riley.
Piano Solo—Mary C. Stevens.
Vocal—Selected Songs—Vera Goodridge.
Piano Solo—Helen Wahl.
Orchestra Selection—Wm. Graves.
Gaines Stevens, George H. Riley, Helen Wahl, Mary C. Stevens, Vera Goodridge, Mrs. Taber, Edwin Walton.

It will be held at 2:15 p. m. and everyone is invited.

FLORENCE SCHOOL NOTES

The Florence school children are rejoicing over winning the attractive loving cup offered by Miss Mary Louise Renaker for selling the most Tuberculosis Christmas seals. Since the contest was figured on an average per pupil the Florence school children had to sell many more seals than any of the other schools due to the large enrollment.

The Womanless Wedding was a great success and we want to thank all of those who took part and helped make it a success. During the latter part of March the same cast will put on a minstrel. This will possibly create more sensation than the Womanless Wedding. Everything points to a greater 1934.

The chapel program last Friday morning was quite a success. Mrs. Laubisch's pupils were in charge. A very interesting play was enjoyed by all present. The music for the occasion was furnished by the Sixth District school of Covington. This same orchestra will play for the ball game Friday night on which date the Nightengales and Knights will meet the Crittenden basketball team.

The Florence basketball team suffered a defeat Saturday night when they lost to the Highland basketball team. Highland held Newport to a five point margin. The Florence boys were defeated by the Highland team 37 to 19. Higgins and Kerns only played two quarters, due to personal fouls. We can see wonderful improvement in our teams and we believe that they are going to make a strong pull for the district tournament.

On Friday night the Knights defeated the O. M. I. basketball team 35 to 23.

Our debating team is progressing nicely and will meet the Burlington team Wednesday afternoon, and the New Haven team on Friday afternoon.

The Florence school will enroll in the Bible study contest again this year. Much interest was manifested last year and we are expecting still more this year. The Girl Reserve made enough points last year to secure a school certificate, while the boys missed their goal only a few points. This year we hope that both organizations will win school certificates.

The younger boys of our school are very much excited over becoming Boy Scouts. A meeting of the committee appointed by the Scout Master of this district is being held this week, and it looks as though the dream of those boys who want to become boy scouts will come true.

Don't forget the chapel program Friday morning. Dr. Crumes will conduct the exercise. On Friday, Feb. 2, the seventh grade will be in charge of the chapel program.

HAMILTON SCHOOL NOTES

All teams have their slumps and state periods. The Hamilton Purple Ramblers had their Friday night and were defeated by a much improved Verona team 27-21. Verona with the aid of Paul Coop, center, was never headed seriously until the last quarter, when the Ramblers rallied and came within three points of Verona, but it was to no avail.

St. James high school, of Ludlow comes to Hamilton next Friday night, Jan. 26. Be there and see the Ramblers and the Midgets play the boys from the big city. The St. James boys are now coached by a Xavier University graduate, so it ought to be good.

It seems that we all passed and so there was not as much groaning as we had anticipated, but we are surely glad that they (mid-term exams) came only once a year.

Brother Johnson had charge of chapel Friday morning and gave a talk entitled "Ambition" which was very appropriate and gave the students something worthwhile to think about.

The high school students who were on the honor roll for the entire first semester are:

Ninth Grade—Anna Marie Huff and L. Melvin Moore, Jr.
Tenth Grade—Hazel Lee Craig, and J. Wesley Palmer.

Twelfth Grade—Lucille Hodges.
The Midgets also played a fairly close game Friday night, but managed to defeat the Verona second team by 7 points, the score being 18-11.

A name was omitted from the honor roll of the Fifth Grade for December, last week, so we will now mention it—Willford Hodges.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

The debating team plans to debate with the Florence team Wednesday of this week. This group has been working very diligently of late with the help of their coach, Mrs. Fowler, and it should be mentioned here that a mistake was made in last week's news in saying that they made a trip to Covington. Instead it was to a library in Cincinnati and another trip was made on last Thursday.

Chapel will be given Friday afternoon by the Junior class. The main feature of the program will be a play entitled "The Obstinate Family." The members of the cast have been working on it for several weeks and it should be worth while. The attendance of patrons of the school is always greatly appreciated by both students and teachers. We urge a goodly number to be present.

Kenneth Griffith and Alberta Pettit are welcome back by their classmates in the 8th grade, after an absence of several days, as a result of illness.

Quite an unfortunate accident occurred Tuesday afternoon when Silas Bratcher, pupil in the second grade, suffered a "green-fractured" arm. He was rushed to Dr. M. A.

AMMOTH CAVE NATIONAL PARK SOON TO BE REALITY

Governor Laffoon announced recently that an allotment of $300,000 had been made to Kentucky by federal government for purchase of land needed to provide the acreage required to make the Mammoth Cave area a national park. This happy development is expected to result in conversion of the famous cavern area into a national park within the next year.

When the required acreage has been procured and taken into the national park system it is anticipated that a considerable expenditure will be made by the federal government in improving facilities of the park, constructing adequate hotel facilities, building roads and developing the area. Governor Laffoon suggests this expenditure may reach a million dollars.

Attorney General Bailey P. Wootton, legal adviser to the Mammoth Cave park commission, says that 33,000 acres of the 45,000 required in order to qualify as a national park, has been procured. Contracts have already been made for purchase of an additional four thousand acreage. The $300,000 grant of federal money will be utilized in acquiring necessary remaining acreage.

Mammoth Cave as a national park will become a highly valuable asset. Mammoth Cave is internationally known. When given the increased prestige and publicity which will follow its inclusion in the national park system, this unusual attraction will be the magnet which will draw thousands of tourists to Kentucky each year, result in incalculable sums of money being spent in the state by these visitors.

Governor Laffoon has long realized the importance of Mammoth Cave as a National park, as have those Kentuckians who a number of years initiated the movement which started acquisition of acreage for presentation to the federal government. Kentucky is fortunate that her most renowned natural wonder, so highly susceptible of development as a natural playground, is shortly to become a unit in the national park system. It will prove to be of exceptional commercial value.

DEVALUATION OF THE DOLLAR

President Roosevelt has asked congress for power to make periodic revaluation of the dollar within the range of 50 to 60 percent of its present gold content. The congress will enact the legislation sought and foremost financiers and economists anticipate that the effect will be highly stimulative in restoring prosperity.

This was but another logical move by the President to correct the hurtful effects of a defective monetary policy. He has moved as rapidly toward the objective announced in his message as appeared judicious.

The immediate effect should be to remove uncertainty from business, make more stable conditions. Radical inflationists and extreme hard money advocates will not be pleased with this action. It is apparent that the President is continuing to follow a middle-of-the-road policy, avoid either of the extremes, adhere to a logical and sensible course which offers hope of attaining the goal of restored prosperity.

No sensational advance in commodity prices may be expected to follow the devaluation policy. The gold purchasing plan on which the government embarked some months ago, has already had the effect of creating a 60 cent valuation for the dollar.

The price rise that may be anticipated should be gradual but steady. Industry should feel good effects as uncertainty of the currency program is removed. Business has been reluctant to make commitments, has regarded it as unsafe to buy raw materials in advance because the future of the dollar has been in doubt. Removal of this obstacle, fixing of a definite policy, may be expected to accelerate general business activity.

Speculation as to what would be the final decision of the President has been ended. He has announced his conclusions as to what is best for the nation and the congress will follow his leadership. It is reassuring to have from him the statement that "our national currency must be maintained as a sound currency." The nation is willing to trust his judgment, has faith in the wisdom of his plans.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Buster Brown, Oldham county farmer, is spreading marl with a regular lime spreader, using only two tons to the acre.

Checks for $9,473 were distributed to Union county wheat growers as first payment for AAA reduction.

Jay Young, Boyd county, is installing a field drainage system on his farm. Other county fields have been reclaimed recently.

WIN TWO GAMES

The Burlington Tomcats and Kittens took two games from Petersburg on the home floor last Friday night. The opening tilt was an easy win for the Kittens, but the Bulldogs showed surprising strength in the aftermath and the Tomcats were sorely pushed to win by a close 24-23 score. The score of the girls game was 39-19.

Cigarette Tax Graduated According To Different Prices Now Urged As Important Aid To Farmers

Will Congress at its present session substitute a graduated Federal tax on cigarettes for the present tax at a flat amount regardless of selling price? In other words, will Congress give relief from the present inequitable taxation whereby the lowest priced cigarette—the poor man's smoke—pays the highest rate of tax? It is said that the 10-cent cigarette is the highest-taxed article in America.

This question vitally affects the economic welfare of hundreds of thousands of tobacco farmers and tobacco factory workers in twelve southeastern states which grow cigarette tobacco.

It affects the pocketbooks of more than a million wholesale and small retail dealers throughout the country. It directly affects the smoking habits and pocketbooks of the more than twenty million Americans who use cigarettes.

Affects Entire Nation
And indirectly it affects the entire nation in no small degree, because more than $325,000,000.00 in Federal Government income is each year derived from the tax on cigarettes.

All of this raises this question of a tax graduated for the different price classes of cigarettes to a place in the front rank of economic importance.

Now about the manner and what it means. If Congress—reported to be friendly to the idea of a graduated tax—disregards the present flat tax of cents per package, regardless of selling price, and adopts in its stead a graduated tax, the result will place everybody all the way down the line because it will contribute considerable stimulation to general recovery, especially in the twelve cigarette tobacco states.

If Congress adopts the fair method of taxing now proposed it will help the farmer get a fair price for his tobacco, save consumers hundreds of millions of dollars each year in their smoke bill, and at the same time increase Government cigarette revenue.

Back in 1917 the Government put a flat rate tax of 6 cents a package on cigarettes as a war emergency revenue measure. For sundry reasons that tax has remained.

The Magic Rise
In the boom days of prosperity nobody seemed to notice or object to this tax—except perhaps cigarette manufacturers—and until early in 1932 the sale of cigarettes continued to mount even after the depression set in.

Then the sale, use and manufacture of cigarettes began to drop rapidly. This was unfortunate for the manufacturer, the dealer, the government revenues, and especially for the tobacco farmer.

About the middle of 1932 certain manufacturers began to make a good cigarette priced for sale to the consumer at 10-cents for a package of twenty. Almost magically the curve of cigarette sales and manufacture turned sharply upward.

The average American cigarette smoker found, to his possible surprise, that the 10-cent cigarette was an excellent cigarette, and its sale rapidly increased.

As a result of this mounting sale the price of all cigarettes formerly retailed at 15 cents came down, saving cigarette smokers more than $150,000,000.00 in one year. Government cigarette revenues were restored. Many thousand cigarette factory workers went back on the job and on the payroll.

And additional thousands of tobacco farmers found a better market for their product—both in volume and in dollars—than they had enjoyed for a long while.

Bad For Everyone
That was all very well for the moment, so to speak. Under conditions existing when the 10-cent cigarette was first produced the manufacturer, being content to operate at a very low profit, was able to bear the unfair tax of 85 percent on him as against a tax of only 18 percent on higher priced cigarettes.

But since that time expenses have increased and conditions developed which melt the thin ice in the way of profit on which the 10-cent cigarette business was being operated. With no incentive to make this low-priced cigarette he cannot continue its manufacture.

If he does quit, the consequences for farmers, for workers, and for all others in lesser degree will be bad, not to say disastrous.

Ask Favorable Action
The Federal tax on certain other tobacco products—cigars, for example—is graduated according to retail price. The 5-cent cigar is taxed less than the 10-cent cigar, and the 10-center less than the 25-cent cigar, and so on.

A similar form of taxation for cigarettes, with the rate graduated for different classes according to price—from the 25-cent to the 10-cent-and-up cigarette—is now urged by both farm and labor interests.

They declare it is no more than just and equitable, and they point to its economic importance in asking all farmers and workers to demand favorable congressional action on the proposal.

BRIEF CASES

BY BAREFAX

My dear readers:

You are probably wondering by now why this column is printed in black ink. We are in mourning! Yes, in mourning! The Purple Scramblers, playing a two-man defense (and where was the offense?) were beaten by Verona 21-21 in the most game of basketball ever played at Hamilton. It is a well founded rumor that the Mid-gas will finish the Scrambler's schedule unless something drastic happens soon.

The agony column has this week a troubled sophomore and a 'chiseled' Here you are:

Barefax—I am sorely troubled. I am deeply interested in—and sit by him whenever possible. I wave to him every night as he goes home. He seems gracious but very distant. Am I too bold? Are people beginning to notice? A Sophomore.

Sophomore—Possibly his 'distance' is because of someone else. You will be wise in remembering: Love is blind and cannot see. The pretty foolies that they themselves commit.

Mr. Barefax—I sent a dollar to in Eagle Pass, Texas. I have heard nothing since then. Do you think he received my dollar? Was I discreet in doing this?—Anxious.

Anxious—He has your letter and dollar and is now probably across the border. The next time you have a dollar to throw away give it to "The Hamilton Home for wooly ball players" in care of Barefax.

Here is the all-Boone county basketball team for 1933 as compiled by Fumble N. Foulm of Croona-Croona (the great prison team from New York):

First team—A. Jaylor, "Raz" Berry, forwards; Hewent Amith, center; I. Plubbard, O. Lodi guards of Hamilton.

Second team—Spott, Florence; Swayback, forward, New Haven; Coupe, center of Verona; Brittle, guard, New Haven; Blouse, guard, Burlington.

Excuse typewritter errors. Riddles—we take great pain in presenting these for your displeasure.

A. What was Sue looking for Friday afternoon?

B. Why was 'Dot' so happy last week?

C. Why did Don have that far-away look in his eye at the game Friday evening?

D. What are pedal indigestions?—We have an idea, have you?

Next week we will have "Death at the Curb," by Wright N. Wrong and also a simple way to earn 13 cancelled American three-cent stamps.

We now present, through the courtesy of The Daily Blur:

By Reed M. N. Wepe

Element-Women

Symbol-Woe

Discovered by Adam I in the year 4000 B. C., wandering about in a forest eating apples (hence the symbol).

Occurrence—Is found in a free state; chiefly where men exist.

Physical Properties—Colors, shades of white, black, brown, red and yellow: Always in a disguised condition due to a coating of powder or a film of paint (replenished at unexpected moments).

Composition Material—Boil at nothing and may freeze at any moment. Melts when properly treated. Very bitter if not used correctly.

Chemical Properties—Extremely active, possesses extreme affinity for gold, platinum or silver. Violent reaction when left alone by man. Ability to absorb all kinds of expensive food. Turns green when placed next to a better specimen. Ages very rapidly. Note—highly explosive in inexperienced hands.

"Pray how do you figure that out, Madame? As a matter of fact it is preposterous." Mabeuse's war cry, his tenderest spot, was touched.

"Consider the situation dispassionately, Monsieur, and I am sure you will change your mind. You loudly announce your affair with Miss Phelps. You leave your home (which is a technical desertion of your wife, I may point out). She demands money from Miss Phelps as a bribe for a broken heart. Now, whether the case is settled in court or out of it, who gets the money? Your wife—and her lawyer. Not you. Not a cent goes into your hands. You have no claim on a penny of it. You must appreciate that point. And, with the money secured what happens? The pretty lady moves on to Reno and another mate, whether Mayer or Pulaski can matter little to you."

"You do not understand everything, Monsieur." Mabeuse looked at Stone from under bent brows. "Once this is over, I shall effect a reconciliation with my wife."

"When immediately both of you would be arrested for blackmail," Smif assured him, "which is a criminal offense, Monsieur Mabeuse."

Mabeuse for some time had been growing increasingly unhappy. Many memories had been awakened that corroborated what he heard. His temper, which had been sizzling, rose to a boil when again Stone added his word.

"Altogether, Mabeuse, you are elected the goat."

The room was small but the artist began to pace rapidly up and down the contracted space and to mutter to himself: "I am to be the goat, am I? I am to lose all and gain nothing." He paused in front of Smif and pointed an accusing finger at her. "But you, Madame, you trifle with me. You know that there will be no suit. The rich father and mother of Made-moiselle, they will never permit that she should figure in the nasty little picture papers."

"Can't you see that that has nothing to do with it so far as your interests are concerned? I assure you that my advice to Mr. and Mrs. Phelps would be to force the case into the open—give it the widest publicity possible. Miss Phelps would lose nothing by publicity. But you would cut a ridiculous figure. You would be laughed out of court."

The threat of ridicule was even more painful to Monsieur Mabeuse than the threat of prison.

"Moreover," Smif went on pitilessly, "I made it plain to you before that even if money were to be paid against my advice, you stood no chance of handling any of it."

"What about my wife's share?" "Forget it," said Stone. "Just about that time you wouldn't have any wife. It would be Reno for her and then probably Hollywood."

This struck fire. "Did he say so?" Mabeuse cried. "No, no, that was for me. Henri Mayer promised to get me on the films in Hollywood. I do not consent for her. I will not have my Trude in pictures. She is too pleased with herself already."

Smif and Stone exchanged triumphant glances.

"I guess that spills the beans, my good chap," Stone told him. "There are two of us here to swear to what you said. It's prison for all of you if we prosecute."

"But Mrs. Mason promised that you would never do that," the man protested weakly, sinking into a chair and clasping his head in his hands.

There was an exchange of glances between his visitors. Smif drew a long breath and came to a sudden resolution.

"If you tell us the whole plan from the beginning," she said, "I may find a way of escape for you. At present you seem to be in a terrible hole."

Apparently Mabeuse reached the same conclusion Smif had, for he finally began to speak in a flat voice which showed more clearly than his abandonment of all bluster, that he felt himself to be at their mercy.

"The whole thing came about simply enough. I met Mrs. Mason first when she was working with a charity organization for the aid of my poor nation after the war. She became interested in my portraits and volunteered to help me find commissions if I paid her a percentage. At first I did well; then hard times struck the country and luxuries were cut off. One day we were talking about where all the money had gone. Mrs. Mason said she had cousins who had millions, and, quite in jest, we worked out a plan to get from them an amount they would never miss. Pulaski is a sharp lawyer, and at first he refused to have anything to do with it. Later, Trude talked to him and he consented."

"That was when he saw that they'd be secure if they turned it from pure blackmail into a case where the wife actually believed that she was wronged and demanded legal release from her husband as a consequence!"

cried Stone. "I was right, Mabeuse. You are elected the goat."

Stone had drawn his chair up to a little table and, taking a fountain pen from his pocket, was writing busily on a sheet of drawing paper.

"The thing for you to do," Smif advised the artist, "is to go back to your wife at once. Tell her you found out that she was being headed for prison, not for Hollywood, by her friends Mayer and Pulaski. Tell her you've saved her by taking all the blame on yourself."

Stone was waving his finished product in the air to dry the ink, but put it back on the table and handed his pen to Mabeuse.

"Now if you'll read what I've written and sign it," he took up his role, "I'll write you out an order for the miniature you're working on and a large portrait of Madame Saitou as well, which is to be done in the style of another miniature."

This had been so part of their careful plan and Smif protested.

"Of course Mabeuse doesn't deserve any leniency from us," Stone ignored her interruption, and went on sternly: "It happens that I've seen work of his that pleases me, and what I want is a really lifelike portrait of my great-grandmother. You'll pose for it. I suppose you have no objection to that, Smif?"

"None whatever," she acknowledged meekly, "only heaven knows when I'll find time to sit."

"I'd suggest some of the hours you waste on Doctor Blanton," Stone said maliciously, and at once turned to Mabeuse, who, on the strength of such an unexpected boon, was beginning to revive. "Brace up, be a man, forget your criminal past. What you want now is panache. Go home at once and act the master of the house as if you were a star at Hollywood."

They left Mabeuse expanding under this conception of the part he was to play and gathering his few belongings together preparatory to going home.

"What about Mrs. Mason?" Stone asked, as they walked away from the house.

"Nothing about her," Smif said positively. "Her claws are clipped. Besides, I know that Pam has had rather a bad jolt to her ideals in another case this year and I mean to spare her this. Which reminds me—whom do you know well, besides Captain Miles, among the men who came over for Cintra's wedding?"

CHAPTER X

As the summer wore away, Smif grew increasingly weary of her chosen occupation. Again and again she made acknowledgment to herself that it fell far short of furnishing the human interest and the thrills she had hoped for and confidently expected. Meanwhile her family and acquaintances were drifting back to the city.

First to arrive (this cure completed) were Charles and Susan Phelps; and Pam at once told her mother all that she herself knew of the predicament from which Smif had extricated her.

Susan was the earliest of Smif's visitors the next day, and those who saw her only as the very dignified and distant hostess of her formal parties would not have recognized the grateful woman who kissed her friend fervently with tears in her eyes.

"There are no words to tell you our gratitude," she said chokily. "It would have broken our hearts to have come back and found Pam altered in any way. In our circumstances, it's not easy to bring up a girl and keep her the simple straightforward child Pam has always been. The rich have their own problems, and we have been very proud of our success with Pam. I think she is as good an excuse for our existence as a fine painting or any other masterpiece. I don't know how we would have met this menace had we been here. I fear we would have fallen into a panic."

"That's what the wretches hoped for," said Smif grimly. "They thought an immediate settlement was sure."

"It seems to me it would have been as dangerous a lowering of Pam's standards to permit her to pay blackmail as it would have been to trail her through the publicity of a trial."

"I went over and over all the possibilities, and I couldn't decide which would be the worst," Smif confessed.

"I realized that it wasn't such a weak scheme after all, when I began to suspect that Mr. Pulaski had persuaded Mrs. Mabeuse to enter suit for divorce simultaneously with the filing of papers in the alienation suit. That would take it out of the blackmailing class, legally, I mean. Actually it never was anything else. Monsieur et Madame are reunited and living happily together now."

"Why did Mrs. Mason take the child to such a person for lessons?" Susan, who was no fool, peered up at Smif through her Oxford.

"She may have thought him a good teacher," Smif returned, but she avoided Susan's piercing little gray eyes. "He's really a talented idiot. He has painted an extremely distinguished portrait of me for Stone."

"And who may Stone be?" Susan inquired, amazed. "Why have I never heard of him before?"

Smif laughed. "This was a question she was prepared to parry and it carried the conversation safely away from Carola Mason."

"Stone is a distant cousin of ours. I've grown quite fond of him and I mean you to meet him soon. He didn't really want a picture of me, so stop looking unappealing things at me, it happens that he has a miniature of an ancestor, which certainly is remarkably like me, and he decided to have a life-size copy of it made. Knowing I could trust him, I had asked him to help me out in that affair of Pam's; and that's how he came in contact with Monsieur Mabeuse. I agreed to pose because I felt sure an enlargement of a miniature was doomed to be a silly footling failure. A miniature could be copied from a painting possibly, but a worthwhile result could not be reached working the other way round."

"Hm," said Susan, and that was all. For the time that closed the matter.

Smif had devoted more than a little thought to what she was to do with her business. She hardly saw how she could live in Virginia and continue her work in New York.

Passionately she told herself that she could not give up Virginia. She was not called upon to allow her business to rule her out of all the happiness she had looked forward to at Loveleya when her duty to Cintra was done. In her mind she tried to build up satisfactory compromises, none of which was convincing. Once at home, she knew too well that she would be quipped, amazed. "Why have I never heard of him before?"

Smif laughed. "This was a question she was prepared to parry and it carried the conversation safely away from Carola Mason."

He didn't really want a picture of me, so stop looking unappealing things at me, it happens that he has a miniature of an ancestor, which certainly is remarkably like me, and he decided to have a life-size copy of it made. Knowing I could trust him, I had asked him to help me out in that affair of Pam's; and that's how he came in contact with Monsieur Mabeuse. I agreed to pose because I felt sure an enlargement of a miniature was doomed to be a silly footling failure. A miniature could be copied from a painting possibly, but a worthwhile result could not be reached working the other way round."

"Hm," said Susan, and that was all. For the time that closed the matter.

Smif had devoted more than a little thought to what she was to do with her business. She hardly saw how she could live in Virginia and continue her work in New York.

Passionately she told herself that she could not give up Virginia. She was not called upon to allow her business to rule her out of all the happiness she had looked forward to at Loveleya when her duty to Cintra was done. In her mind she tried to build up satisfactory compromises, none of which was convincing. Once at home, she knew too well that she would be

Smif laughed. "This was a question she was prepared to parry and it carried the conversation safely away from Carola Mason."

News Review of Current Events the World Over

President Asks for Nationalization of Gold Supply—Not Yet Ready to Fix Exact Value of Dollar—Carlos Mendieta Is Given Cuban Presidency.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT sent to congress his long-awaited message on monetary matters, and it should be in a measure reassuring to business and finance. He asked that the gold supply of the country be nationalized and that his powers be redefined to enable periodic revaluation of the dollar within a range of 50 to 60 per cent of the present gold content.

He already had the power to devalue the dollar down to 50 per cent, but he does not do so yet, saying that "because of world uncertainties, I do not believe it desirable in the public interest that an exact value be now fixed." He added that careful study had led him to the conclusion that any revaluation at more than 60 per cent would not be in the public interest.

The President asked full power to take over the last outstanding supplies of gold in the country, much of which belongs to the federal reserve banks. The legislation he requested, he explained, "places the right, title and ownership of our gold reserves in the government itself; it makes clear the government's ownership." Any added dollar value of the country's stock of gold which would result from any decrease of the gold content of the dollar which may be made in the public interest.

The profit that may result from cutting the gold content, the President proposed should be used to set up a two-billion-dollar fund for purchases and sales of gold, foreign exchange and government securities.

No further recommendations concerning silver were made in the message, the President saying he believed "we should gain more knowledge of the results of the London agreement and of our other monetary measures."

In talking with the correspondents, Mr. Roosevelt explained once more that the objective of his monetary program is to bring the purchasing power of the dollar back to the level at which the average debts of the country were incurred, so that these debts may be paid off with a dollar equal in value to that at which the debt was incurred. He made it clear that his program does not call for a resort to greenback currency.

Immediately after the reading of the President's message, Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida, chairman of the senate banking and currency committee, introduced the administration's bill to effect the monetary changes proposed. He called his committee together the next day to consider it, and Secretary Morgenthau was the first to be heard in argument for the legislation asked.

Only two Democratic senators came out in the open promptly in opposition to the President's program, Carter Glass of Virginia and Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma. Both declared that the appropriation of the reserve banks' gold was unlawful and immoral. Most of the Republicans were cautious in their expressions of opinion.

However, Attorney General Homer Cummings rendered to the senate banking and currency committee a formal opinion upholding that section of the proposed bill.

"The monetary gold stock (of the federal reserve system) may be taken by the government in the exercise of its right of eminent domain," the attorney general's opinion declared. "Such power," he went on, "extends to every form of property required for public use."

Gov. Eugene Black of the reserve board was heard by the committee in closed session and Senator Fletcher said Black was unchanged in his opposition to the seizure of the federal reserve gold and the loss of the profit which would accrue from the devaluation of the dollar.

Senator McAdoo of California was veraciously reported as sharing the views of Senators Glass and Gore, but later sought to silence the rumor, asserting that he had not yet made up his mind.

"WHO is president of Cuba this morning?" asks the man in the street, and there is reason for his uncertainty. At this writing the head of the island republic is Col. Carlos Mendieta, conservative leader of the Nationalists and presumably acceptable to the administration in Washington. Ramon Grau San Martin, unable to hold on any longer, resigned and some of the factions united in choosing as his successor Carlos Hevia, secretary of agriculture in Grau's cabinet and a graduate of Annapolis Naval academy. Hevia actually was sworn in before the Supreme court, but he lasted only one day. Then Col. Fulgencio Batista, powerful commander of the army, took command of the situation. There was a loud demand that he resign his military post; a strike to force this was started by Antonio Gutierrez, late secretary of war and navy, and Hevia ordered that Fulgencio get out.

But the army leader promptly brought 3,000 of his troops from Santa Clara province to reinforce the 5,000 at Camp Columbia, on the outskirts of Havana, and compelled Hevia to resign. He then declared that Mendieta was the only man capable of continuing the junta's revolutionary program without the extreme measures that had prevented recognition by the United States; that, he, Batista, recognized the costly mistake the junta had made in installing Grau and would now rectify it. He ordered government employees to remain at work on pain of losing their jobs, but the strike went into effect far enough to tie up Havana's power, light, gas and transportation systems. Batista ordered the arrest of Gutierrez, whom he held responsible for this. A bomb exploded near Mendieta's residence but no one was injured.

Mendieta was assured the support of the Nationalists he leads, the political societies ABC and OCCR and the newer revolutionary organizations. Moreover, he had performed the highly difficult feat of reuniting the army and the navy. They had been split apart previously over the breach between Gutierrez and Batista.

GERMANY'S great church quarrel goes on unabated and the Evangelical pastors are still determined that their religion shall not be nationalized. Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, who is a confidant of Chancellor Hitler, issued a decree forbidding pastors to criticize the Nazi Protestant church administration from the pulpits under pain of dismissal from the church. But the rebellious ones, organized as the Pastors' Emergency league, defied Doctor Mueller and for the second time read to their congregations a manifesto demanding his resignation. It was up to the councils of the churches to enforce the reichsbishop's decree, but several of the councils declared openly they would not do so.

Bishop Mueller showed some inclination to recede from his position, but the militant Nazi German Christian pastors brought great pressure to bear, telling him they would support him only so long as he stuck by his decrees. The bishop also seeks to annul all church laws passed in 1933 so he can proclaim new ones.

Reverend Doctor Richter, who is highly considered by President Von Hindenburg, declared in the Berlin cathedral that "a storm is brewing in Germany—a fight between Christianity and heathendom." In this contest, however, Hitler appears to have much more influence than the aged president, who is more and more becoming a figurehead.

RESIGNATIONS from the Democratic national committee seem to be in order and some have already been received. The President let it be known that he did not approve of members of that body opening law offices in Washington and apparently trading on their supposed influence with the administration. Robert Jackson announced his resignation as secretary and committeeman from New Hampshire, and Frank O. Walker said he had resigned as treasurer in order to devote full time to his work as chairman of the President's national executive council. J. Bruce Kremer, resigning law in the Capital, resigned some weeks ago as member for Montana. Postmaster General Jim Farley, it was said, wants to quit as national chairman, but Mr. Roosevelt may not permit this. Arthur Mullen, committeeman from Nebraska and vice chairman of the committee, and Orman Ewing, member from Utah, both have established law offices in the Capital and it would not be surprising if they resigned from the national committee.

SENATORS BORAH of Idaho, Norris of Nebraska and Nye of North Dakota, all independent Republicans whose support has been counted on generally by the administration, have started a concerted attack on the NRA, charging that its codes foster monopolies and result in forcing the small dealers out of business. Their fight is not against the President and his policies, but against Gen. Hugh Johnson, NRA administrator, upon whom they place the blame for the faults they say have developed.

PRACTICALLY without opposition, a measure was put through the house and senate extending the life of the Reconstruction Finance corporation for another year and providing it with $350,000,000 of new capital. There was little debate, and in the house only Louis T. McFadden of Pennsylvania voted against the bill.

BIRTH control has been put up to a both congress and the President. A bill designed to promote it by repealing certain clauses of the penal code has been introduced and hearings started; and a committee headed by Mrs. Thomas N. Hepburn of Connecticut and Mrs. Margaret Sangor carried to the White House a resolution from the birth control and national recovery conference in Washington asking Mr. Roosevelt's support for the measure.

ITALO BALBO, the bearded Italian air marshal who commanded the great mass flight from Italy to Chicago and back last summer and thereby became too popular to suit Premier Mussolini, has made his peace with the Duce and has assumed his new duties as the governor of Libya in north Africa. He crossed the Mediterranean in state on the new cruiser Alberto di Giussano with another cruiser in escort, and when he landed was received by all the Italian officials in the colony and a colorful gathering of the native troops.

Balbo, who is just thirty-seven years old, replaces Marshal Pietro Badoglio as Libyan governor. While a new line of activity, it will be a job with an opening for him, for Mussolini wants to make Africa in time an outlet for Italian emigration.

Balbo will keep up his interest in aviation, even though he is just governor of the sandy North African coast.

REPUBLICAN members of the house ways and means committee proposed two important tax reforms. A constitutional amendment authorizing the taxation of federal and state government bonds was suggested by Representative Allen T. Treadway, with the statement that there are now some $40,000,000,000 of such securities outstanding and free from taxation.

Representative Isaac Bacharach proposed the restoration to the federal tax laws of a credit against earned income. His plan, Mr. Bacharach declared, would lighten materially the tax burden of the small salaried class without seriously cutting into present income tax revenues.

TWO thousand or more persons were killed and 10,000 injured by violent earthquakes that shook all parts of India. The full measure of the disaster will not be known for some time, but airplane surveys revealed that many cities and towns had been virtually destroyed. In some regions the devastation was increased by floods resulting from the temblors. Communication system were shattered and there was great danger of pestilence and starvation among the survivors.

PUERTO RICO has a new governor who may please the islanders better than did Robert H. Gore. He is Gen. Blanton Winship, former judge advocate general of the army, and a man of experience in insular affairs. He served in Cuba and the Philippines as an adviser to the highest American officials in those parts. Also he was a military aide to President Coolidge. His home town is Macon, Ga. Mr. Gore, whose administration was bitterly and constantly attacked by island politicians, resigned, stating his reason was ill health.

President Roosevelt also selected a new chief of the weather bureau in Washington in the person of Willis G. Gregg. He succeeds Dr. Charles F. Marvin.

CAMILLE CHAUTEMPS, fighting desperately to save his French government after the great Bayonne pawnshop scandal, promised the chamber of deputies to clean up that affair, and thereupon was given a vote of confidence, 360 against 229. The vote came on the government's opposition to the creation of a parliamentary commission to investigate the collapse of the Bayonne institution, the death of its founder, Serge (Handsome Alex) Stavis, and the part several deputies have accused high officials of taking in the affair. The premier insisted that such a commission would not get to the bottom of the charges.

The premier promised to investigate the affair personally and to spare no names. During the heated debate he admitted there had been looseness and poor functioning of various services, but denied the charges of governmental and police corruption. The opposition deputies were furious and there were open declarations that the country faced a dictatorship. Chautemps replied vigorously and made the assertion that a coup had been prepared several days previously to put the government in the hands of a few "energetic" men to act as a directory.

CHINESE Nationalist forces after severe fighting captured Foochow, the headquarters of the rebels in Fukien province, and it was reported that negotiations were proceeding to settle the dispute between the National government and the leaders of the rebel movement. There was great disorder in Foochow, for all the officers of the Nineteenth route army except its commander, Gen. Tsing Ting-kai, had fled and the leaderless soldiers were running wild. On the request of Vice Consul Gordon Burke, an American naval party was ordered ashore from the gunboat Tulsa to protect 144 Americans in the city.

Always Can Find New "Firing Line"

No Real Need to End All Activities With the Closing Years.

"I always thought," said Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, when he was eighty years old, "that when I got to be four-score I could wrap up my life in a scroll, tie a pink ribbon around it, put it away in a drawer, and go around doing the things I wanted to do. But I learned that when you have taken one trench there is always a new firing line beyond."

That was when he was eighty—deciding that there was always a new firing line! So we might guess—if so many Washington correspondents had not said it of him—that at eighty and past eighty, this man was interesting, he was living to the fullest extent, and he was one of the few of whom people would hazard the opinion that he was happy. And when, near ninety-one, he finally retired from the Supreme court bench, what he did to remain happy was probably to live as nearly as possible the same busy kind of life he had always led.

No one pitied Justice Holmes for not being able to retire, and, at eighty, "do the things I wanted to do." The things we have always wanted to do are very likely, with most of us, to be food for just a summer, and to pall before a vacation time is over. What we all want to do is to live fully as long as we live, to be doers and givers as long as we live, to live with zest for ourselves and interest for others.

That was one advantage that men, in past generations, had over women. They stayed interesting longer, because they stayed longer, as a rule, in a vortex of activity. They were not, in middle life, like most of their wives, left high and dry with the privilege of deciding what it was they wanted to do. There were always too many things which they were called upon to do. And that is the great boon for women in this day and age—the opportunity for interests and activities which do not end when their children grow up, interests and even work outside the home which give them into the later years what the French call "raison d'être"—a reason for being. Rather we should say of these activities that what they give us is a reason for being busy, for being necessary, for being important, for being interested in every day, and therefore, for being interesting—and happy.

Not least among the good wishes I extend to my readers for the coming year is: May you continue to find "always a new firing line" ahead! © Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

MENTAL PROCESS

It is at times of greatest stress that the human mind rises to its sublimest heights, and this was well exemplified by the Peruvian political fugitive who escaped from his antagonists by disguising himself as a street vendor of Yo-Yo. Whether his mind turned automatically to this subterfuge, because the process of Yo-Yo reminded him how political fortunes also ascend and descend by the mere manipulation of a piece of string, the newspaper report does not divulge. We can imagine this desperate man, not knowing where to turn for spiritual and mental comfort, seeing a mystic symbolism in the flinging Yo-Yo as it climbed dizzily to the level of his waistcoat and then fell sickeningly to his boots. So, he must have thought, do miserable politicians climb and fall, propelled by a mere length of elastic.—Palestine Post, Jerusalem.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose," a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it! And the habitual use of irritating salts, or of powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills and tablets may prove injurious.

A week with a properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will tell you a lot. A few weeks' time, and your bowels can be "as regular as clockwork." Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child. ## Now! Ease Sore Throat Instantly!

Remember: Only Medicine Helps Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes!

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN—to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles.

CUTICURA SOAP for sensitive skins. Then start using Cuticura Soap now. Containing medicated, emollient and healing properties, it soothes and comforts tender, sensitive skins and does much to keep them clear, healthy and in a vigorous condition. PRICE 25c. The Neighboring Spirit

If I should see
A neighbor languishing in sore distress
And I should turn and leave him comfortless
When I might be
A message of hope and happiness—
How could I ask to have what I denied
In my own hour of bitterness supplied?

If I might share neighbor's load the dirty way,
And I should turn and walk alone that day,
How could I dare
When in the evening watch I knelt to pray
To ask for help to bear my pain and loss,
If I had not heeded my neighbor's cross?

If I might sing
A little song to cheer a neighbor's fainting heart
And I could seal my lips and set apart
When I might bring
A bit of sunshine for life's aches and smart;
How could I hope to have my grief relieved,
If I kept silent when my neighbors grieved?

And so I know
That day is lost wherein I failed to lend
A helping hand to some wayfaring neighbor,
But if it should
A burden lighten by the cheer I sent,
Then do I hold the golden hours well spent
And lay me down to sleep in sweet content.

—Rev. C. A. Spaulding.

590 CONTRACTS

NOW ON FILE IN TOBACCO SIGN-UP CAMPAIGN—LIST REPRESENTS 84 PERCENT OF TOTAL ACREAGE IN COUNTY—NEW RULING MADE BY THE AAA.

Boone county tobacco growers need not sell their low grade tobacco this year but leave it at home and have both pounds and value appraised according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. This is a recent new ruling by the AAA which formerly required growers to deliver their crop to the warehouse to receive credit for weight.

Thirty growers signed contracts the past week bringing the total to date of 590 contracts covering 2,270 acres or 84 percent of the acreage for the entire county.

Beaver community reports lead the county with a 97 percent sign-up reported. Burlington reports an 87 percent sign-up. The contracts by committees include the following: Burlington 75, Verona 70, Florence 69, Walton 65, Union 62, Grant 57, Hebron 55, Hamilton 54, Petersburg 40 and Beaver 33. Twelve additional contracts are filed for growers signing contracts for different farms.

The sign-up time is being extended previous to the receiving of official election papers for the Community Control Boards. There are at present approximately 75 growers in Boone county whose contracts have not reached the County Agent's office. If those growers of this group expecting to sign contracts will do so at the earliest possible date it will greatly facilitate work at the office preliminary to turning the contracts over to the County Control Board.

The speed of the sign-up has exceeded the expectations of both the county and community campaign committees. Those growers turning in contracts the past week to the County Agent's office include: Mrs. Kate Madden, A. T. Hunt, Russell Vest, C. T. Sahlfeld, W. M. Smith, Ben Nichting, Harvey Senour, Miss Eunie B. Willis, Est. Mrs. Mary V. Gaines, William Ryle, L. E. Love, Huey Aylor, Miss Ina V. Rouse, Martin L. Sturgeon, Blackburn & Utz, W. S. Huey, A. S. Burham, Melvin E. Jones, Elmer Carpenter, Thomas E. Randall, Mrs. Angeline Newman, Garnett Clore, Smith Bros., M. F. Rouse, N. R. Harris, W. H. Rucker, W. J. Farrell, G. W. Baker, Mrs. Lillie Hous-ton, W. O. Rector.

MRS. LOUISE THOMPSON

Mrs. Louise Thompson, aged 67 years, passed away Sunday at her home in Florence, Ky., after an illness of five weeks. The remains were removed to the Tallaferrero Funeral Home for preparation.

Funeral services were conducted at the Florence M. E. church Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, by the Rev. G. B. Traynor, pastor, in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends after which she was laid to rest in Florence cemetery.

Mrs. Thompson is survived by one son Arden Thompson, two daughters, Mrs. Roy C. Lutes and Mrs. Gibbs, besides a host of friends.

The pallbearers were Louis Houston, T. E. McHenry, Clarence Norman, Gordon Lalle, Lloyd Osborn and C. L. Gaines.

Funeral Director Philip Tallaferrero had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Easton and Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Huey were Sunday guests of J. O. Huey and family.

Dr. M. A. Yelton is driving a new Ford V-8, which he purchased from C. W. Myers Motor Car Co., at Florence.

JOHN THOMAS EDWARDS

John Thomas Edwards, aged 67 years passed away Thursday at his home, Carlisle Ave., Elsmere, Ky., after a long illness. The remains were removed to the Tallaferrero Funeral Home for preparation.

M. Edwards is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna Edwards, one son, Orin Edwards, three daughters, Mrs. Owen Hoard, Mrs. Kenneth Aylor, and Mrs. Sam Aylor, ten grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends. He was a deacon of the Elsmere Baptist church, and six of the deacons of the church acted as pallbearers.

Funeral services were conducted at the Elsmere Baptist church at 11 o'clock Monday morning by the Rev. J. A. Miller, assisted by Rev. Johnson and Rev. Dunaway, after which he was laid to rest in Highland cemetery.

Funeral director Philip Tallaferrero had charge of the funeral arrangements.

SHRINE CHANTERS TO PERFORM AT WALTON

Members of the Walton lodge F. and M. are urging their brother Masons and sisters of the Eastern Star to attend an elaborate program of music at the Walton gymnasium on Thursday night, February 1st. The program is being sponsored by the Shrine Chanters, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and it is said that they boast some of the best talent in this section. There are 36 selected stars in the group. There will be no admission and don't forget the date—to-night, (Thursday).

TYPHOID

CAUSES UNTIMELY DEATH OF EMELYN MCCORD CAMP AT HER HOME IN HODGENVILLE, KY. — FUNERAL SERVICES HELD SUNDAY.

This entire section of the county was thoroughly shocked and deeply grieved last Saturday morning when news of the untimely death of Emelyn McCord Camp reached her home at Petersburg.

Mrs. Camp had been ill with typhoid for several weeks and was apparently on a probable road to recovery when a thyroid complication set in resulting in her sad death.

The deceased young woman leaves a depressed father, mother, husband and infant daughter, besides other relatives and friends that are almost numberless.

She was born 27 years ago, the daughter of L. H. and Byrd McCord. She attended school at Petersburg, graduating there under the principalship of Prof. R. H. Carter, a life-long friend of the family. Four years later she graduated from Transylvania with two friends from babyhood, Misses Cordelia Berkshire and Margaret Walton.

Following her graduation she took up teaching as assistant principal at Petersburg, which career was interrupted by her marriage to Frank Camp about three years ago.

She answered the final summons at her home at Hodgenville, Ky., where Mr. Camp is an instructor in the high school and athletic coach. Her charming personality, so well recognized in this locality, was further attested by the large number of friends from the section of the state in which she died who made the long journey to attend her funeral services.

These very impressive services were conducted at the Petersburg Christian church of which she was a member by Rev. R. H. Carter, the minister under whom she united with the church, who instructed her in high school, who performed her nuptial rites and whose appropriate and consoling remarks ushered her thru the portals of her final resting place. Six members of the Hodgenville High School basketball team, coached by Mr. Camp, acted as pallbearers.

The bereaved family have the profound sympathy of the entire community in which she lived and was laid to rest.

Rev. P. C. Gillespie, wife and daughter, of Richmond, Ky., called on Mrs. Nettie Hughes here on Wednesday of last week. Rev. Gillespie who formerly was pastor of the Burlington M. E. church, has many friends here.

CHICAGO TRIP

WON BY BOONE COUNTY 4-H TOBACCO GROWER — JAMES FRANKLIN BROWN SELLS CROP FOR $19.69 AT COVINGTON LAST SATURDAY.

James Franklin Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Brown, of Limaburg, and member of Burlington Blue Ribbon 4-H club, won the Grand Championship of the Northern Kentucky 4-H tobacco show held at Kenton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse at Covington, on last Saturday, January 27th.

James Franklin's crop was scored on its exhibit as a whole on the floor, the sale price, the premiums awarded on various grades, and on his project record book. He scored a total of 95 points in his project. His crop sold for an average of $19.69 per hundred pounds.

The prizes for the Grand Champion awards includes a trip to the National 4-H Club Congress held at Chicago during the International Fat Stock show, a trip to Junior Week at the University of Kentucky to be held next June and $17.00 in prize money on his various exhibits. The trip to Chicago is awarded by the Kenton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse.

The county crop awards in the show went to James Franklin Brown, first; George Melvin, of New Haven Boosters Club, second; Audrey Knox of New Haven Boosters Club, third; Harold C. White, Grant True Blue Club fourth; Margaret Johnson of the Waltonians Club, fifth; William Ryle Presser, Benjamin Goodridge, Marvin Long, Robert Grant and Joseph Rouse each receiving honorable mention and special premiums.

The grade awards went to Marvin Long, Benjamin Goodridge, George Melvin and Harold C. White.

The show was well attended and considered a success. Members from Boone, Kenton, Campbell and Grant counties took part in the event in which 41,400 pounds were sold.

The Boone county 4-H clubs extend their hearty appreciations to the splendid cooperation of the Kenton Loose Leaf Tobacco Warehouse and especially wish to thank Ernest L. Becker, Mr. Hamilton and M. McElroy, who did all in their power to cooperate and make the sale a success.

FLORENCE SCHOOL NOTES

We were informed just before press time that the Florence school notes would be too late for this week. They will appear, however, as customary, next week.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

FARM ACCOUNT RECORDS FINISHED

Fourteen farm account records were completed by Boone county farmers the past week with the aid of Mr. R. E. Procter, field agent in Farm Management from the College of Agriculture. Six additional records are being completed for analysis and summary by the College of Agriculture.

Complete farm account records represents the most important job on a farm. The farm account record backed by a complete farm account analysis represents to the farmer what the compass means to the ship at sea. It points the way to the right port or road to the most profitable farm set up.

Many farmers become discouraged in the time of low earnings and do not wish to keep records on their farm operations. This represents a case similar to a man sick with some dreaded disease and does not want to know what is the matter with him or what will prove a cure.

Farm account books are furnished free of charge by the College of Agriculture to farmers who agree to keep complete farm account records in the Farm Account Project. These cooperators receive a free analysis of their farm business at the end of the year, based on the operations of similar farms in the county. Those farmers interested in this work should notify the County Agent immediately.

4-H CLUB ORGANIZATION 1934
Mr. E. E. Fish, field agent in club work will be in Boone county on Thursday and Friday of this week to assist in organizing the Boone County 4-H club for 1934.

Many project groups have already started their work. Plans are for 1934 to represent the 4-H motto, "Make the Best Better," and for 1934 to be still better than 1933 which was a record year.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration work bringing new ideas and plans in agriculture will demand much of the County Agent's time early in the year. It is hoped that both members and leaders will move forward in responsibility and help push harder, than ever in cooperative spirit to help make the 4-H program better.

The big goal is to make our county a better place in which to live and only as each individual accepts his responsibilities and lends a helping hand is permanent improvement secured. Help make 1934 a bigger and better 4-H, four square Head, Heart, Health and Hand Year.

TRI-COUNTY UTOPIA MEETING
The Tri-County Utopia Club meeting will be held at Hebron on Saturday, February 10th according to County Agent, H. R. Forkner. Boone, Kenton and Gallatin county members will take part in the event.

The meeting previously planned for December is expected to be well attended by members from all the counties.

TWO MEN

OF TRIO WHO STAGED LIMABURG ROBBERY ARE IDENTIFIED AT LEXINGTON BY J. P. BROTHERS AND NEWPORT TAXI DRIVER.

J. P. Brothers, Limaburg merchant, is one of the most satisfied mortals in Boone county these days and he has reason to be.

The reason is that the man who stuck a gun in his back on Sunday night, January 21, is safely lodged in jail at Winchester. "Proc" says that it's bad enough to have a gun poked in your ribs and know who did it, but that it's a lot worse when you don't know it.

Two of the men were picked up at Lexington on another charge one day last week and Mr. Brothers and sheriff Cotton and deputy Frank Walton, accompanied by the taxi driver who brought the men to Boone went to the blue grass metropolises to identify the two men. Both Brothers and the driver at once named the men as two of the three who did the Limaburg job. They gave their names as Irvin "Tubby" Anderson, of Louisville, and Frank Miller, of Erlanger, Miller's correct name is Marion Yelton.

Yelton was suspected by Brothers immediately after the robbery. He formerly was employed on a farm near Limaburg. Mr. Brothers also knew that he operated under the alias of Miller, having received the tip from a friend, so when the two were arrested at Lexington the identification followed.

However, it may be quite a while before the men will be brought to justice in Boone as they will be compelled to answer the Fayette charge only after they have been brought to trial on a charge at Clark county. They were removed to the jail in Winchester early this week.

The third member of the trio still is at large, but prospects are very good for his apprehension, it is said. Anderson is an escaped convict from the Eddyville prison, so it is readily reasoned Brothers was in a ticklish spot when he was on the opposite end of his gun.

SUBJECTS FOR SUNDAY

The Sunday morning sermon subject has been announced at the local Baptist church by Rev. R. E. Walker, pastor, and it is "The Code." In the evening the Second Commandment will be discussed. Rev. Walker's last Sunday's sermon on the First Commandment proved very interesting.

A WORD FROM LOCAL RELIEF HEADQUARTERS

On January 19, 1934, this office received notice from the Civil Works Administration at Louisville, that the county quota had to be cut down to 182 and that the men working had to be cut down to 15 hours a week. Previously they had been working 30 hours a week. This eliminates approximately 50 men from the C. W. A. projects. This office realizes that the above instructions are going to be hard on the people in this county but there is no alternative.

Through these columns, we recently asked for various articles of furniture and would like to thank Mr. Howard Huey, of Petersburg for the two beds that he donated.

We have been receiving complaints in this office that some families were receiving more relief than others. In fairness to ourselves, we would like to state that this office is not giving out relief on a group basis. If we gave relief on the group basis, it would be unfair to quite a number of families, that is, some families would be getting less than they need and others would be getting more.

For the last few days, people have been storming this office for coal. We know some families that have been using wood for the past three or four years and do not exactly need coal. We would like to suggest, that wherever possible that people somehow manage to get wood. We have been issued instructions, not to give out any coal unless an investigation has been made. We have only one investigator and it is impossible to cover this whole county in a day's time.

LOCAL MEN

ATTEND FARM AND HOME CONVENTION AT KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY DURING PAST WEEK HEAR TOBACCO CHIEF EXPLAIN THE AAA PROGRAM.

John Klopp, of Petersburg, Hubert E. White, of Burlington, C. O. Hemphill, of Taylorsport, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bedinger, of Walton, J. F. Cleek, of Beaver and T. F. Helle, of Richwood attended the annual Farm and Home convention held at the University of Kentucky at Lexington, the past week.

The Boone county group while at Lexington heard J. B. Hutson, Chief of the tobacco section of the AAA explain the purpose and working of the AAA Tobacco Program. Mr. Hutson explained that this year's crop as a whole is to average growers approximately fourteen cents per pound. If for any reason this year's crop brings only ten cents over the warehouse floors the Government will make up the fourteen cents. A ten cent average for this year's crop as a whole will mean growers will receive in their first allotment payments 25 percent and 30 percent of the 1933 crop value instead of the 10 percent and 15 percent values.

BENJAMIN W. CLEEK

Benjamin W. Cleek, aged 75 years died suddenly Monday at 2 p. m. from heart failure. He leaves a widow, Mrs. Ida May Cleek, 1 daughter, Grace Lee Cleek and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his passing.

Funeral services were conducted from Erlanger Christian church, by C. G. Ribble on Wednesday at 2 p. m. Burial in Florence cemetery. Pallbearers were Douglas Rector, Clarence Rector, Ben Dixon, Ben Franklin Dixon, Omer Easton and Harley Baker.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of arrangements.

SELLING CHEAPER TAGS

Following the passage this week of the bill reducing the price of automobile license tags and its signing by Governor Laffoon County Clerk C. D. Benson began the sale of Boone county tags Wednesday morning at the reduced rate. The time limit for the purchase of the tags has been changed from February 1st, to February 10th, according to information received here.

Dr. E. W. Duncan returned to his home here last week after an illness of several weeks during which he was a patient in a Cincinnati hospital. It is expected that he will improve gradually now and that the spring months will find him in good condition again.

BIG NIGHT

IN LOCAL BASKET BALL CIRCLES WHEN FLORENCE TEAMS COME HERE FOR TWO GAMES SATURDAY — HARD BATTLES EXPECTED.

One of the ace attractions on the local basket ball schedule this year, and one which has been anticipated all season, is scheduled for the local court Saturday night of this week when the Florence Knights and Knightengales appear here.

The Tomcats and Kittens expect to win, but close followers of the game are not at all sure about the former, as the Knights have improved rapidly of late and their outstanding performance, against Crittendon, whom they defeated by an overwhelming score the past week-end, points to not only a possible, but indeed a probable victory for the Orange and Black lads.

The impressive win of the Tomcats over the New Haven Tigers at New Haven last Friday night would be lost in the eyes of the fans if the Cats stumble here Saturday night against the Stringtown athletes. However, they won't have to stumble much to lose against the hard driving boys so capably drilled by the Knight's energetic coach, Charlie Alphin.

Coach Lamb has impressed the Tomcats with the importance of the game and they realize it fully. The Kittens, after their tumble against New Haven, will be thirsting for victory and therefore are expected to put up a game fight against the Knightengales, who will be striving to redeem their early loss to the Blue and White.

An added feature for the evening will be the initiation of the new bleacher seats and new electric score board recently donated by C. Scott Chamber and the Mayhugh company of Walton. They have been installed and ready for use at the Florence games.

The Tomcats will travel to Erlanger for a clash with the Lloyd Juggernauts on Friday night. The Tomcat second team also will play Erlanger in a preliminary.

MICHAEL CORCORAN

Michael Corcoran, aged 81 years, died Sunday at 11 a. m. following a long illness from Bright disease, in the home of John Feeley, three miles north of Burlington.

He leaves 3 nephews, 2 nieces, Manley, Joe, John, Jim Feeley, Mrs. Anna Cline, of Cincinnati and Mrs. Lou Hall, of Aurora, Ind., and a host of relatives to mourn his going.

The funeral was conducted from the home on Tuesday at 1 p. m. by Bro. J. W. Campbell in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Petersburg cemetery.

Pallbearers were Alvin Bruce, James Kenney, John Feeley, Joe Feeley, Jim Feeley, Will Hall.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of arrangements.

JACOB GRAFF

Jacob Graff, aged 64 years was struck and killed Tuesday when he stepped in front of an automobile driven by Milton Hunter of Erlanger; the accident occurring at the end of the Ft. Mitchell car line. At the coroner's inquest held Saturday morning, Hunter was exonerated, same being an unavoidable accident.

The remains were removed to the Tallaferrero Funeral Home in Erlanger.

Mr. Graff is survived by one sister in Florence, Mrs. F. R. Conner, with whom he made his home, as well as another sister in Illinois and other relatives and friends.

Funeral was from the Tallaferrero Funeral Home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with services at the graveside in Florence cemetery by Rev. H. M. Hauer.

J. T. Redman, Burlington shoemaker, moved to Warsaw Wednesday morning in search of a more lucrative field for his work. Mr. Redman proved a good citizen and was well liked by everyone with whom he came in contact here and it is to be hoped that Warsaw will prove to be what he is looking for.

A. W. Corn, of Erlanger, was in Burlington Friday afternoon on business.

Sweden Provides Bird Houses

Bird houses by the thousands have been set out by the Swedish government forestry service to get the birds' aid in fight against insects. It has been found that when dead trees are systematically cleaned out there are not enough hollow trunks left for the birds to use as nests, and destructive insects have consequently been gaining in force. So far about 7,000 government bird houses have been put up and the private owners of forestry land are asked to follow the example.

Columbia Oarsmen in Outdoor Tank

An outdoor rowing tank, designed by the late head coach Richard Glendon, has been officially added to Columbia university's rowing equipment. The tank, made of wood and canvas, accommodates one eight-oared crew. It is believed that it will add to the ability of the Lions' oarsmen before they take to actual shells on the Harlem river later in the spring.

Howe About:

He Quit Smoking Satisfaction Hidden Treasure

By ED HOWE

WHEN a boy I lived in Salt Lake City, and one of the points of interest was Lion House, where Brigham Young wrangled with twenty wives. Lion House is now a social center, where seventeen capable instructors teach literature, art, home economics, one wife at a time, etc. This social center is sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as is also a very creditable monthly magazine called the Improvement Era. . . . In which I read that one day a man called on the good Doctor Kellogg of Battle Creek, when the following conversation took place: "I am sixty-five years old, and doctors tell me I have only a year to live. What do you think about it?" "What's your name?" "Charles S. Keene." "What do you do?" "I'm vice president of the American Tobacco company." "Smoke?" "Yes; ten or twelve cigars a day." "Well, quit that, and I'll promise you three or four years longer." (Mr. Keene quit, and lived twenty years; is now, in fact, a nuisance to his friends begging them to quit smoking.)

I met an angry, disheveled, man today, and asked: "What's the trouble?" He replied: "I'm not being treated right: I'm not satisfied." And I said: "I have never known anyone who was satisfied; you are no exception. Calm down; you are neglecting your work to express indignation, in addition to bothering others."—I do not visit graveyards, except to attend the funerals of special friends, but I should like to see there finally a tombstone bearing this inscription, as representing the man buried: "In Memory of a Man Who is Satisfied"—I am almost satisfied at eighty; I hope to be entirely so within a few years. I've had my chance at the best there is in the best country in the world; in the most modern civilization. And I am not as tired of natural tasks as I am of the excited arguments of foolish men unreasonably dissatisfied.

As far back as I can remember, men have been looking for Captain Kidd's hidden treasure. So far they haven't found a penny.

Captain Kidd was a pirate, and worked so steadily at his trade it is believed he had no time left for wine, women and song, and therefore buried his treasure.

Lately the searchers for buried treasure have been encouraged: a pot of buried money was actually found in a Texas cotton field, put there by a kidnaper; so another boom in seeking treasure is on. Where did Samuel Insull, Ivar Kruger, bury their ill-gotten gains?

One pot of gold found in some hundreds of years of search (and that containing only a few hundred dollars) is not much encouragement for buried-treasure workers. Thieves at the end of their lives are nearly always poor; they have no treasure to bury. Only honest, capable and industrious men are able to maintain strong boxes.

I have long regarded Will Rogers as a good deal more of a philosopher than comedian; at present he is the only writer widely read who has common sense. Nicholas Murray Butler is equally wise, but has no circulation; his writing appears only in privately circulated pamphlets. The present circulars sent out by banks, railroads, commercial clubs and business firms might as well not be issued at all; the masses only read newspapers. . . . The conservatives make a mistake in not buying space in all the newspapers, frankly labeling it advertising, and pleading daily for common sense in public affairs. The conservatives have a strong case, and plenty of men able to present it effectively, but for some strange reason refuse to go to the newspapers for a hearing. The cost would be much less than the present plan of every indignant man issuing his own circular. There are plenty of conservatives to appeal to, but they read nothing but gross radicalism.

There is one thing to the credit of dogs I have not mentioned by O. O. McIntyre: a dog is satisfied with his home. His home is the best; he is not always hinting to the proprietor for more, and chasing off to the places next door hoping to be adopted.

We hear of the Forgotten Man. If there was but one, he could be easily relieved, but there are millions of them; every man who does not hold a public job of one kind or another has been forgotten. A few thousand are being appointed to new public jobs daily, but it is only a drop in the bucket.

Principal Polish Seaport The principal seaport in the Polish corridor is Gdynia, which has entirely superseded the port of Danzig, a free city to both Poland and Germany, under the terms of the League of Nations. It is estimated that the population of Gdynia is 60,000.

Largest Blast Underground

Probably the largest blast ever set off underground was achieved in Colorado when 350,000 tons of ore were broken in a single shot of 55 tons of dynamite.

THEORY

Squirrels were breaking into the attics of suburban homes in quest of lodgings. Mr. Flubdud was demanding of all he met any reason why the squirrels should be seeking out his home as headquarters. Finally one thus addressed advanced a theory. "I don't know, unless it is because squirrels go where there are nuts."—Louisville Courier.

No Coda Provisions

"Yassah," said old Link, "business very good. Done bought a pig fo' $10, traded pig fo' a barrer, barrer fo' a calf, calf fo' a bicycle, and sold bicycle fo' $10!" "But yo' don' make nothin' Link!" "Sho' 'nuf, but look at de business Ah been doin'."

"Are you in the Social Register?" "I haven't ascertained," answered Miss Cayenne. "Since hard times struck it's as much as the family can do to remain in good standing with the telephone directory."

AND THERE'S NO PATENT

"What's this I hear about you having some labor-saving device?" "It's true all right. I'm going to marry an heiress."

Gold Digger
"Did she make the best of that headache she married?" "No, she got the best of him—and all he had."

To Prevent a Yelp
"What are you going to give your husband for his birthday?" "It depends on how much he wants to spend for it."

Many Busy Ones Now
"What is your occupation?" "It isn't an occupation, it's a pursuit. I'm a bill collector."

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

A new electric scoreboard has been installed in our gym and two rows of bleachers are under construction at present. These modern fixtures are the generous donations of Chambers & Grubbs Undertaking establishment and the J. C. Mayhugh Lumber Co. We wish to express our profound thanks to these two business firms for this decided improvement in our school.

The number of students present has been vastly decreased during the last few days, due to the cold wave and probably to some illness. We hope to see the usual number present soon.

A senior meeting was held Tuesday morning in regard to the annual. The Seniors have high hopes concerning their annual and we extend to them our sincere wishes for success and we hope that the students and surrounding community will help them make it a success.

C. W. MYERS & SON

"FORD SALES AND SERVICE"

Local Authorized Ford Sales and Service With Modern Garage Located Conveniently For Residents of This Section in Florence, Ky., Furnishes a High Standard of Service to Ford Owners That Is Not Surpassed by Any Other Concern in This Vicinity. They Invite You To Ride in The Newest Ford Models. Telephone Florence 14. They Will Be Pleased to Demonstrate the New Ford V-8 to You.

There is today an ever-increasing demand for well-built motor cars which afford at a reasonable price the luxury and satisfaction heretofore only obtainable in the highest priced automobiles. Many good and substantial reasons are supported by actual facts in contemplating the unusual values offered in the new Ford V-8 today. It is true that new methods usually produce greater values but it remained for Ford to provide amazing values for the motor driving public. Manufacturing their own steel and glass, owning and operating their own coal mines and making almost every part that enters into the construction of the Ford V-8 it stands to reason that you are assured of higher quality at no extra cost. The saying is passed on to the owner by giving them more miles, less expense for less money.

There is no other manufacturer offering value coupled with the newest automobile developments, motoring ease, low cost, transportation cost and upkeep as is offered in the Ford. The many new models being offered by C. W. Myers & Son will bring wonder and admiration to everyone who visits their showroom and the utmost pride of ownership to those who buy one.

They feature not only a complete line of genuine Ford parts and Ford service but also an expert service to all motorists in this section. If you are not contemplating the purchase of a new car this winter, have them recondition your old one. It will pay you in time and money.

We are glad to compliment them on their excellent service and the progressive policies upon which this concern is operated and suggest to our readers for a demonstration of the new 1934 Ford V-8 to Telephone Florence 14.

LOWER GUNPOWDER

Mrs. Iva Walston and family spent Sunday with home folks.

Mrs. Schwenke and children.

Miss Lena Binder and Jimmie and Mary Lou Jones spent Wednesday evening with F. H. Sebree and family.

Miss Keturan Shinkle has the flu. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Omer Hodges and wife spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Carrie Ogden.

Miss Thelma Hodges spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. Carrie Ogden.

Miss Thelma Hodges spent Sunday with Velma Ogden.

Garland Huff and family and Ivan Walston and family spent Saturday evening with the Sebree family.

We were shocked to hear the sad news that Charles H. Jones committed suicide at his home in Linton Saturday evening, Jan. 27. It had been just one month since his wife Katie Jones jumped from the Suspension bridge at Cincinnati. The body has never been recovered to this date. Again we extend our sympathy to both families and especially their two little children, Mary Lou and James.

The Y. W. A. met with Roxie and Elizabeth Hodges Saturday afternoon.

Garland Huff will stage a play the fourth Thursday in February. He is planning for a real program by his room. It will be P. T. A. night. All are invited to attend. Lunch will be served.

By the way, Hasher claims I have help to write the news. I am sure he has (Moore) help. I don't know whether she is an expert or not.

We have a dog catcher in our community, but one passed which he did not catch—it was traveling too fast.

There is a house in this neighborhood that looks real lonesome, so come on B. and start the home fire burning.

Perhaps it was Hasher the hound that girl was singing the song to.

Get a Long Little Doggie Get Along."

Mrs. Ed Shinkle and family spent Sunday with her father, George Smith, of Florence.

Mrs. Frank Allen is on the sick list.

E. L. Aylor killed hogs Tuesday. Sunday afternoon and evening was the hardest wind we have had for several years in this community.

Tom Edwards passed away at his home in Erlanger, after an illness of several weeks. Funeral services were held at Elsmere church Monday at 11 o'clock, burial in Highland cemetery. We extend our sympathy to the family.

As the average person's income varies considerably from one time to another, different amounts are given for food. Allowances of 25 cents, 35 cents and 40 cents per person per day is made in turn.

Food adequate in all respects is procured on the 25 cent budget, but of course more interest and variety is possible on the larger amount.

"Emphasis is placed on the development of family and social relationship on a high plane, that will be in harmony with and at the same time help to establish standards in a changing social order," says Dr. Statie Erikson, head of the department.

"Because one of the essentials of good family relationships is an abode of orderliness and cleanliness, the tasks necessary to maintain a clean, well-ordered household must be performed by the girls. Because good food well cooked and tactfully served is another essential, they are required to plan, cook and serve their meals. Wise management is also necessary, and so they live on a household budget."

As part of their laboratory work they live in a house under direct professorial supervision for eight weeks out of the semester. In addition to their regular university studies and activities, they plan and cook the meals on a carefully planned budget and perform other tasks "necessary to maintain a clean, well-ordered household." Time budgeting is also required.

Collins & Vest Chevrolet, Inc.

AUTHORIZED CHEVROLET SALES AND SERVICE

Excelling All Former Peaks of Quality. The 1934 Chevrolet Offers to Motorist of This Section The Most Outstanding Value Ever Offered In The Low Priced Motor Car Field. Before Buying Your New Car See and Ride In The New Chevrolet With Knee Action Wheels. Main Office and Modern Garage in Walton, Ky. Branch Located in Florence. Telephone Walton 95 or Florence 188.

Chevrolet and Oldsmobile more than ever before in their history offer to the motorist a new line of motor cars to meet the modern demand for performance, reliability, staunch service, low cost and long life. They have taken advantage of errors made in the past and are giving to the public a new car that will eliminate unnecessary repair bills, inconvenience and trouble. "Save With a New Chevrolet."

Every feature demanded in the finest motor cars today is now offered in the Chevrolet. Scores of distinct improvements have been made including longer and lower Fisher bodies—the greatest development since the self starter "Knee Action" wheels, no-draft ventilation, improved riding comforts and better all around performance with added power and faster acceleration which have never been equalled in motor car building in this price class.

That you sacrifice power when you drive a four and economize when you drive an eight is an attested fact known to more than 3,500,000 owners since Chevrolet made its debut as a six in 1929. Chevrolet emphasizes the basic policy upon which the company has founded success, that of building quality and style in the low priced field rather than the bare need of transportation.

The service at the Collins & Vest Chevrolet, Inc., is well known to motorists in this section. That their first duty is to serve you quickly and efficiently is a known fact and here will be found one of the most complete Chevrolet service stations in this vicinity.

We are glad to compliment the Collins & Vest Chevrolet, Inc., upon their comprehensive showing of the new Chevrolet motor cars and their excellent service rendered for the accommodation of their many patrons.

Loving and kind in all of her ways Upright and just to the end of her day;

Sincere and true in her heart and mind;

Beautiful memories she has left behind.

HAMILTON SCHOOL NOTES

The St. James boys defeated the Hamilton Purple Ramblers, who played but three of the first team, due to the absence of Smith and Aylor. It was a hard fight and the final score was 21-17. The Ramblers are more than anxiously awaiting the return game of St. James, Feb. 16. In the preliminary the Midgets defeated the St. James Midgets by the score of 19-4.

Rev. Graden, of the East Bend Methodist church and Mr. Palmer of Rabbit Hash visited the school Monday morning. We appreciate their interest in us and hope they return in the near future.

The honor club held its first meeting of the year and elected the following officers:

J. Wesley Palmer, President.
Donald Perry, Vice-President.
Hazel Lee Craig, Secretary.

Administrator's Notice

All persons having claims against Pearl Hughes deceased, will please present same before the undersigned properly proven according to law. All those indebted to the estate are requested to come forward and settle.

HEBRON SCHOOL NOTES

On last Friday night, the Hebron girls playing the Holy Cross team at Latonia scored another very decisive victory. The girls from Latonia put up a good fight but their defense proved to be too weak to withhold the Cardinals and the former were defeated by a final score of 22-7.

The Hebron boys however, were defeated by the Holy Cross boys, who have seemed to improve quite a bit since they visited Hebron, where they were quite overcome by the Cardinals a few weeks ago. During the first half of the game the Latonia boys had a good lead of 12 points; the score being 16 to 4 at the end of the first half. Then in the last half, the Cardinals rallied, coming to the front with 18 points in their favor. But it was, however, too late and the final score was 25-22 with Holy Cross on top.

Next Friday night the Cardinals will play at Hebron. The rest of the games also will be played at home.

Quite an interesting program was held last Monday at chapel. The program celebrating the birthday of Edgar Allen was as follows:

CHAPTER XI

Her elder sisters had finally given up open opposition to Smif's plan of burying herself at Lovelylea. Among themselves they had agreed that her purchase of the plantation was unimportant, since if she made the sort of marriage they meant she should, she would be in a position to indulge her sentiment for the old home of her family and have other "more suitable" establishments elsewhere as well.

As usual, Smif understood them perfectly; but it suited her to be freed from nagging arguments while she brought her plans to completion. Doctor Blanton's ready acquiescence in her arrangements came as a complete surprise, however; until, of a sudden, she suspected that he was about to propose another occupation for her. In a panic, she hurried her preparations and left for the South without the formality of good-bys. Once she was settled, she would write to everybody. Meanwhile she was annoyed that she heard nothing from Bill-Lee. He must realize her eagerness to have the preliminaries definitely over. She did not know exactly when Stone's tenancy terminated, but had vague plans that might enable her to assume possession of her property almost at once. She was sure that Stone at least would understand and sympathize with her desire to own the home of her fathers however disappointing it was to him personally. But what could Bill-Lee be doing to prevent his acknowledging her letter?

So far, she had told Stone nothing, although her plans were more or less elaborate, including first his reconciliation with his neighbors and next, finding him a desirable plantation near enough to Lovelylea to permit of his continued use of the track and other improvements he had installed on its acres. Before she saw him, she proposed to clear up the entire situation as regards the Hoxton Hunt club. With this in mind, she went directly to Culthorpe, the home of her cousin, Christopher Culpeper. Both he and his wife were delighted that Smif had elected to stay with them out of the large number of relations she had to choose from.

"Well, it was told to Smif was not in the least good-looking?" Cousin Kit asked his wife as they stood side by side at a window and watched her shepherding along the drive toward the house their son Jeff's twins, fugitives with their grandparents from whooping-cough among their brothers and sisters.

"Cally Peter's oldest girl, the one who came from New York with her cheeks painted white and her mouth painted purple, and vowed that make-up was all the rage in the North," Cousin Mab replied. "I never believed her. All the Lovelys were handsome."

"Smif's a picture," her husband roared so loudly that she heard her name, looked up and waved her hand to him. "Why some man hasn't snatched her up before this beats me. In my day she'd not have been single this long."

Smif soon decided that she was sufficiently established in the favor of her family to advance the cause she had at heart. She came in and sank into a chair, laughing.

"Madame and sir," she said with a final chuckle, "your grandchildren are adorable but exhausting. I have returned them to Mammy undamaged, although it was touch and go. They at most convinced me that the two colts in the near pasture were their property and ought to be exercised."

"The little devils," said their grandfather proudly.

"Have you looked through the cards of the people who called yesterday while we were at your Aunt Fanny Madison's?" Cousin Mab asked.

Smif accepted this as her chance. "Yes," she said, "and that reminds me: Don't you think it strange that Stone Nesbit hasn't called? After all, he is occupying Lovelylea and I want to see the old place again."

She had looked for an explosion from Cousin Kit. None came.

Instead he scratched his forehead contemptuously.

"Gorry, Smif," he muttered a trifle shamefacedly, "I'm mighty sorry to disappoint you-all. I'm afraid that can't be managed. You see, Mr. Nesbit long ago made up his mind that he would have nothing to do with any of us."

"Now what do you mean by that?" Smif demanded, instantly on the alert at this placing of the blame on Stone's shoulders.

"Well," Cousin Mab cut in briskly. "It boils down to this: The young man came here from God knows where, and brought a pack of hounds—"

"So the members of the Hoxton Hunt got sore," Cousin Kit interrupted, "and ever since then their wives and daughters have been throwing it up to them that they made a mess of a very simple business."

"And so you did," Cousin Mab declared without animus. "I grant you it was a case calling for a little tact, a thing of which men know; only the name. Any lad of spirit would have acted exactly as young Nesbit did. I'd have been ashamed of a son of my own who had done otherwise."

"Well, we sent him an invitation to join the Hunt, didn't we? And the young cub returned it unopened." Cousin Kit growled defensively.

"What?" exclaimed Smif sharply. "You invited Stone to join the Hunt?" Kit Culpeper might not have noticed this slip, but Cousin Mab raised her delicate eyebrows and pounced on it at once.

"Stone?" she repeated with an interrogative inflection. "You know Mr. Nesbit, honey?"

"Yes," Smif acknowledged, "I know him. He is my cousin. His grandmother—great-grandmother, I mean—was Lorraine Lovely."

"Well, I'll be d—!" Cousin Kit exploded.

"Now," said Smif, "let me tell you his side of the affair and perhaps it will all be clearer."

She told the story well and they listened with at least a partial understanding of Stone's loneliness and bitterness.

"And now what can we do about it?" Cousin Kit inquired, looking from one to the other of his companions.

Smif had taken thought to herself and had decided that it would be better if she did not appear too openly in the matter.

"The affair needs careful consideration," she confessed. "Give us time and Cousin Mab and I will find a way out of the tangle."

"Certainly we will," Cousin Mab nodded, her head already full of matchmaking schemes. Wasn't Stone Nesbit reputed to be very wealthy? Wasn't he a suitable age? Mightn't he be an explanation of Smif's sudden return to the neighborhood? Cousin Kit rambled out and Smif at once proceeded to dispel Cousin Mab's rosy dream.

"You see," she confided to her grave. "I'm not ready yet for anyone else to know it, not even Cousin Kit, who I don't believe could keep a secret to save his life. I've bought Lovelylea from Bill-Lee, and I'm beginning to be afraid Stone is going to feel terribly about it, especially as I've never told him that I had made the arrangements with Bill-Lee."

This, Cousin Mab was forced to acknowledge to herself, did not look like a love affair.

She did her best to keep her face from falling, but Smif noticed the change in her expression.

"Don't you approve of me as a neighbor?" Cousin Mab at once recaptured her poise.

"My dear, I'm delighted," she said. "I was only wondering if you knew how the activities of the plantation have expanded under Mr. Nesbit. It seems a tremendous undertaking for a young woman."

Smif chuckled joyously at the anticipation.

"That's why it will be such fun to pull it off," she explained. "I love to tuck off something successfully where every one expects me to fail." She was thinking of the case of Madame Saitou, Incorporated. Instinctively she was sure that that was not an affair which her dear Cousin Mab could ever be brought to understand, so it remained unmentioned between them.

"Now about Mr. Nesbit?" Cousin Mab began.

"What do you think of the twins?" Smif inquired.

"The twins?" Their grandmother was bewildered.

"As messengers, I mean. Peacemakers in fact. I'm certain Stone would not refuse to receive a child, and, not expecting one, his orders would only have concerned themselves with grown men. Listen, what do you say to this?" And Smif unfolded her plan which, in due course, the twins improved on after a pattern of their own.

That afternoon, Stone, led by excited barks from Beaucaire and confirmatory mutterings from Voltaire, went through the hall to the front door to ascertain the cause of the warning. No one was visible and to his eye there was nothing amiss. Beaucaire had disappeared down the steps with a yelp of joy, and he and Voltaire followed, to the edge of the platform. Below him, flat on their backs on one of the broad steps, lay two small figures, gazing unwinkingly upward. The dog was running from one to the other bestowing lavish kisses indiscriminately.

"Hello," said Stone, "who are you and where did you drop from?" At his words both the children sat up with a unanimity of action that was like a mechanical toy.

"You've got a mighty nice dog," the young gentleman remarked casually, "if you wouldn't sell him or swap him!"

His sister frowned at him darkly and also directed an admonitory kick in his direction.

"That's not the way to begin," she said in a surprisingly deep and low-pitched voice.

"Suppose you begin by telling me your names?" Stone suggested, at a loss to explain such arrivals on his doorstep.

"Haven't you a butler?" the girl demanded, her voice suddenly high and childish. "We've come to call on you." She was taking the stand that, as their call had not been officially begun, they had not been introduced: and Stone entered into the game with becoming gravity, going inside the house without further words and back to the study to await their ring at the bell and his summons by the butler. This was a visit of ceremony and must be treated as such.

"The front door-bell will ring in a moment or two, Daly," he said to his butler. "There are two youngsters there. Treat them as if they were entirely grown-up, understand? Take their cards, show them into the parlor. There they are now. Bring the cards to me. I'm anxious to know who they are."

The butler returned, consumed with laughter.

"Ye'll learn little from them cards, sir," he said, holding out a salver on which reposed two imposing looking pasteboards. "I can tell you who the little divils are."

"Let them tell me in their own way," Stone picked the cards up. One was engraved.

MRS. RUTHERFORD MADISON
THE MISSES MADISON
Middleburg, Virginia.

The other
MRS. CONNISTON COULTER
Tar Hill Plantation

And once again Stone asked himself if he was being made the butt of a joke?

However he went to greet his visitors, their cards in his hand.

"I'm delighted to see you," he said. "Did you like our tickets?" the boy asked.

"We picked the very nicest, biggest ones in the card basket," the girl interposed. "Today's a stupid little boy."

"Why Some Man Hasn't Snapped Her Up Beats Me."

They aren't tickets. Tickets are what you have when the circus comes. These are cards—for visits, you know. You have to have 'em when you make real visits. We never did before."

"What am I to call you," Stone asked, flicking the pasteboards with a finger. "The names on these are so formal."

"I'm Patsy Culpeper," the little girl said distinctly.

"What?" Stone cried explosively. "Who sent you here?"

"Gran," said Patsy, "and she gave me a message. And I've forgotten it."

"So have I," said her brother. Suddenly his sister began to paw all over his inadequate attire.

"There was a letter," she declared, "what did you do with it, Todhunter Culpeper?"

"I had it when we laid down on the steps to think because we were so embarrassed," Toddy wrinkled his brow.

"I know," they both cried together, "the puppy has it. He took it to give his master."

Retrieved from the steps where Beaucaire had dropped it on Stone's appearance, the note was reclaimed. It proved to be a few lines from Mrs. Culpeper:

"Dear Mr. Nesbit: 'Will you take a dish of tea with me tomorrow afternoon? I shall be all alone save for the twins. Cordially yours, 'Mabel Todhunter Culpeper.'"

"Who is Mabel Culpeper?" he asked the two.

"My sister," Patsy told him. "She's a horrid little girl. She's got whooping-cough."

Stone essayed another tack. "Who wrote this note?"

ored coachman who was drowsing on the box of the Culpeper victoria.

Stone was amazed and somewhat distrustful on receipt of Mrs. Culpeper's message, yet to his mind he had no alternative. He must accept an invitation coming from an elderly lady. The more he dwelt on the thought the more distasteful it became to him but he must.

He need have had no apprehension of stiffness or social strain. Mabel Culpeper was born a Todhunter of Charleston, and the graceful management of men was part of her heritage. She met him as if he were an old friend and shortly they felt entirely at home together.

Tea was brought and with it came the twins, hand in hand on their best behavior, at least until the cakes were consumed.

"This is a party!" Patsy announced. "I always know it is a party when I see those little black cakes."

"Certainly it's a party," her grandmother agreed. "It's your Cousin Stone's coming out party."

Stone started and made no attempt to conceal it, looking to her for an explanation.

"That is the only complaint I have to make of you, Stone," she said easily. "Down here blood is still thicker than water." You must have known that Lorraine Lovely and my mother's mother were cousins.

"But—I didn't," Stone stammered, bewildered. "I had no idea of such a thing."

"Then I forgive you," Mrs. Culpeper was benignly itself as she fired her next shot. "Of course you will have to make your peace with your Cousin Kit when you see him. He had set his heart on your joining the Hoxton Hunt when they invited you."

"Invited me!" Stone cried. "That's the very first I ever heard of it!"

"Well, dear boy," Mabel Culpeper had a disarming smile. "You will own that letters can't be expected to talk, and if you send them back unopened—" She looked at him and saw that it was unnecessary to say more.

"So that was the letter I returned. What a little fool I must have seemed."

"Not a fool—only a spirited boy. I assure you that I was proud to claim you when recently I learned that you were my cousin."

"My dear," Mrs. Culpeper told Smif later. "I really liked our new cousin. If I were younger, I would dispute his possession with that fat Miss Mercedes, who has given every one in the neighborhood to understand that she has him in her pocket."

Smif replied. "Of course Miss Mercedes means to marry him and, frankly, I think he'd be happier married. He badly needs companionship."

"Not the companionship of that county fair exhibit," Cousin Mab stated with a firmness that defied contradiction. "She is shrewd but totally uninteresting, and I suspect comes of vulgar people of the Middle West. There's a burr in her speech that can't otherwise be accounted for. It is the most persistent of our provincial accents, and although she seems to fancy so, calling you 'honey' every other minute doesn't make one a southerner, does it, honey? Frankly, I don't like the young woman, although she gives the most delicious dinners in the state."

"So I've heard. . . . Well, sooner or later she'll be back among us, ten years younger and many times more beautiful. Then we'll see if Stone can resist her."

"Do you approve of the match?" Cousin Mab was watching her keenly and Smif bent for a light for her cigarette.

"I do and I don't," she owned with entire candor, waving away with one hand the smoke that partly veiled her face. "I confess I'm not crazy about Miss Mercedes, but I do think it's hard lines to be denied a love affair simply because one's fat. In spite of that, when I once fancied for a few moments that they were actually engaged, I can't say that I was pleased, even while I saw plainly what a nice solution it would be of all my worries."

"And what are your worries?" Cousin Mab inquired, lifting quizzical eyebrows.

"They're principally connected with Stone at present. I ought to have told him long ago that I had planned all my life to buy Lovelylea. Now, it is going to look as if I had hurried to do it behind his back. And Stone and I have been friends. I'd hate to lose that friendship almost as much as I'd hate to lose Lovelylea. Not quite, I suppose; because if the scales tipped that way, I could say: 'Here it is. I've bought it; but if you love it too much to lose it, I'll give it up to you.' . . . I'm not that unselfish. Cousin Mab, I'd love him to have the use of it. I'd be glad to let him use the track and the new stables and the other improvements he has built—But the old place is ours. Our dead lie there. Without disloyalty to them, how can I give it up?"

The older woman made no answer when Smif paused and looked at her appealingly. She knew right well the solution she would like to recommend, but it was too soon for so risky a venture. Smif might take alarm and run away North, which was the last thing she wanted. So she preserved a sympathetic silence and Smif went on:

"You can see it would be a wonderful solution for me if he married Mercedes. He would live within easy reach and we could at least share the track and training quarters. I don't think I'll break the news to him until Mery is back from her cure and I'm sure he knows his own mind. They'll just won't have her, I'll help him look about for another place. I might even pretend it was for me. What would you think of that?"

"My dear, don't ask my advice. I am utterly unprincipled woman myself. Your Cousin Kit will tell you that I only tell the truth when I've made up my mind nothing else will work as well. That's as it may be, but it's what he always says. When do you propose to let Stone know that you are here?"

"I'd like it awfully if he could be taken to the heart of the Hoxton Hunt and the countryside in general without fancying I had anything to do with it," Smif said wistfully. "It would mean a lot for—well—for my morale, I'll call it for lack of a better word. I must visit Great-Aunt Anabel Trevor and the Culpeper aunts and uncles some time. Suppose I start the round at once? Can you get the preliminaries over in two weeks, say? Then I'll come back as if it was my first appearance and stay with you, if you'll have me, until Susan Phelps comes down to Lovelylea to a house party there. The Phelps are really my dearest friends up North. You'll like them, Cousin Mab. Tell me, will that suit you?"

"Perfectly, and I don't know why it shouldn't work. Since nobody knows you know Stone except Kit and me, you'll probably not be mentioned if I warn Kit." Which she proceeded to do with such emphasis that for once he held his usually unruly tongue.

Smif left on her series of visits and peace descended upon Culthorpe.

CHAPTER XII

For Stone, the next few weeks were among the happiest of his life so far. At last he was among friends, and the least of his pleasures was the anticipation of Smif's surprise when she arrived at Lovelylea to find the situation so completely altered. His early contacts were, naturally enough, with the men of the countryside, and so it happened, as Smif had hoped, that he did not hear of her first visit to Culthorpe.

Not quite so soon as she had expected she returned there and was welcomed with acclaim by its inmates. Cousin Mab was especially delighted to have her back. As an enthusiastic matchmaker she was eager to see the first meeting between Stone and Smif in order to draw her own conclusions.

It is sure that if Smif had fathomed Cousin Mab's schemes she would have taken herself off at once.

As it was, without a word to anyone, she had a horse saddled the morning after her return and rode off alone to Lovelylea. When she entered the grounds and walked her mount up the winding drive, her heart almost stood still. Nothing here was changed, really. And, strange to say, it had not grown smaller, as places seen last in childhood are so apt to do.

The house, tall-pillared and spacious, stood on a rise of ground scarcely high enough to deserve the name of hill, yet giving it command of all the surrounding country. At sight of it, the suspense was over, her heart resumed its beat, her blood seemed to be flowing through her veins. For her, the old place was as it had always been.

"And it's mine," she said under her breath; "at last all this loving! It is all my own. What more could I want in the world than this?"

A colored boy came around the corner and ran down the steps to take her horse, a wide grin of welcome on his face.

"Maw'nin', Miss Smif," he said, "Mist' Nesbit, he's not gone far. I'll sen' one of those lazy niggers from the stables afteh him."

"How did you know my name?" she asked amazed. "This boy could not have been born when she left Lovelylea."

"I he'ped to hank yo'n picture," he replied unhesitatingly. "Mist' Nesbit, he tol' us who it was."

"I see," Smif said, "but it is not really a picture of me. It is a portrait of Mr. Nesbit's great-grandmother."

"Yes'm, Miss Smif," he replied with a polite attempt to conceal her unbelief. "Looks a heap like yo' all. Don' look like nobody's gramma, 'at lady."

"She wasn't a grandmother until years later," Smif explained. "Does your own grandmother must have been young once."

"Haw haw," the boy burst into loud guffaw. "Didn' nobody paint any picshures of my gramma—"

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Eastman Foresees Government Ownership and Operation of Railways—Progress of President's Money Bill—American Recognition for Mendieta.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHEN the railroad problem of the United States is solved, it will be found that the solution is government ownership and operation, in the opinion of Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation. The conclusion is set forth in his first report, made to the Interstate Commerce commission and transmitted to President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner and Speaker Rainey. Mr. Eastman says the solution he foresees would not be inconsistent with our theory of government.

J. B. Eastman

Explaining that when governments acquire private property they normally pay more than it is worth, Mr. Eastman reaches the conclusion that the remedy should not be applied to railroads now because the country is not "financially in a condition to stand the strain of an acquisition of these great properties."

The co-ordinator, having set up what he wishes to be the objective of future national railroad policy, then proceeds to make recommendations within the limits of existing laws. He is decidedly skeptical of the Prince plan for consolidation of the roads, for his assistant, William B. Poland, has made studies that show the economies under this scheme would be less than one-third of the original estimates.

Most significant of the recommendations on consolidations is the proposal for compulsory consolidation should be given a trial, provided that the commission and the co-ordinator find the proposed mergers to be in the public interest. Mr. Eastman throws the weight of his approval behind a method of compulsory consolidation through exchange of securities without the use of cash. Execution of such a method, which the co-ordinator's legal assistant, Leslie Craven, believes can be accomplished, would accelerate the merging of eastern railroads into the four systems previously agreed upon.

Mr. Eastman says that reorganization of railroads now bankrupt "should be effected as speedily as practicable, and in a manner which will result in a very material reduction in fixed charges." He calls attention to the fact that some of the most successful reorganizations in railroad history took place in the midst of financial depressions. Wall Street theory has been that reorganizations should be postponed as long as possible.

Many of the railroads' vital problems can be dealt with adequately by the carriers themselves, but "there is as yet insufficient organization and leadership in the industry for effective co-operation in such undertakings." It is quite possible, Mr. Eastman believes, that a study of these problems "will pave the way to a much larger use of motor vehicles as an adjunct to railroad service, and to a revamping and simplification of the freight-rate structure."

CARLOS MENDIETA is quite satisfactory to the United States, as president of Cuba in view of the fact that he has the backing of a majority of the Cuban people and apparently is capable of restoring order in the island. So President Roosevelt informed the diplomatic envoys of the other Latin-American countries whom he had summoned to the White House. The President virtually invited the other nations to take the same course but made it clear that his mind was made up anyway. Next day Jefferson Caffery, acting for the United States government, went to the state department in Havana and handed the Secretary of State Comodoro de la Torre a document notifying the Cubans that the United States was ready to resume diplomatic relations.

Carlos Mendieta

The Cubans went wild with joy and the 21-gun salute from the American warship Wyoming in the harbor was answered by salutes from the forts. Mr. Caffery will be our ambassador to Cuba, and Manuel Marquez Sterling will be the Cuban ambassador to Washington.

Recognition of the Mendieta regime came from practically all other nations. President Roosevelt plans to do several favors to Cuba that should make Mendieta solid with his people. The warships in Cuban waters will be withdrawn. The Platt amendment to the Cuban constitution, permitting the United States to intervene in Cuban affairs to maintain law and order will be junked. And congress will be asked to give Cuba a big preferential reduction in the American sugar tariff.

Sugar raising is the island's chief industry and for five years it has been in a severe slump, and the resulting depression has caused much of the political disturbance.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S money bill went through the house with a rush, the vote being 380 to 40. Sixty-eight Republicans joined the obedient Democrats in supporting the measure. James R. Claiborne of Missouri and George B. Terrell of Texas were the only Democrats recorded in the negative.

The senate received the bill and referred it to the banking and currency committee, which held a hearing that was lively while it lasted. Prof. George Warren, author of the dollar depreciation and gold purchase program, explained to the committee the theory of commodity price regulation by manipulation of the currency. Then, taking up consideration of the measure, the committee heard the vigorous objections of Senators Glass, Gore and McCado to several features of the bill, notably the proposed seizure of the federal reserve bank gold, and the granting of unlimited financial power to the secretary of the treasury.

It was confidently predicted by the administration leaders that the bill would be put through the senate unchanged, but stubborn fights over various proposed amendments were certain. The vote on a plan to limit the use of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund was expected to be close. Advocates of the reamortization of silver, who are fairly numerous in the senate, prepared a compromise silver plan to be offered as an amendment to the devaluation measure.

PLANS of the American Legion to ask congress for more liberal treatment of veterans have stirred up a row in Washington. The Legion is urging enactment of a four-point program to cost $80,000,000 a year. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of the veterans' bureau, thought this figure was too low, estimating the cost at a considerably higher total. The Legion representatives declared the government estimates were erroneous and by inference accused General Hines of ulterior motives and lack of integrity.

Gen. F. T. Hines

In a letter to Edward A. Hayes, commander of the Legion, Hines denounced the criticism of his estimates as wholly uncalled for and said the Legion's own rehabilitation committee had admitted they were more nearly correct than its own estimates. Meanwhile the President had announced new modifications of his executive regulations concerning payments to disabled war veterans, the changes adding more than $21,000,000 annually. There were intimations at the White House that Mr. Roosevelt would seek to persuade the Democrats in congress not to go beyond this liberalization.

GRAFT and favoritism have been rife in the use of CWA funds, according to the numerous complaints that have been received by President Roosevelt and Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, and audit of the books has been ordered in many localities. The unfortunate state of affairs was admitted by the President, who thus forestalled the revelation of the facts by congressional committees or Republican organizations. At the same time he made it plain that he was standing firmly behind Mr. Hopkins, the ousting of whom was tentatively planned by a group of house Democrats.

More than 4,000,000 persons were given jobs by the CWA and Mr. Roosevelt is asking for an appropriation of $350,000,000 to carry on the work to May 1; but he insists that the CWA organization be abandoned on that date according to his previous plan. Protests against this course, in congress and all over the country, have been numerous and loud. It is now considered likely that after May 1, continued employment for more than 2,000,000 of the CWA workers will be found in seasonal employment, public works and a revival of industry.

Senators Nye and Borah, who have been attacking the NRA on the ground that its codes fostered monopolies and tended to ruin small business concerns, won a concession from Administrator Johnson. The general agreed to the establishment of a board of outstanding citizens to which small manufacturers and other business men can bring their complaints of ruinous operation of the codes.

All the code authorities have been summoned to meet in Washington February 15 to consider code revisions.

THAT recovery outlays can be ended by June 30, 1935, is the belief of the President, and he gave expression to this when he announced his approval of the bill extending the life of the Reconstruction Finance corporation for another year. He enjoined Jesse Jones, chairman of the R. F. C., not to withdraw more than $500,000,000 from the treasury in the next fiscal year, except with prior Presidential approval.

DEVELOPMENTS in Japan indicate that the military clique is losing out and that Foreign Minister Koki Hirota will be able to carry out his plans to establish more friendly relations with the United States.

Gen. Sadao Araki, who had been minister of war since December, 1931, and who conducted the campaign against China, has resigned ostensibly because of ill health and has been succeeded by Gen. Senjiro Hayashi.

Koki Hirota

Last October Araki declared in an interview that "if people believe the foreign policy toward the United States will change, they are absolutely wrong." It was then predicted that there would be a split in the cabinet, and this appears to have come, with the less warlike ministers, led by Hirota, having the upper hand.

Hirota told the diet at its opening that Japan "fervently desires American friendship" and added that no question exists between Japan and the United States that is intrinsically difficult of solution.

SENATOR HUEY P. LONG of Louisiana sustained another severe blow in the New Orleans Democratic mayoral primary, which is equivalent to an election.

T. Semmes Walmesley

"Kingfish" candidate, John Klorer, was soundly beaten by T. Semmes Walmesley, the present incumbent and now one of Long's bitterest foes. There was a third candidate and Walmesley did not obtain a clear majority, but Klorer announced that he would not force a runoff primary. His chief issue in the race was a drastic reduction in electric rates in New Orleans, and as the present city administration has promised to bring this about, Klorer said he would take it at its word.

The campaign for the nomination was exceedingly stormy with prospects of violence that did not develop when the day came. Walmesley and Long in their speeches denounced each other without reserve, and the mayor promised to follow the senator to Washington, if necessary, and give him a good thrashing. Having won the fight at the polls, he probably will abandon this project, though he and his organization have pledged themselves to "exterminate" Huey from public life.

JOHN H. MCCOY, for almost a quarter of a century the big Tammany boss of Brooklyn, died of heart disease, and his demise probably means the end of Tammany's domination of the Democratic party in New York, at least for a time. It was expected that a leader satisfactory to the supporters of President Roosevelt would be selected to succeed McCoy. Another once notable political leader passed away when Edward J. Brundage of Chicago committed suicide, presumably because of financial troubles. Richy, respected as a lawyer and a man, he formerly was prominent in the Republican party in Illinois and had been attorney general of the state.

OSCAR DE PRIEST of Chicago, the only negro in congress, injected the race question into the house of representatives, to the great distress of Speaker Rainey and the other Democratic leaders.

Senator Morris, secretary to Mr. De Priest, and his son were refused service in the grill of the house restaurant, the manager informing them that this was in accordance with his orders from Representative Lindsay G. Warren of North Carolina, Democratic chairman of the committee on accounts which rectifies the affairs of the restaurant. Mr. De Priest, hearing of this, was exceedingly wrath and insisted on demanding a special investigation to determine by what authority the committee controls and manages the conduct of the house restaurant, and by what authority said committee or any member thereof issued and enforced rules or instructions whereby any citizen of the United States is discriminated against on account of race, color, or creed.

Oscar De Priest

CARL VINSON, chairman of the house naval affairs committee, announced that his committee was about to intrude a $150,000,000 ship construction program; and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt gave out word that the President would throw the full support of the administration behind legislation designed to bring the navy up to treaty strength.

The use appropriations committee recommended a fund of $376,000 for restoring the Great Lakes Naval station to its former status as the navy's major interior training post.

FURTHER information about the earthquake in India leads to the belief that it was the greatest disaster that country ever suffered. That the loss of life was appalling is shown by the statement of the rajah of Monghyr that the dead there alone numbered 25,000.

Lesson for February 4

PUTTING GOD'S KINGDOM FIRST

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:1-14. GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Matthew 6:33.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Tells of God's Care.

JUNIOR TOPIC—In Search of Riches.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving One Master Only.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Putting First Things First.

Having set forth in the previous chapter the standards of the kingdom, Christ the king now exhibits the underlying principles which control the subjects of the kingdom.

1. As to Giving (vv. 1-4).

Doing alms before men is not condemned as that would contradict Matthew 5:16, but the doing of them before men to be seen of them. To seek publicity in doing our alms is to miss the reward of the heavenly Father.

11. As to Praying (vv. 5-15).

The spirit of self-advertisement frequently displays itself even in the holy exercise of prayer. In order to correct this evil tendency he sets forth

1. False prayer (vv. 5, 7). This consists in a. Praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). Many of the prayers uttered in public are false, for the thing uppermost in the mind of the one praying is what the people think rather than what God thinks.

b. Using vain repetitions (v. 7). This does not mean that we should ask but once for a given thing. We have examples of both Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26: 39-46; II Cor. 12: 7, 8). It means rather the using of meaningless repetitions.

2. True prayer (v. 6). Since real prayer is a transaction of the soul with God, there should be a real desire for fellowship with him which moves one to meet him in the secret place.

3. The model prayer (vv. 9-15). This involves

a. Right relationship—"Our Father" (v. 9). Before one can pray so as to be heard he must, through the regenerating work of the Holy Spirit, become a child of God.

b. The right attitude—"Hallowed be thy name" (v. 9, 10). While God is our heavenly Father he is more than that. He is the Almighty. "We should go before him then with reverent adoration."

c. A right spirit—"Give us this day our daily bread," "Forgive us our sins," "Lead us not into temptation" (vv. 11-13). Those who would pray effectively must have such faith as would trust him for daily bread, and such love as would forgive those sinning against them, and such hatred of evil as to desire not to be led into temptation.

111. As to fasting (vv. 16-18).

The true reason for fasting is to be found in the opportunity it gives for a clear vision of God.

IV. As to Earthly Riches (vv. 19-24).

The Lord knew the temptations which would befall his children in their pilgrimage and the anxiety to which they would lead; therefore he set forth the proper attitude toward earthly possessions.

1. The nature of earthly riches (vv. 19-21).

a. They are uncertain (vv. 19, 20). Earthly treasures corrode, and may be taken from us.

b. They are seductive (v. 21). Christ called riches deceitful (Matt. 13: 22). It is not wrong to possess earthly treasures, but when earthly treasures possess us they become a snare unto us.

2. The effect of earthly riches (vv. 22-24).

a. They blunt the moral and spiritual perceptions (vv. 22, 23). Those who become enamored with the things of the world soon become irresponsible to spiritual things.

b. They render service null and void (v. 24). As soon as one's heart is stolen by riches, he is unfitted for spiritual service.

V. As to Faith in the Heavenly Father (vv. 25-34).

1. Be not anxious about food and clothing (vv. 25-28). To be filled with anxiety concerning food and clothing

a. Shows distrust of God (v. 30). It is useless (v. 31). Anxiety brings us absolutely nothing.

c. It is heathenish (v. 32). Those who know God as the loving Father will be free from anxious care.

2. Be sincerely anxious to seek the kingdom of God and serve him (vv. 33, 34). This means that world affairs should be subordinated to spiritual affairs.

Friendship

No matter how prominent or how numerous the advocates of error may be, that is no reason why you should espouse it. Personal friendship is one thing, friendship for error is quite another thing.

God's Name

As Philias contrived his mechanism so that his memory could never be obliterated without the destruction of his work, so the great name of God is interwoven in the texture of all that he has made.

Light on Family Tree of King Tut-Ankh-Amen

A scarab or lucky symbol which King Tut-Ankh-Amen's grandfather gave to friends attending his wedding about 1400 B. C. is announced as the most important archeological find of the season for the Haverford college expedition to Palestine.

The scarab is carved from Egyptian limestone in the shape of a beetle and measures 3 1/4 inches long and 2 1/4 inches in width. Inscriptions on the scarab trace of the genealogy of Tut-Ankh-Amen's grandmother, Queen Taty. Scientists with the expedition believe she was a "foreigner" from Phoenicia.

Dr. Elitha Grant, director of the Haverford expedition, states: "In all probability, the scarab had been placed as a magical object, having been a treasured antique for centuries in Palestine. Several marriage scarabs have been found in Egypt, but it is full of significance to find one in Palestine." The discovery points to Egyptian control of this area which, says Doctor Grant, continues to provide many suggestions of the life in the first and second Millennia B. C.—New York Times.

Uncle Henry again comes to the front with this one, to the delight of the Ananias club. Listen:

"One mornin' in '87 I was out fishin' on Gunpowder Creek in a boat when a heavy fog come up. Man you never seen sich a fog in your life. I couldn't see the bowl of my old corncob pipe it wuz so thick and my shirt got wringin' wet in a minute. Wal you know I started to pull in my line when I felt somepin' ticklin' my ear. I got scairt and whaled away with an oar and knocked down a fifty pound catfish that was swimmin' around in that thick fog." Some fog, Henry!

Athletic Department Shake-Up

(Consolidated Cackle Jan. 26)

A thorough housecleaning and reorganization of the local high school coaching staff has been demanded by a prominent star of the team, advices indicated here today. Observers are quoted as saying that they (if pushed) could locate a much meaner shake-up than this.

DENTAL CLINIC

Last week, under the direction of Miss E. B. Willis, Red Cross Nurse in Boone county, Dr. Arthur M. Laird, Clinician, State Board of Health, Bureau of Dental Health held a five and one day clinic at the court house at Burlington for the indigent children of the county. Those children who were eligible for this clinic in the first and second grades in school, provided they had not attained their ninth birthday.

The following corrections were made: Extractions of the temporary teeth, 62; extractions of the permanent teeth, 3; fillings of the temporary teeth, 65; fillings of the permanent teeth, 27; cleanings, 58; number of children worked for, 58; total corrections done 210. Miss Wilma Cotton assisted Dr. Laird in his clinic.

The largest number of the fillings were of the temporary teeth. Lots of folks are under the impression that these temporary teeth, being temporary (that is that they would be lost later in life) should not be cared for. This is a mistaken idea. They have a two fold purpose—to help in the development of the child's face and jaws and prepare a good space for the on-coming permanent teeth and to afford the child a good chewing surface until such time and the permanent teeth come into place. They have a function to perform until such time as nature indicates their replacement by the permanent teeth. They should be kept clean and filled until they are replaced by the permanent teeth.

The mouth is the gateway to the stomach and through it goes all food that we eat and this food should be clean and kept clean and not contaminated by food left in decayed teeth, or from teeth not kept clean. This is a very important fact from the child's health standpoint. If your child is to be a healthy child and grow to be a healthy man, or woman, these points in food and teeth are of the utmost importance.

BRIEF CASES

By Barefax

My dear readers,

We are here again (much against the wishes of —, and —) and bring with us an unusually large amount of 2 percent, unperfected, guaranteed impure Hamilton (school) gossip. If you are troubled with pink elephants and green giraffes, read Brief Cases before retiring, and you will sleep like Ripple Van Winkle (of the New York Winkles) in other words—Indefinitely.

The Agony Column

Mr. Barefax—I am a fiend; a chewing gum fiend. I am now chewing 16 sticks and am so nervous. What can I do? They will give me only 16 sticks at a time. I want more! Last time they deprived me of my gum I broke 6 noses, cracked 21 ribs, smashed 4 heads and fractured 3 legs before quelled. What can I do to stop this terrible craving? —Crick Crick—it seems that herbs in chewing gum are sometimes habit forming. Why not try Prigley's non-habit forming, Herbless gum?

Senior Barefax—I think your column is so charming! It is really so amusing, sparkling and witty. I have a lid (hat, as you Americans say) that I would like to sell you. It is size 7½ but as you are such an engaging person I will reduce it to 2½, what is it you say "bucks"? Waiting to hear from you.

—Senior Juan Perrio

Senior Juan Perrio—No thanks! I only wear a 7½. I know somebody that wants to sell a "quack." How about it?

A Limerick

We have a boy or 34 called skeet, Even tho' we can't say he's so sweet. He has a eye for Bertha Doolin. Although "Dit" says, "There's nothin' in doin'."

On the test his grade is K. O. But daily grades—his paper says "zero."

He doesn't seem to mind a bit Just so he can make a hit With all the girls of '34.

B. Why doesn't she put stamps on her letters anymore, Bob?

C. How will the girls like the new coach?

D. Which girl will be benched first? —Do you know?

We now present a book length novel by Wright N. Wrong:

Death at The Curb

Saul A. Death staggered down the slippery, slick, slimy alley. Blood gushed from a hundred wounds. Saul slipped, Saul fell. Death was at the curb!

By filling in the following blanks correctly we will send you absolutely free, 13 pre-cancelled American three cent stamps:

1. Fathers maiden name —
  2. Great grandmothers birth date —
  3. Names of fathers children.
  4. How Come?
  5. Write a simple-complex sentence using these letters X, Q, P, R, D, N, U, and Y.

TOBACCO EXPERT WARNS OF CIGARETTE TAX PERIL

R. M. Barker, Prominent Leaf Dealer, Says Inequitable Federal Levy On 10-Cent Smokes May Prove Disastrous For Farmer; Urges Growers To Write Their Congressmen

Disappearance of the 10-cent cigarette from the market, threatened because of the inequitable federal tax, would be disastrous to Kentucky's farmers, in the opinion of R. M. Barker, Carrollton tobacco broker and a leader in agricultural circles of the state.

"I can think of nothing that would be a worse blow to the growers than for the manufacturers of 10-cent cigarettes to shut up their shops," Mr. Barker declared. "Few farmers realize how much tobacco these companies grow and how much effect their buying has on the market price. There is grave danger that they will have to stop making 10-cent cigarettes unless the tax is adjusted."

Mr. Barker will go to Washington to testify before a Congressional subcommittee which has been appointed by the Ways and Means Committee to conduct a hearing on a proposal for revision of cigarette taxes.

Farmers To Make Trip

"Three farmers from here are going with me," Mr. Barker said. "We're going to do our best to explain how, from the standpoint of the grower, this situation must be straightened out. In this part of the state weight as well as work if the ten-cent is taken off the market."

Mr. Barker is in a position which makes it possible for him to understand the difficulties of both farmer and manufacturer. For many years he was a farmer, himself, and he still grows tobacco.

"You see," Mr. Barker explained, "the cigarette tax of 6 cents a package was fixed in 1917, when 15 cents was the bottom retail price of cigarettes. No provision was made for a proportionate tax because none was needed."

"Then two years ago the 10-cent cigarette made its appearance. The manufacturers paid the 6-cent tax without resistance, in spite of the fact that it represents 60 percent of the manufacturer's net price, while the tax is only 13 percent of the manufacturer's net price on the 15-cent cigarette."

Content With Small Gain

"These manufacturers—especially Axton-Fisher Tobacco Company and Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation of Louisville—were content with a moderate profit and they made money in spite of the heavy tax."

"But the situation is different now. They have increased the price of their cigarettes to 12 cents, and the 6-cent tax is a processing tax to pay."

"Other costs have gone up, too, cutting their profit down to a small fraction of a cent on a package. Income and state taxes have to come out of this figure, and I do not see how they can afford to make cigarettes with the 6 cents tax."

"They can't cut production costs and they cannot and ought not to give the farmer any less for his tobacco than he's getting now. The obvious thing to do is to have that tax adjusted."

Nominal Cut Asked

"They know the Government needs revenue and they are not asking for much of a cut—only three-fifths of a cent. They recommend that the tax remain at 6 cents on 15-cent cigarettes and be increased by three-fifths of a cent on more expensive brands."

"Instead of cutting the Government's revenue, this change would increase the tax income. It's a cinch the 10-cent cigarette will increase consumption if it were put on a fair footing with the 15-cent cigarette. It's a cinch there would be a big drop in Government revenues if the 10-cent cigarettes were taken off the market entirely."

"The farmer ordinarily doesn't care what happens to his tobacco after he has sold it. He doesn't care whether it is chewed, smoked or snuffed. But here is one case where it is mighty important to him what happens to the manufacturer."

"It's important to me, I'm perfectly frank about that. Last week 32.5 percent of the tobacco I bought was for the 10-cent cigarette manufacturers. And that week I bought 39.3 percent of the tobacco which was sold on the Carrollton market.

Better Price On Tens

"There's the important thing for the farmer. For the 199,095 pounds I bought for one 10-cent manufacturer, the average price was 12.28 cents. For 45,745 pounds I bought for another, the average was 10.44 cents. For the 407,490 pounds I bought for export, the average was only 7.22 cents. That shows what the ten-cent means where price is concerned."

"That purchases of the 10-cent manufacturers of cigarettes have aided farmers was demonstrated by prices for 1931 and 1932, according to Mr. Barker. In 1931, before ten-centers had entered the field, the average price on the Carrollton market was 8.26 cents. The next year, after 10-cent buyers had offered competition to the Big Four, the average increased to 12.63 cents. The increase for the burley market as a whole was even greater."

Plant Would Close

"I have 150 people working in this plant, handling tobacco," Mr. Barker continued. "If the manufacture of 10-cent cigarettes were stopped, the only thing I could do would be to shut down. That's what it means to me. What does it mean to the farmer?"

"Wait just a minute. I'll call the warehouse and ask a couple of farmers to come over to my office. We'll get their story from their own mouths. And to be sure no partiality is shown, I won't ask for anyone in particular."

In a moment the two men were there—typical Kentuckians, but with that worried look that all farmers have been wearing since the tobacco market opened. Mr. Barker explained to them the situation.

"That would be a awful thing—if the 10-cent manufacturers left the market," one of them said. "My things don't look any good any more. Of course nearly every one around here was signed up in the crop reduction and we're hoping that will pull us through."

12 Cents Poor Price

"But if the 10-cent manufacturers were to stop buying, that would throw the whole plan out of whack. No telling what would happen to the market."

The other man spoke up. "Twelve cents," he said, "isn't any kind of a price, you know. Oh, I guess we can get by on it. But it don't hardly pay to raise tobacco if you can't get more than 12 cents for it."

"Tobacco, you know, is the cash crop. It's the only thing around here that we can raise. It's the thing that we've got to raise and we've got to sell to keep going. It means shoes and overalls and fence and fertilizer and everything else that we must buy."

"Of course Mr. Barker's speaking the truth when he says he'd have to close down if the 10-cent manufacturers left the market. I reckon all the rest of us would have to close down, too."

Farmer Can Help

"Well, boys," said Mr. Barker, "it's up to you, more or less. Congress may or may not give the ten-centers a break. I'm going to put up a fight for them. But the farmer can do something, too. I wish you would be a committee of two to get all the farmers around here to write to our Congressmen and tell him what they think about this tax situation."

"How about a petition?" asked one of the farmers. "It's pretty hard to get farmers to write letters, you know."

"A petition won't do," replied Mr. Barker. "Anyone can get up a petition. The letter's the thing. They don't have to be long—just enough to tell our representative to give this tax proposal some thought. Congressman Fred M. Vinson from Kentucky is chairman of the committee that's going to hold this hearing. It wouldn't do any harm to write to him, too."

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Milk and cream keep better and sell better when produced under clean conditions. They should be clean and sweet when shipped to market. Milk utensils, separators and other equipment need strict attention at all times.

The use of pure seeds tends to prevent distribution of weeds. It is possible to reduce weed trouble on a farm by keeping weeds from going to seed, and by using care to keep from bringing in weeds with grasses, clovers, alfalfa and other crops.

Early spring is considered a good time to prepare the orchard for another season. Dead and diseased branches should be removed. Applying 12 to 15 loads of manure to the acre will help the trees. Many farmers now sow lespedeza and other legumes in the orchard.

Many farm kitchens have long, narrow windows extending almost to the floor. Some farmers have improved their kitchen by putting such windows in a horizontal position 2 or 4 feet from the floor, thus allowing wall space under them for equipment.

To avoid tobacco diseases, select land that is fertile and on which tobacco has not been grown for several years. Many fields are infected with root-rot diseases which will injure the new crop unless root-rot resistant varieties are used.

Grape vines should be sprayed for scale before the buds begin to swell. This insect pest has been increasing in abundance and destructiveness. Use a 2 percent oil emulsion or lime-sulphur concentrate diluted with eight parts of water.

Good results of using lime and phosphate on the land, and of raising legumes such as sweet clover and soybeans, are being stressed by the Menifee agent. Pasture mixtures are also being shown in demonstrations.

Fifty-one calves have been placed for raising with Garrard county 4-H calf club members, who will enter them in the fall fat cattle show in Louisville.

"THE CROSS ROADS NEWSPAPER"

VOLUME 59

Established 1875

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1934

NUMBER 3

NEW HEAD

OF COUNTY INFIRMARY NAMED BY FISCAL COURT AT REGULAR MEETING THIS WEEK—O. S. EDDINS SUCCEEDS F. H. ROUSE.

The Boone County Fiscal Court, composed of J. H. Huey, of Petersburg, Hubert White, of Burlington, and G. C. Ransom, of Verona, awarded the superintendency of the County Infirmary to O. S. Eddins, of Burlington, at his bid of $450 per year Tuesday afternoon. This bid was the lowest of five that were presented.

Other bidders who competed with Mr. Eddins were O. E. Rouse, of Petersburg, F. H. Rouse, Burlington, W. W. Green, Burlington, and B. E. Aylor, Burlington. The contract was awarded to Mr. Eddins after a lengthy debate by the court members.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddins will make competent and considerate caretakers for the unfortunate of the county and at the same time give the county a businesslike administration.

However, conditions certainly can not be very much improved over those that have existed at the infirmary during the administration of Mr. and Mrs. Rouse. They have been there for the past twenty-three years and during that time have improved both methods and appearances, having been highly complimented by a number of grand juries.

Elmer Kirkpatrick, Boone county jailer, was reemployed by the court house at a reduced salary, the court pointing to its reduced revenue as a necessity for cutting expenses, although fully cognizant of the fact that Mr. Kirkpatrick's work has been greatly increased during the past few months.

As we go to press the court is making an effort to complete its business for this meeting. A number of important matters must be acted upon, but publication details will have to be deferred until the next issue of the Recorder.

The court, just before adjournment, announced the re-employment of Miss Eunie B. Willis for the first six months of the year as Public Health Nurse. This service is fully appreciated by the court, but further action could not be taken until sufficient revenue was in sight.

TRI-STATE PRICES

A phone call from the Tri-State Warehouse in Covington at press time Wednesday afternoon quotes the following prices: R. Smith and C. N. Judge, Union, 1535 pounds, average $15.33, John Sleet, Walton, 735 pounds, average $15.97; Lewis Barnes and S. D. Delf, Williams-town, 890 pounds, average $22.04. Averages generally were reported considerably on the mend.

Joe Maners, of Williamstown was a caller at the Recorder office Saturday. Mr. Maners is employed by The Grant County News.

Col. Lute Bradford, of Union precinct, was a business visitor to the county seat Monday, and while in town called at the Recorder office and swapped a few jokes with the printers.

Albert Schwibold, of near Florence, called at this office while in town last Saturday on business. Mr. Schwibold is not a very frequent visitor to the county seat.

W. B. Reeves, of Constance, was a business caller at this office last Saturday. Mr. Reeves is one of Boone's industrious farmers.

Mrs. Sallie Ryle, of Burlington, R. D. 2, was a business visitor to Burlington last Saturday, and while in town called and subscribed for the Recorder.

Robert and Wyman Terrill, of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, were in Burlington on business last Sunday morning. It has been many, many years since the writer saw either of these boys, who once lived near the Lawrenceburg Ferry in Boone county.

Mrs. R. E. Berkshire and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Cotton were calling on C. D. Benson and family Sunday afternoon.

WIN TWO GAMES

The Burlington Tomcats and Kittens drove down for a double win Saturday night before the largest crowd of the current season when they defeated the Florence Knights and Knightengales in rather handy fashion.

The girls turned in a surprise score when they turned back the lasses in black and gold by the county of —. The boys team took an early advantage and never were in actual danger, although the Knights were pressing hard toward the finish. The score at the half was 14-4, the final being 22-15.

On Friday night the Tomcats defeated Erlanger at Erlanger 25-21, while the Kittens set back the Ludlow girls —.

Semi-finals in girls division will be played at 4 p. m. and 8:15 p. m. Friday, while semi-finals boys games will take place Saturday afternoon at 2 and 3 o'clock. Final games will be played Saturday night.

J. E. Riddell, of near Hebron, called at this office Monday and placed an ad. in the classified column of the Recorder. He says he always gets results when he advertises in this column.

W. C. Weaver was confined to the house several days the past week with a severe cold.

The new house that D. H. Norris is having erected near Burlington on the Petersburg pike, is nearing completion.

Mrs. Wm. White, of Petersburg, was a visitor in Burlington, Tuesday of this week.

Milton Kelly, of near Waterloo, left Monday morning for Lawrenceburg, Ind., where he has a position in the distillery at that place.

Howard Huey, of near Petersburg, was a business visitor to the Hub Tuesday morning.

Cecil Presser, of Union, was a business visitor to Burlington Tuesday. Mr. Presser seldom comes to town that he does not come in to see the printers.

Hubert Brady, Howard Ryle, Edson and Robt. Maurer were on the Carrollton tobacco market Monday. They report prices very good.

GROWERS URGED

TO SIGN AAA CONTRACTS—ONLY FIFTY-SIX GROWERS NEEDED TO MAKE BOONE COUNTY A 100 PERCENT SIGN-UP COUNTY.

Six hundred and thirty signed AAA tobacco contracts covering 2431 acres were on file at the County Agent's office on Monday of this week. This represents 90 percent of the total tobacco acreage grown in Boone county according to county agent, H. R. Forkner.

The campaign has met with steady progress from the start right on thru the past week. Forty-one growers signed the past week, leaving 56 growers whose contracts have not reached the County Agent's office or who are yet to sign. These growers are expected to sign and bring the county up to 100 percent before the closing date. Those fifty-six remaining growers if they expect to sign, are urged to do so immediately for two reasons, first the Community Control Board elections will be held, this coming week, and second no contracts can be received after the closing date.

The county campaign committee has done a splendid job in offering an opportunity for every grower to learn about and to sign a government contract. The committee is expected to meet on Wednesday of this week and set the dates for the holding of the Community Control Board Elections. The campaign committees job will be completed with the holding of these elections.

Those growers who signed contracts the past week are as follows: Ray K. Newman, Harry D. Mayhugh, J. B. Rouse, Thomas W. Rice, William Craig, R. B. Parsley, Geo. Pfalzgraf, William Gray, B. F. Hosman, Bert Loomis, Oscar Smith, John L. Vest, Kenneth E. Easton, J. A. McCubbin, E. D. Roberts, Mrs. Annie Allen, Charles Batcher, John Deuter, A. J. Scott, Albert Parker, Mrs. Mary Kelly, J. F. West, Robert G. Robinson, Kirtley McWeety Adm., M. A. Yelton (Dr.) Heiman J. Middendorf, H. L. Hudson, Farmers Bank of Petersburg, A. D. Sowden, Mrs. Flora Y. Tanner, G. B. Yates, J. L. Morgan, W. R. Slinger, B. M. Stephens, Wesley Tugate, L. L. Tucker, Ezra L. Aylor, Adm., C. F. Blankenbaker Mrs. Amanda Tanner, Frank Allen.

SATURDAY LAST DAY

County Clerk C. D. Benson and his assistant, Mrs. Dorothy Ryle, continue busily at their task of issuing all of Boone county's auto license tags before midnight of Saturday, February 10th. While they have been moving at a reasonably rapid rate yet there are hundreds of cars still unlicensed.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

ORGANIZE FARM CREDIT ASSOCIATION

A North Kentucky Production Credit Association was organized at Independence on last Friday, February 2nd. Kenton, Campbell, Boone, Grant, Pendleton, Gallatin, Owen and Carroll counties are to comprise the association.

The association will be on a plan similar to the Federal Land Banks and loans will be made to solvent farmers for short periods for livestock and crop production. The association will be under the supervision of the Federal government and each farmer making a loan will be required to take 5 percent in capitol stock.

A meeting will be held in Boone county in the near future to select a director to the association.

BIG TRI-COUNTY

UTOPIA MEETING
Boone, Kenton and Gallatin County Utopia Clubs will meet at Hebron on this coming Saturday, February 10th in a big Tri-County meeting.

Special speakers on fruits, landscape, gardening, bee keeping and foods will be on the program to discuss improved agricultural and home economics practices and to advise with members on their project work.

Mr. Carl Jones will be in charge of the recreational program. The

J. A. Riddell, turned ninety, was among the court day visitors in Burlington Monday. Uncle Jimmy was spinning some yarns of ancient vintage of which he has an unlimited and highly interesting supply.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Craddock entertained relatives from Burlington, Petersburg and Union over the past week-end.

County Superintendent D. H. Norris and family moved last week to their new home on the Petersburg pike about a mile from town.

Chas. B. Beall, Jr., of the Bullittsville community, was in Burlington on business Monday morning.

R. T. Stephens, one of our oldest and most valued patrons and readers, accompanied by his daughter, made us a call Wednesday afternoon. Uncle Dick says that if the shore of the Ohio river keeps moving toward Rising Sun that Rabbit Hash soon will be located in the center of Boone county.

Don't forget the Eastern Star Valentine social at their hall here Wednesday evening, February 14. See other columns for further particulars.

Don't forget the Eastern Star Valentine social at their hall here Wednesday evening, February 14. See other columns for further particulars.

The third meeting of the Rose Union of the Epworth League composed of the leagues from Burlington, Walton, Florence and Erlanger churches will be held at Burlington on Monday night, February 12. Arrangements are being made by the local committee to entertain seventy guests. A very interesting program is being arranged by the program committee. The principal speaker of the evening will be Rev. King, of Erlanger. A recreation and refreshment hour also is planned.

Friends of Mrs. Louisa White regret to learn of her recent very sudden illness at her home in Burlington.

Mrs. D. R. Blythe, Mrs. J. M. Botts, and Misses Martha Blythe and Wilma Cotton attended the 32nd. annual birthday services at the Latonia Christian church last Sunday. Rev. H. C. Runyan has been their pastor during all that time and has been tremendously successful. Rev. Runyan is one of the most widely known pastors in the state and has a large circle of friends and admirers in Boone county.

LUDLOW AT FLORENCE

With only two games left on their schedule before the county tournament the Florence Knights and Knightengales will entertain the fast Ludlow teams on their court Friday night. Both Florence teams have improved lately, but they will be up against some very tough opposition when they tackle the Ludlow teams.

POINT PLEASANT

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The regular services will be held at the Point Pleasant Christian church, Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 9 and 11. "The Church That Serves the Community" urges all to unite with us in these services. At the Saturday evening service, the minister, Wilbur Wallace, will preach a sermon "that should prove of especial interest to young people. The subject will be "Youth's Heritage."

The subject of the sermon on Sunday morning will be "Which Shall Be Greatest?" The Sunday evening service will center around the theme, "They Were Called Christians." The morning service will be held at 11 o'clock and the evening services at 8 o'clock (E. S. T.).

Under the leadership of Mr. Adam Dolwick, superintendent and a competent group of teachers, a fine Sunday school is held each Sunday at 10 a. m.

Jerome Wilson, of Burlington route two, was a caller at our office Wednesday afternoon and left his subscription for the Recorder. We welcome Mr. Wilson to our increasing list of subscribers.

CLOSE BATTLE

IS EXPECTED WHEN BURLINGTON TOMCATS MEET WALTON BEARCATS SATURDAY NIGHT—RECORD CROWD EXPECTED TO SEE GAMES.

Boone county basketball fans will have an opportunity of witnessing a struggle between two of her foremost teams Saturday night when the Walton Bearcats and Burlington Tomcats clash at Walton.

These two teams were not scheduled to meet before the county tournament, but the curiosity of the fans is aroused to such a high pitch as to which team is the better that Coaches Lamb and Beverley agreed Tuesday morning to terms for the game. The fact that these two fives will meet each other first in the tournament also was an incentive.

Many followers of Burlington think their team is best, while Walton likewise has adherents who aver that the Bearcats will completely devour the Tomcats. However, the majority cling to the belief that there is little difference in the respective merits of the two aggregations as at present lined up.

Coach Beverly looks for his biggest crowd of the season at the Walton gym when these teams get together Saturday night. A preliminary will be played between the two girls teams. The first game will start at 7:15 Central Standard time.

The two coaches have announced the following as their starting line-ups:

Team	Pos.	Team
Walton	F.	Burlington
Laws	F.	Sebree
Dickerson	F.	Kirkpatrick
Lusby	F.	or Cook
Demolsey	C	Voshell
Conrad	G	Snow
Stansifer	G	Rouse

TRAGIC DEATH

EXPERIENCED BY FORMER CITIZEN OF BOONE COUNTY—WAS BURNED TO DEATH IN HIS HOME IN CINCINNATI FRIDAY.

News of the death of W. M. Conner, who met a tragic death in Cincinnati last Friday, was received here with intense sadness by his many friends.

Mr. Conner was well known by the older residents of Burlington, although it had been some 45 years since he made his home here. Although a carpenter by trade, he was engaged here for a time in the mercantile business with the late Dudley Rouse.

He is survived by his widow, Anna Conner, and a number of other relatives. L. A. Conner, of Burlington was a nephew. The remains were brought to Burlington for burial Saturday, February 3.

For the benefit of those of our readers who have not learned the particulars of his death we shall relate that Mr. Conner fell with a burning oil stove while carrying it from one room to another in this home. The flames that started as a result soon spread thru the entire house. Neighbors and firemen rescued both Mr. and Mrs. Conner from the flames, but the former immediately rushed back, evidently after some valuable that he wished to save. His body was found later charred far beyond recognition.

INJURED IN ACCIDENT

Ivan McCormick, 18, of the Union and Big Bone neighborhood, is recovering from injuries sustained last Friday when a truck he was driving skidded from the highway between Union and Florence. He was returning from Covington where he had delivered a load of country produce. He was removed immediately to St. Elizabeth hospital, Covington, where his wounds were treated. His condition is reported not serious.

BURLEY SIGN-UP TO CLOSE FEB. 17TH

Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky. Feb. 6—The burley tobacco reduction sign-up is to close February 17, according to an announcement by J. B. Hutson, chief of the tobacco section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Farmers who have not signed contracts but have planned to do so should see their county agents or local campaign committees without delay. Provisions have been made for signing contracts in all sections of the state.

County agents and local committeemen are adequately supplied with information regarding the terms of the contract and are available to discuss the tobacco plan with farmers who may not have full information. It is important that farmers get this information and sign contracts at once if they expect to participate in the program.

The sign-up is going forward satisfactorily in all parts of the state, and the AAA estimates 80 percent of the burley acreage in Kentucky is now under contract. In several of the important producing counties the sign-up is nearly 100 percent.

Several counties now are planning to perfect their control associations and all of them will do so as soon as the membership campaign is closed.

MEETING

The W. M. S. of the Burlington Baptist church will meet at the home of Mrs. A. G. McMullen on Thursday, Feb. 8th at 2 p. m. All members are earnestly requested to be present.

Stella Gaines, Pub. Chmn.

Prof. Reuben Asbury and wife, of Hamilton, spent the week-end with Prin. E. E. Kirkwood and wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Juett and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wilson and children, of Williams-town, were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Combs.

Mrs. Kate Judy, of Jonesville, is spending some time with her granddaughter, Mrs. Raymond Combs and family.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Money Bill Passes, Dollar Is Devalued—Secretary Perkins Proposes Federal Tax for Permanent Dole Funds—Polish-German Peace Treaty.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

YIELDING by a large majority to the President's demands, the senate passed his New Deal money bill, inserting only a few noncontroversial amendments to which the house readily agreed. The administration's victory was decisive and was preceded by the rejection of two major proposals which were obnoxious to Mr. Roosevelt and his financial advisors. The first of these provided that control of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund should be given to a board of five instead of to the secretary of the treasury. This was defeated by the votes of 50 Democrats, three "radical" Republicans and the single Farmer-Labor senator. The second amendment offered was put forward by the silver bloc and was beaten only by the assistance of 17 Republican senators, for 28 Democrats were recorded in favor of it, and the vote stood 43 to 45. It would have provided for the purchase and monetization of silver.

The final vote on the measure was 66 to 23. One lone Democrat had the nerve to stand out against the administration and uphold by his vote his convictions, although several others had opposed the bill in debate. The man who was true to himself was Carter Glass of Virginia, secretary of treasury under Wilson and co-author of the federal reserve act. Senator Gore of Oklahoma was paired against the measure but did not vote. Senator McAdoo of California had done a lot of opposition talking but quit with that and went into the "aye" column. All of the independent Republicans and Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, supported the bill.

Though the money bill has been summarized before in this column, it may be well to state again its main provisions, as follows: The treasury is given title to all the nation's monetary gold stocks, including $3,500,000,000 held by the federal reserve banks. The President is authorized to revalue the dollar at 50 to 60 per cent of its present statutory gold equivalent. Coinage of gold is declared at an end. The metal is to be held in bullion form in the treasury as backing for paper currency. The $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund is created out of the increased value of the gold accruing as a result of devaluation of the dollar. It is placed in the sole charge of the secretary of the treasury and he is given authority to expend it in virtually any transactions he may deem necessary for stabilizing the dollar abroad.

ACTING under the authority conferred on him by the new money law, President Roosevelt proceeded to devalue the official dollar to 50.09 cents by proclaiming a reduction of the dollar's gold content from 25.8 grains nine-tenths fine to 15.521 grains nine-tenths fine. At the same time the President announced the government would buy gold at a price of $35 an ounce.

The change in the dollar's gold content, the first to be made in a century, will not be immediately appreciable to the general public; but it is the expectation of the administration that it will bring about a general rise in commodity prices and that this will induce an increased volume of business, which will enable producers to make more money and therefore to raise wages. Only time can tell whether this theory is correct or fallacious.

Shortly after the President's announcement that a new form of currency was being prepared by the bureau of engraving to take care of the problems created by transfer of title to all federal reserve bank gold to the treasury, Gold certificates, the same size as currency now in circulation, will be used. Instead of the absolute promise to pay in gold carried by gold certificates previously issued, however, these will say:

"This is to certify that there is on deposit in the treasury of the United States of America (blank) dollars in gold, payable to the bearer on demand as authorized by law."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S administration has proposed to congress legislation that would bring the stock and commodity exchanges of the country under the rigid control of the federal government. The President's interdepartmental committee has made suggestions for the federal licensing of those markets and the creation of a governmental agency with extraordinary powers to regulate their operations. The banking and currency committees of the senate and house have these recommendations under consideration as a basis for legislation soon to be introduced.

The interstate commerce committee of the house is working on legislation, also proposed by the interdepartmental committee, that will make the country's communications systems subject to similar regulation by the federal government.

OUTSTANDING in current foreign news is the fact that Germany and Poland have signed a peace pact that is to endure for ten years. The treaty stipulates that during that period under no conditions is force to be used in relations between these countries. The successful negotiation of this pact is considered a great triumph for Joseph Lipski, Poland's minister to Germany, and for Foreign Minister Joseph Beck, and the jubilant Poles assert that their nation must now be considered one of the great powers of Europe. They are especially proud of the way in which they have blocked the plans of Maxim Litvinov, foreign commissar of Russia, who was trying to combine with Poland for a protectorate over the Baltic states. They appeared to be going along with him but were secretly conducting the negotiations with Berlin.

According to European correspondents, one reason for Germany's radical change of policy toward Poland is Warsaw's disinclination to become in any way involved with the problem of Austria, which is expected there to turn Nazi in the near future. Polish statesmen privately state Poland does not oppose the Austro-German Anschluss (union). They claim once this is accomplished the question of obtaining a port on the Adriatic sea would become more important to Germany than the return of the Polish corridor.

Announcement of the Polish-German treaty created a sensation in Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, all of which countries have quarrels with Germany and had been relying on Poland's support.

PERMANENT dole funds in all the states, created mainly by a new federal tax upon all employers, is the latest plan of Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor.

Her scheme, which is rather complicated, provides for the levying of the tax on the basis of employers' pay rolls, beginning on July 1, 1935, and calls on all state legislatures to set up unemployment funds in each commonwealth. The employer would be given the choice of paying the full tax or contributing voluntarily to the fund in his state. The plan is being put into the form of a bill to be introduced in congress. Co-operating with Secretary Perkins are Senator Wagner of New York and Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland.

"The proposed federal tax bill," read the formal announcement, "will work in such a way as to promote the speedy passage of state unemployment insurance laws. The federal bill will not define what kind of laws the states shall pass. Wisconsin is the only state which now has an unemployment insurance law, but measures are pending in many other states."

Secretary Perkins went to Indianapolis where the convention of the United Mine Workers of America was in session, and told the men that the only permanent solution of the unemployment problem is shorter working hours.

The miners in a hot debate denounced communism and re-adopted sections of their constitution which bar members of the communist party from union membership.

FEDERAL JUDGE ALEXANDER AKERMAN in Tampa, Fla., declared the agricultural adjustment act unconstitutional, saying it is "so full of holes you could drive eight yoke of oxen through it." He issued to a group of citrus growers an injunction to prevent the state control committee from enforcing proration orders. Officials in Washington refused to comment on the judge's decision.

STATE directors of the National Emergency council met with Administrator Hugh Johnson and were amazed to learn from him that Secretary of Labor Perkins had already appointed many of the labor advisers in their offices without consulting them. Nathan Straus, Jr., of New York and George Creel of California were among those who questioned the propriety of this course.

"I am not here to discuss the wisdom of the matter," was the general's brusque reply. "The appointments already have been made."

THREE daring Russian aeronauts ascended in a stratosphere balloon to the record height of 87,585 feet, according to their radioed messages, and then perished when their balloon crashed 350 miles southeast of Moscow. Their instruments were destroyed, so their claim to a new record cannot be established.

HAVING read of speeches in the Japanese parliament predicting that Japanese auxiliary vessels would outrank those of the United States by 1936 and that Japan would withdraw from the proposed naval conference of 1935, our senators prepared to rush through the Vinson naval construction bill which had been passed by the house. It calls for expenditures of $475,000,000 and $507,000,000 over a five year period in order to bring the United States forces up to treaty strength.

In Tokyo Kenkichi Yoshizawa, former foreign minister, proposed to the house of peers that the 1935 conference be abandoned, expressing fear that Japan would be forced to wreck it. He and other Japanese statesmen, however, reiterated that there was no conceivable reason for war between their country and the United States. Minister of War Hayashi also denied that Japan was making preparations for war with Russia, and said the Japanese army in Manchukuo would not assist in any attempt to extend the boundaries of that state.

Russia has a chip on its shoulder, and the convention of the all-union Communist party wildly cheered Stalin when he warned everybody "not to poke their snouts into the Soviet potato patch." The dictator added:

"It is a mistake to think an ambition to wage war against the Soviet union and share its territory is held only by Japanese military circles. We know very well that it is shared by some political circles in Europe."

This last remark, it was believed was intended as a reference to Germany.

SOLUTION of the Lindbergh baby kidnapping and murder may come as a result of the arrest in Chicago of Verne Sankey, former South Dakota ranchman who started on a career as a kidnaper two years ago. He readily admitted that he "snatched" Charles Boettcher of Denver and Haskell Bohn of St. Paul, but denied any connection with the Lindbergh tragedy. However, the authors are in possession of various facts and clues which they believe may link him with that case.

Two Illinoisans, Frank Souder and Gale Swoley, were taken to the Joliet penitentiary to begin serving life sentences for the kidnapping of James Hackett of Blue Island.

Indiana authorities were preparing to try, for the murder of a policeman in East Chicago, John Dillinger, bank robber and desperado, who was captured with several of his gang in Tucson, Ariz. The outlaw was rushed by airplane to Indiana to prevent his extradition to Wisconsin, where he was wanted for robbery.

CAMILLE CHAUTEAUX and his French mission didn't last as long as had been expected. Without a vote for a vote by the chamber of deputies that would oust them, the cabinet members all handed their resignations to President Lebrun, being unable longer to withstand the storm of attacks resulting from the Bayonne bond swindle. Former President Gaston Doumergue was entreated to accept the premiership, but refused on the ground that he is too old to head the government in such a critical time. Herriot and Daladier, both former premiers, were the next possibilities. However, the two both had too many political enemies, though they are respected and have clean records. However, Daladier, undertook the job of forming a new government.

WHILE President Roosevelt was celebrating his fifty-second birthday with relatives and close personal friends in the White House, many thousands of his fellow citizens were enjoying parties, balls and other entertainments arranged to mark the anniversary. These took place in hundreds of cities, towns and villages all over the country, and the proceeds will be turned over to the Warm Springs Foundation for Victims of Infantile Paralysis.

THOSE who attempt to graft on the Public Works administration are going to have a hard time getting away with it, according to Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Addressing the convention of the Associated General Contractors of America in Washington, the secretary warned them that collusion on bids for contracts or materials, skimming on materials and doctoring of specifications so as to eliminate competition would be uncovered by the government agents and punished. He pointed to the indictment of Lieut. Gov. Nels G. Kraschel of Iowa and an associate as a sample of what cheats may expect.

"I am not pronouncing judgment in this case," said Mr. Ickes. "If those men now under indictment are innocent they have nothing to fear. If a jury of their neighbors find them guilty, they will pay the penalty."

"There are two points to this story and that is the reason I have told it to you. One is that the Public Works administration will pursue any charge of graft or corruption or chiseling regardless of where the trail may lead. The other point is that even an official of high degree does not have enough political pull to escape the outstretched hand of justice if he offends against the law."

Criminal prosecutions in six cases involving complaints of graft in the Civil Works administration were ordered by the division of investigation of the Public Works administration. Three of the cases are in Kentucky, one in Maryland, one in Arkansas, and one in Indiana.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Increasingly since the end of the World War, cable dispatches from Europe have told of activities of the "right" wing political parties, and of "bloc" and other divisions of political opinion. The expressions have become so common that newspapers and other periodicals no longer enclose the words "right" or "left" in quotation marks. In other words, those two terms have come to be understood as meaning conservative or radical thought, respectively, and with this change has come an application for them to our own political set-up.

Lately, I have been inquiring of many political leaders for their opinions as to the direction President Roosevelt may be expected to head in his administration of affairs of our nation. The real way to judge, it appears, is by classification of his advisers. If they are of the left wing, it is to be assumed that he is aligned with the radical group, and if his advisers are to be catalogued as leaning to the right, the conservative element must be considered as dominant in the affairs of the nation.

All of us recognize that there are certain of the President's policies, thus far developed, that are decidedly radical, as measured by the course of the nation in previous years. Yet, the men and women with whom I have consulted point out that among his policies are those that have been fostered traditionally by those who call themselves conservative.

I found the same results in inquiries about his advisers. Some of them long have been known as radicals; some of them have stood with the conservatives, and with it all some of his advisers heretofore have been known as Republicans, some have been found in the two major political parties at different times, and some are old-time Democrats. It is apparently a new political party, but still under the Democratic label.

When one takes a look at the President's policies, the things he has done under the guise of Let Business Manage Itself out of the depression, an attempt to analyze his leanings to the right or the left becomes more difficult. For example, the Democratic party long has fought against trusts, big combinations, big business generally. Yet, it was President Roosevelt who projected the NRA into our economic structure with an appended statutory provision that anti-trust laws shall not operate against corporations and businesses that agree to operate under the codes of NRA. The Democratic party always has talked about protecting the little man, a small business. But the NRA has been attacked by such liberals or radicals as Senators Nye of North Dakota, Norris of Nebraska, and Borah of Idaho, as being a death sentence for the man with a small business.

On the other hand, I asked in a good many places whether the principle of NRA was revolutionary in the sense of a general change in our economic life, and everywhere the answer was that actually NRA proposes to give business more power to manage itself. This is the attitude of General Johnson, NRA boss. The codes, he says, are for the purpose of having business manage itself by men of its own choosing with only a little government supervision.

With the agricultural adjustment administration, the AAA, answers to my queries were different. Most everyone views the AAA as being wholly revolutionary, as compared with our traditional methods of dealing with such problems. It is, indeed, an outright overturning of our established principles. Under the principle of AAA, the federal government is laying special taxes on special classes for the benefit of a special class. Whether you agree that the nation's agriculture must be saved by that manner or whether your conclusions hold such methods of taxation to be discriminatory, the fact remains that the AAA is based on class taxation.

In supporting that legislation and in giving Secretary Wallace and Administrator Davis a free hand to develop the new scheme, Mr. Roosevelt is regarded by the political students as having gone as far to the left as the most radical could desire, short only of actual government management of the industry. It is only necessary to think of crop control, government purchase of pigs to prevent surpluses on the markets and the payment of benefits to farmers for signing crop reduction agreements to realize the extent to which the President has gone.

The Tennessee Valley authority is another agency that might be held to be a long step to the left by the President. That is purely government ownership and government participation in business. It is to be remembered that the TVA not only is going to produce nitrates for the farmers, but it is going to produce electricity for the farmers and the residents of towns and cities. Further, it is going to engage in selling equipment that uses electricity, such things as washing machines, electric irons and other equipment for the household. Attention also might be called in connection with the TVA to the fact that it will permit little or no competition in the areas where it operates, and if it fails to make expenses the taxpayers of the whole country share the burden.

Mr. Roosevelt's monetary plans, his projected devaluation of the dollar, are radical, and yet they have had the support of some of the conservatives, with sharp criticism coming at the same time from the ranks of radicals. For example, Senator McAdoo, of California, one of the chief supporters of the Roosevelt candidacy and a man of recognized radical leanings, was one of the main critics against the President's program of seizing the gold held by the federal reserve banks. Senator McAdoo is a former secretary of the treasury, and stood solidly with Senator Glass, a Virginia Democrat and also former secretary of the treasury, in fighting that provision of the bill.

Then, we have seen the spectacle of Senator Arthur Robinson, an Indiana Republican who cannot be called conservative by anybody, in the role of broadcasting a warning that Mr. Roosevelt wants to be a dictator like Mussolini, of Italy, and Hitler, of Germany. The Indiana Robinson has assailed President Roosevelt in vicious fashion. During these same days when the Indiana Robinson was pointing out how he could see the President moving towards a dictatorship, there was Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, an old-time, conservative Democrat, serving valiantly as the President's leader in the senate. The Arkansas Robinson has managed all Rooseveltian maneuvers in the senate, whether they led to the right or the left. He has jumped on the Indiana Robinson for his attacks on the President's plans that were held by the Indiana to be leading directly to dictatorship, and in the same breath has avowed his conservatism.

And so it is in the house of representatives. There is Speaker Rainey of Illinois, always known as a Democrat of radical leanings. Along side him is working Representative Byrns of Tennessee, as Democratic leader in the house. Mr. Byrns has been catalogued as conservative through his long term of service. Among the house and senate committee chairmen, the same mixture may be seen.

One may carry the analysis into the cabinet and find much the same circumstance. Secretary Wallace, of agriculture, a son of a former Republican secretary of agriculture, is of the left wing, but he cannot go along with the radical ideas of isolation. He says that won't solve the problems of the farmer. There is "Big Jim" Farley, the postmaster general, a conservative in training and in belief, and Cordell Hull, secretary of state, who was never inclined to any of the new untried schemes or dreams of the left wing of his party.

Secretary Ickes, of the interior department, was a campaigner for Theodore Roosevelt as a bull moose candidate. His wife is a Republican member of the Illinois legislature. But despite his previously accepted left-leaning, Secretary Ickes is regarded in Washington as conservative in most respects. So is Secretary Perkins, head of the Labor department and the only woman in the cabinet, although on labor questions she has been more to the left than to the right. Secretary Morgenthau, now in the treasury, cannot be catalogued otherwise than a left winger. Mr. Morgenthau's own philosophy, however, is quite subordinated, since the President's chief interest in recent months has been on lines of monetary revision and the treasury secretary simply carries out orders.

Going further among the President's advisers, we find Lewis Douglas, director of the budget, an Arizona copper magnate, almost directly tied in with "Wall Street" as New York's financial interests are termed, and Jesse Jones, of Texas, chairman of the gigantic Reconstruction Finance corporation, a banker, a big business man, a conservative in almost every sense.

Then, when you get into the list of professors who have been influential in administration affairs, you face a flock of left-wing adherents. Professor Tugwell, an assistant secretary of agriculture, actually would remake our economic structure along his own professional lines; Professor Warren, who has stood closer to the President than any other, although not in an official post, is credited with being responsible for the monetary revision policy—the 60-cent dollar, which is now upon us, and Dr. William I. Meyers, of Cornell, now head of farm credit administration, has been of the left wing for years.

Balancing off these, there are distinctly conservative men in the cabinet like Secretary Swanson, of the navy, Secretary Dorn of war, and some of their subordinates who, nevertheless, exercise important executive functions.

All of which leads certainly to one conclusion, that there is in this New Deal an adventure into new realms of administration. Where it will lead only history can record.

HONOLULU FLIGHT MORE THAN JUST ORDINARY "HO"

Lieut. Com. Kneller McGinnis regards the mass flight of six Navy planes from San Francisco to Honolulu as simply a routine performance. These planes were designated for patrol duty at Pearl Harbor. Instead of being shipped to their destination, they were flown by a crew of 30 men over 2,400 miles of open Pacific. To skilled fliers this may be "just another night hop." But it is nevertheless of striking significance in the development of long-distance aviation, both commercial and military.

The stretch between the United States and Hawaii is the longest over-water hop in flying the Pacific. Between Hawaii and the Philippines or other parts of Asia a number of islands might serve as stopping points. General Balbo brought the Italian air squadron to the United States last summer without making any nonstop flights equal in distance to the one just completed by the American planes. They have set a new distance record for mass flights. Almost any part of the world may be reached without flying over more than 2,400 miles of open sea in a single stage.

Aviators have spanned the distance between our western coast and Honolulu a number of times. But most of these flights have been experimental solos. When six navy planes make the trip in formation without accident or undue difficulty the range of the airplane as an instrument of destruction in war time is graphically illustrated.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

"Take the horse around to the stable and find your master," said Smif abruptly. She wanted to be alone. To enter her home as if it were already hers before the world. As she mounted the steps, she asked herself once again impatiently, why Bill-Lee did not write.

Pushing aside the screen door, she entered the hall. Here all was as it had been in the old days. Invitingly open, smelling of—what was that familiar odor? Beeswax! How she loved that smell—and the parlor would have bowls of potpourri, she was sure. It was amazing how little was changed.

Sunk in deep contentment, she wandered from room to room and only when she met a reflection in a long mirror was she conscious of a sense of unfamiliarity. The reflection given back should be of a little girl with wild bronze curls and scratched sunburned legs. Well, she was glad if something had to be changed that it was she rather than the place.

It was in what was evidently Stone's office or study that she found the portrait. It was hung on the wall facing his desk, an old mahogany kidney-shaped affair, the work of a good Colonial cabinet maker, but new to her. Entirely suited to the house, she was glad to observe.

She sat down in his chair and looked critically at the painting.

It really was an extraordinary combination of the two characters, hers and Lorraine Lovely. One could see in it whichever one was looking for. And it was rather pathetic that Stone should have hung it as he had. Evidently he clung to this great-grandmother because she was a Lovely and through her he felt some right to be in possession of the Lovely acres.

A scurrying of little paws brought her to her feet. Voltaire and Beaucare were outdistancing their master. He must have told them she was there. She went into the corridor to meet them as Stone entered from the portico.

"Smif!" he cried, "this is too good to be true. When did you come and where are you staying?"

"I reached Culthorpe yesterday afternoon," she said, devoting more attention to the adoring dogs than to him. "And I'm certainly glad to see you and the pups."

"And the old place? How do you think it looks? I haven't spoiled it, have I?"

"That's the strange thing.—Not that you haven't spoiled it but that it looks so exactly as I remember it. I was afraid that I had an impossible ideal in my mind—and here it is as I had dreamed."

Stone was pleased. He could have had no warmer praise than her expressive face offered him.

"It seemed to me too perfect to change," he said, which tribute satisfied even Smif's exacting demands for appreciation of Lovylea.

"The dogs took well," she remarked. "And at last you are established here for all time. Tell me, have you heard from Captain Miles?"

"And that's an amazing thing," Stone declared, "wait till I get his letter." He went into his study and came out with the letter in his hand. "And now," he said half shyly, "let's go out and sit on the steps while we read it together. You've no idea, Smif, how I've longed to do simple little things like that with you. As if I had really been your brother William."

Smif was touched, his words made so clear to her his past loneliness. "You mustn't call him that," she seated herself while he lounged on the step below her. "He is Bill-Lee, every one around here. Hand over that letter. I'm consumed with curiosity."

"It amounts to an answer, although it came so soon that it must have crossed mine en route. It leaves no doubt of what his reply will be."

Smif flung off her hat and let the breeze play around her forehead; then, her bronze head close to his dark one, holding the paper so that he too could see the bold writing, she read it through in silence.

"Don't tell me there's no Providence!" she exclaimed when they had finished it. "This fits in too beautifully. Isn't it wonderful? Have you begun to search for a place for him? I'll help you—"

"What would you think of Rock-moss?" Stone drawled. "This isn't the only letter I've had. Mercy writes me she is becoming beautiful beyond compare. She's bound to marry now, isn't she?"

He looked at Smif and she looked back at him, not absolutely certain she read his expression aright. A man who never laughed was so baffling.

"Yes," she agreed finally, "I've no doubt Miss Mercedes will marry. Like me, she has been delivered from the curse of fatness."

"You never were fat, Smif," Stone averred. "I grant you Mercy was. I'm crazy to see what she looks like, aren't you?"

Smif was at once aware that she would be able to bear it with equianimity if she never laid eyes on Miss Mercedes again. But it would not do to say so.

"I have no doubt she will be amazing," she said briefly. "Come, show me the stables; then I must go back to Culthorpe."

CHAPTER XIII

As soon as Susan arrived with Charlie and Pam in tow, Smif moved to Lovylea. She had made up her mind to say nothing to Stone about her purchase of the plantation until she had received definite word from her brother and had sent the first payment to him. She was exasperated by Bill-Lee's procrastination, although she recognized it as characteristic. But she could not be content until the deeds of the property were formally made over to her. When the house-party assembled she was still awaiting definite word from Bill.

An innocuous young couple, the Gardners, from Boston, had arrived with Eve Goodhue under their wing, and one morning they were all in riding clothes waiting for the horses to be brought around when Daly appeared at Stone's side.

"Telegrams, sir," he said succinctly, presenting a salver.

"Is one for me?" Smif asked with unconcealed eagerness. Bill-Lee might have telegraphed in a sudden spasm of conscience.

Stone picked them up and shook his head at her.

"Both for me. You'll allow me?" he added to Susan to whom he had happened to be talking.

"Telegrams never require an apology," she said, "to me they seem to signalize bad news."

"At least to one doesn't." He handed it over to her.

"My dear, I can't read it without my glasses. Tell me what it says."

"Just that two fellows I knew well in England have landed and will join us today."

"And the other telegram—"

Stone read it and it was plain that its contents pleased him.

"That is even better news," he declared, "but for the present it is a secret."

"Who are the men, Mr. Nesbit?" Pam asked.

"One is Sir Gregory Dunn, who went to Eton with me though he is considerably my junior. The other is Paddy, the young brother of my best friend, a fine fellow. He has resigned from the army and is coming over here to buy a place. I'm hoping to find a plantation for him near me."

"What is his name besides Paddy?" Pam asked idly. This man who was expected was plainly English. She had made up her mind that she did not care for the English.

"His name isn't Paddy at all. That's merely a nickname. It's Miles. Captain John Miles."

"But we know him!" cried Eve. "You remember, Pam? He was one of the ushers at Cintra's wedding. We liked him lots."

"He is an Irishman who wants to make his home in America and become a citizen here. In fact I suspect an American love-affair is one of the principal inducements," said Stone.

"That is jolly," Pam said heartily. "He's the type of immigrant we don't often get. He'll be very popular down here; and the girls aren't the only ones who liked him. Stone, I'll be awfully glad to see him again."

"Are you all talking of that nice Captain Miles who stayed with us at the Manor after Cintra's wedding?" Susan asked. "If you are, add me to the list of official welcome. I thought him a very good sort."

Susan was an observant as well as a devoted mother and when she had so readily canceled the plans for Pam's presentation she had done so because she suspected that something serious had occurred to make her daughter take so positive and unexpected a stand. In some way, Captain Miles was connected with Pam's refusal to go abroad.

The arrival of Captain Paddy Miles and his friend Gregory completed the party which quickly fused into a well-mannered and congenial family. They were all having a good time and did not care who knew it.

Then, into this contented household burst Miss Martha Washington Mercedes.

Miss Martha Washington Mercedes in what amounted to a new incarnation. Dressed, as Smif at once realized by Madame Georgetown, with a taste and a restraint that threw a new light on that forceful woman's influence, she was at once pretty and striking.

"I heard Johnny had a party over here," she began. "Well, when the cat's away, the mouse will play. But I didn't expect to find you here." She addressed Smif pointedly.

"Miss Lovely and Mr. Nesbit are cousins," Susan told her.

"Miss Lovely?" She spoke interrogatively, feeling the news unwelcome although she did not yet know why.

"Don't tell me you didn't know she was one of the Lovely ladies of Lovylea?"

"I didn't know it and I do not understand people with two names," Mercy said crossly.

This was not welcome news to her. Plainly Johnny was escaping from her clutches. She must consider what steps she had better take. Yet, after all, the road to man's heart was well known. She would invite them all to dine, although she heaved a sigh at thought of the good things she ought not to touch.

Smif looked forward to that dinner with unconcealed interest and carefully concealed contempt. The food, of course, would be unimpeachable, she had Stone's assurance of that, but the lady of the house—

As a matter of fact, Smif was destined to be surprised in more ways than one. Mercy made no parade of her dieting. She toyed with her food, making a pretense of eating but never letting a morsel pass her lips, and Smif, who had expected to see her fall before such a temptation, felt like clapping her hands in generous applause, and shot a glance down the table to Stone.

She was accustomed to find his eyes ever ready to meet her own. Now, with a sinking of the heart which she did not attempt to deny to herself, she saw that he was concentrated on Mercy. Again and again she glanced down the table at him—always with the same result. She told herself, she ought to be glad. She ought to rejoice that since Stone was set on this match, his future wife promised to be more suited to the position than she had believed possible. Why should she be selfish about it? It need not rob her of her friend.

But in her heart she knew it would, and when Susan's car drew up, she put her hand on Charlie's arm.

"Do you mind staying and riding home with Stone?" she asked. "I'm terribly tired. I'd like to go with Susan."

"Certainly not, certainly not," said Charlie fustily, "get right in, my dear, get right in. Where is Stone anyhow? Where is he, does anyone know?"

And as the door was closed on Pam and Paddy Miles, who had turned down one of the little seats, Eve Goodhue's rich voice answered:

"He stayed behind to say something to Miss Mercedes."

CHAPTER XIV

The next day began as all days began at Lovylea. Every one was very cheerful and very chatty about the affair of the previous evening, very loud in his praise of the fun and the food.

On the assurance that they would find an equally delicious meal at the Graceys where they were to lunch, the mail arrived, interrupting further discussion of this enthralling subject and as Daly, who had sorted it, came to her side, Smif saw that the top envelope of her pile had been forwarded from New York and was addressed in Bill-Lee's unmistakable handwriting. She picked it up with an exclamation of pleasure—now she could at last be content. No alien would reign in her beloved home. Ripping it open, she drew out the contents.

The letter it held was short and an enclosure within it fluttered to the floor to lie there disregarded while she read:

"Dear old Smif: On thinking it over, I feel sure it is generosity to me that has urged you on to buy the old place. Anyhow, I don't approve of your living there alone, so forget it as I have. It was a silly plan, and I was a fool to encourage it. I've sold Lovylea for a good fat figure, so it's over and done with for both of us. I'll have enough now to play polo like a gentleman. Perhaps some day I'll come north with a Chileno team to show New York the game."

There was a little more but she did not read it, sitting for a moment as if she had turned to bronze. Then she mechanically accepted the slip of yellow paper that Daly had picked up from the floor and presented to her.

It was a check for the amount which, at his request, she had advanced Bill-Lee, to be applied on the purchase price of the plantation. Legally, she should refuse to accept it, she might be able to enforce her claim—at the cost of informing the world that her brother had broken faith. That she would never do. Her decision was made on the instant.

With a murmur of letters to write before the party set out, she rose and left the room.

Pam was occupied with Paddy Miles; Susan was watching her daughter's happy expression with tender understanding. Her Charlie might not be a romantic figure but she had married him for love not for money. Most of the others were trying to follow Stone's finger as he traced their route of the day on a map he had spread on the table. Only Eve Goodhue saw Smif's face and half rose as if to accompany her, then sank back in her chair, fearful of intrusion. There was no doubt in her mind that Smif had suffered a blow of some sort, and this impression was confirmed a little later when one of the maids came with a message that Miss Lovely had a headache and was lying down. She would not attempt the long ride with them, and hoped they would make the necessary apologies and explanations to Mrs. Gracey.

"She must be feeling very bad," Susan said, rising. "I'll go up—"

"Let me, mother," Pam begged, "please! I want to see her for just a minute. I'll find out if she ought to have a doctor—"

"We can both go—"

"I wouldn't," Eve spoke deprecatingly. "Headaches get better if one is very quiet. I had one once, so I know."

There was something in the way this was said that caused Susan to sink back in her chair. Eve Goodhue was a very definite personality.

"Very well, Pam, you go," she consented, "and don't stay long."

"Only a minute, mother," Pam passed out, giving her mother a friendly pat as she went by.

Outside Smif's door she knocked lightly. Smif had expected this. She knew some one must come to inquire if anything could be done for her, but she longed passionately for their departure. She wanted to be alone at Lovylea to take her farewell of all that she had loved through an absence that would have weakened the tie to any save a faithful heart.

"Come in!" she called cheerily enough. She had herself well in hand. Pam peeped in cautiously as if she expected some serious manifestation of an illness that had laid low so stout a soul.

"Is your head very bad, Smif darling?" she inquired.

"Not at all," Smif replied promptly. "My head is a polite prevarication. It's something inside me that's dropped a stitch. I know the Box Hall cook and I feel that discretion is the better part of valor for the present, so I'm going to stay—here," she had been about to say "home," only stopping herself in time. Lovylea was home no longer. Not when Miss Mercedes was to be its mistress. Smif had jumped at once to the conclusion that Bill-Lee had sold to Stone. "Keep the others away, Pam, that's a good scout. I do feel by the time you get back."

Pam halted for an instant on the way to the door, then returned with a soft little rush and slipped to her knees by the side of the couch.

"I don't want to bother you, Smif dear, but there's something I want to tell you even before I tell father and mother, because I believe you wangled it somehow. Paddy and I have fixed it up. We're going to be married and I'm awfully happy. . . . An Irishman is different from an Englishman, isn't he?"

"To be sure he is," Smif agreed heartily. "Paddy Miles is a peach, or whatever their favorite fruit is in Ireland. I can't think of anything but the potato."

"Paddy'll love that. I mean to tell him you said he was an Irish potato!"

Smif said, "He's awfully funny about himself—and us," she added in a softer voice. "He vows he entirely lost visibility in the British matrimonial market when news of his cousin's numerous heirs got around. He even says he was afraid I wouldn't be able to see him without the glorifying light cast by a title. But he was coming back after me anyhow this autumn," she ended exultantly, anxious that Smif should not misunderstand.

"Of course he was, darling," Smif reassured her. "Stone says he's one of the best, and crazy about you." She was glad for the girl's sake, heartily fond of her, yet so tense in her own misery that moments seemed like hours and she thought she would never find herself alone.

Pam dropped a kiss on her cheek. "I'm off," she announced, "and I'll see that none of the others bother you." The door shut behind her at last and Smif lay in semi-darkness waiting for the sounds that would signal the departure of the party for Box Hall. She knew the hour set for the start. She knew that Stone could be trusted to get them going according to schedule, but the minutes still lagged and she looked at her watch half a dozen times before she heard the welcome clatter of horses' hoofs as they came around from the stable.

She got up from the couch and seated herself near the window to wait for the return of the stable boys and, sitting there, she looked down on the same vista her father and she had seen when they had watched Remus, the foxhound, hurrying off on his urgent private affairs while the long lines of rain, like fine-drawn threads of ice, fell steadily, to melt into puddles on contact with the earth. Once again she had a vision of the past. . . . Then she shook herself back to reality, mental and physical. The boys had passed and she was waiting time. Before the others returned she meant to visit all the spots she loved the most; to burn them indelibly into her memory; to store them up against the barren days to come. She leaped to her feet and looked at herself in her mirror before she opened the door of her room. So far as she could see, she would pass muster if she met any of the servants.

Thoughtfully she went from room to room, peopling them with her memories.

Downstairs she came at length to Stone's study, to find that door shut. She hesitated before it.

Of course.—The dogs! They had been shut in so that they would not try to follow their master. Poor darlings, they and she would be in much the same case once Mercy was mistress here. Persona non grata. Well next to Stone, they loved her. They should come with her on her rounds.

She opened the door and walked into the room. It was a cool morning and a little fire of hickory logs was burning in the fireplace, before which the bulldogs stretched, sleepily luxurious. Although she had come for them, she took no note of them, for at the desk a man was seated.

"Stone!" she exclaimed. "I thought you had gone with the others."

He turned at the sound of her voice making no reply where none was needed.

"I hoped you'd show up soon," he said. "I want a talk with you. I've something to tell you."

Apricot From China

The apricot, one of California's most important fruit products, is believed to be a native of China. It was first introduced to the Pacific state back in the early mission days and has flourished there ever since. Its life habit is much like that of the peach, and some effort has been made to establish it in the East. However, in the East it faces one plant enemy so well known to peach growers, the curculio. There are three known species of apricot, the American type growing in a beautifully foliaged tree of spreading nature with a round top. The leaves are a bright green and the flowers pinkish white.

"Dear old Smif: On thinking it over, I feel sure it is generosity to me that has urged you on to buy the old place. Anyhow, I don't approve of your living there alone, so forget it as I have. ## AN EXPERT

During the holiday traffic rush, two speed cops, noticing a young woman who was driving dangerously, shot ahead of her and drew up their car broadside, so that the culprit had to stop.

"Excuse me, young lady," said one of the officers, sarcastically, "do you know anything about driving a car?"

"Of course," said the bright young thing, "what's your trouble?"

BRIEF CASES

BY BAREFAX

Frens and county people:

Again it is your privilege to gaze upon, stare at, laugh at (?) and swear at, this column of ours. (We are still trying to find a reason for printing this, but in this day and age, it is impossible to find a reason for anything.)

We were recently handed this letter, written on the back of an 1846 calendar. It is from Mr. Rinkle of Olde, N. Y.:

Mr. Barefax—I am deeply offended to think that Pimple Van Rinkle, should be associated with the name of Ripple Van Winkle, who is a rascally wag! Please rectify this error at once.—Pimple Van Rinkle.

Sorry Mr. Rinkle, but we meant Ripple (Rip) Van Winkle of stage and screen fame.

We have received 7 letters from Hamilton; all from young ladies. All were similar except in name. So to kill 7 young gentlemen with one pun we will let you fill in the blanks:

Barefax—My ——— hasn't written for — weeks. What shall I do? Doesn't he ——— anymore? Are my ——— less thrilling? ———

Dear young ladies—You will most likely get a letter by sending the boy friend a three-cent stamp. They don't grow on trees you know!

Mr. Barefax—I am continually troubled with broken bones. Last night, in attempting to pick up a pencil, I broke my arm in four places. Is there anything to do for this condition?—Weakas Heck.

Mr. Heck—Your condition is due to a lack of lime in the body. We advise a diet of fresh limes, unslaked lime (1 pound a day mixed with potatoes or oatmeal) and lime ricky.

HEBRON HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The Hebron girls' basketball team hung up their fifteenth victory of the season by defeating the New Haven girls, by a score of 38 to 16.

The boys were not so successful, and they were defeated by a score of 25-11. At the first half the score stood 7-6 in favor of Hebron boys, but the defeat broke in the second half and the New Haven boys marched to victory. The games were refereed by Mr. Carlton.

The Hebron Independent girls team played and were defeated by the Crescent Spring girls.

The Hebron girls and boys will play the Burlington boys and girls here Friday night, February 9.

The Hebron debating team debated the Florence team at Florence Friday, February 2.

The recital held by Mrs. Lillian Faber last Monday afternoon was very successful and very well attended.

LOWER GUNPOWDER

Saturday evening members of the farmers Alliance, of Hamilton met at the Hamilton high school building and had an oyster supper. Everyone present enjoyed the evening. The crowd was entertained with some splendid music furnished by Noel Walton at the piano, Jimmie Jones with violin, Lloyd Jones with guitar. Hasher the hound, was still able to eat after his scrap. He will come in like old Rover some time. He gets into many a scrap, but always comes out yelping, and for those that left early in the evening they missed the most up to date music which was furnished by B. C. Kirtley and F. H. Sebree. They left at a late hour planning to meet again next year.

RABBIT HASHINGS

BY NOEL WALTON

WE WONDER if Columbus would have taken the trouble to discover America had he known what was going to happen. But of course he didn't know. But we rather think that if he could see and hear some of the things we have had acquaintance with, in the last few days he would probably have passed America up and sailed on to spend the rest of his days in a Chop Suey dispensary in the Flowery Kingdom.

Our attention was called to a few wise remarks which Mr. S. — of L. G. makes at us, and we were about to get sarcastic when a friend remarked "Oh, that's just F. S. tryin' to be funny," which we think says about all there is to be said.

We enjoyed very much the other night watching thirty people trying to eat their weight in soup. So did we.

Obviously the female organizations are feeling the coeducational influence. This reinforces the love couple to three.

To the ladies who inform us that they are the mouthpieces or main-springs of their organizations (notwithstanding the fact that every other member, whose opinion we have heard expressed is in opposition to them) we offer —

"Oh I'm the cook and the captain bold,

And the mate of the Nancy Brig,
And the bosun tight and the mid-ship mite,

And the crew of the captain's gig."

We acknowledge all the suggestions and offers of help by many people of the community.

Undoubtedly we will be a target

Party Line Prattle

People love the truth until it's told on them.

New song hit, "Charley Doesn't Live Here Any More."

Well, one thing, two hens and one rooster can't make the whole flock lay. (Thanks).

Well so long, till next Thursday. Having done the best we know to give you the whole truth and nothing but the truth, we offer a blanket apology to any and all who may fancy themselves peevish. We might say in closing that we are not responsible for any misconception on other parts, so over the river.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Family Mood Bible Institute of Chicago.)
© 1934, Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for February 11

TIMELY WARNINGS (Temperance Lesson).

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 7:1-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire, Matthew 7:19.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Golden Rule.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Keeping Jesus' Law.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Truth About Alcoholic Beverages.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Drastic Methods for a Deadly Evil.

I. Concerning Censorious Judgments (vv. 1-12).

1. The sin and folly of (vv. 1-5). This prohibition should not be so construed as to forbid our making an estimate of the lives of those about us, for "by their fruits ye shall know them." Neither should it prevent us from administering rebuke to those who deserve it. It is not wrong to condemn the errors and faults of those who are practicing sin; neither does it mean that sin should go unrebuked until we ourselves are perfect. It does definitely and vigorously rebuke readiness to blame others and to magnify their weaknesses and errors.

2. The duty of discrimination in dealing out holy things (v. 6). The gospel should be preached to all. The Word of God should be proclaimed to all, but at the same time it should be borne in mind that "dogs and swine" have no comprehension of holy things.

3. Qualification for discrimination (vv. 7-12).

a. A life of prayer (vv. 7-11). Only those are able rightly to divide the word of truth who live in close communion with God.

b. The disposition to treat others as one would be treated by others (v. 12). The Word of God and the common judgment of mankind constitute a definite standard of life so far as that standard bears on the principle governing the life. In all doubtful questions between man and man we should deal with our fellows as we would have them deal with us. In fact, the whole law concerning human relations is compressed into this one rule.

II. Entrance into the Kingdom Urged (vv. 13, 14).

Before everyone there are set two ways and only two ways, life and death, heaven and hell. Two gates open out into these ways. The narrow gate is the way of life. The invitation is for all to enter this gate.

III. The Warning Against False Teachers (vv. 15-20).

1. Their real existence (v. 15). Ever since God had a people, false prophets and teachers have appeared among them. That they appear everywhere need not surprise us, for Christ foretold that such should arise.

2. Their nature (v. 15).

a. They are hypocritical. They are emissaries of Satan. The devil does his most successful work by masquerading as an angel of light (II Cor. 11:14, 15). All through the centuries Satan's success has come mainly through his ability to deceive.

b. They are destructive. This is suggested by their being "ravening wolves." False teachers are doing their most deadly work while pretending to be loyal to the Bible and to Jesus Christ.

3. The unfailing test (vv. 16-18). "By their fruits ye shall know them." Every tree bears its own kind of fruit. Nature is inexorable in her laws as to this. It is equally true in the spiritual world.

4. Their ultimate end (v. 19). All false teachers shall ultimately be punished by being cast into the fire. Although God has infinite patience and bears long, he will see to it that this evil work does not go on forever.

IV. The Dangers of Empty Profession (vv. 21-23).

1. Merely calling Christ "Lord" will not answer for doing his will (v. 21).

2. One may do supernatural works and still be lost (vv. 22, 23). Not all supernatural works are divine. The devil is a supernatural being. All evil doers are under his sway.

3. A coming separation from God (v. 23). One may have been a Sunday school teacher or a minister and have performed many mighty works and yet hear from Christ the awful declaration, "I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity."

V. The One and Only Safe Way (vv. 24-29).

1. Hear the sayings of Christ (v. 24).

2. Do what Christ commands (vv. 24-29).

When We Are Dead

We may live when we are dead—not only, as we trust, in Heaven, but also by the impress we made in Christ's name upon others.

A Prayer

Almighty God, we open our hearts in prayer that thou lead us more into the truth as it is in Jesus. We want to serve thee in it; and we desire the days to come when the truth will be lived and followed in earth even as it is in Heaven.

God's Grace

God's grace is God's love on the quest for loveless children, whose sins are scarlet and whose iniquities are red like crimson. "While we were yet sinners Christ died for us."

TOO MANY WAIT FOR A MIRACLE!

Explaining Lack of Effort to Fight Weakness.

In Vienna recently the police had to be called out to cope with the crowds at the funeral of a rabbi who had a reputation for performing miracles.

From across the border in Hungary, Poland, Rumania and Czechoslovakia, tens of thousands came, hoping that at his open grave the spirit of the holy man would secure for them their heart's desire.

All who felt that what meant happiness for them, could be attained only through a miracle, took their last hope to his funeral. At the end a sack was flung into the grave. In it were thousands of written requests for miracles.

So in this day and age there are people who pin their faith in miracles.

When we stop to think about it, it comes to us that this is true not only of the simple folk of still medieval regions. Many of us right here, while we do not follow miracle workers or send notes to spirits, still do hope for miracles to bring us happiness. We may not do this consciously. But what other explanation is there for the lack of effort on our own part to make our way of life conducive to the happiness we seek?

We all know, in our own hearts, of qualities within ourselves that mitigate against our enjoyment of content and happiness. We know things we do that hurt us, or those we love, which is the same thing. And yet, we fight those weaknesses, uproot those faults? No. For the most part we just go along, living in the same way from day to day, falling short of the realization of inner joy that should be ours, putting off happiness. Surely, we must be waiting for a miracle!

Department Points Out

Danger of Trichinosis

While pork is highly nutritious and one of the most appetizing foods in the human diet, it is important to remember, the Department of Agriculture states, that pork should be well cooked at all times if the danger of trichinosis is to be avoided. Trichinosis is fatal in about 5 per cent of cases, records show. When pork is thoroughly cooked, there is no danger whatever of acquiring trichinosis, since the heat of thorough cooking destroys trichinae.

The federal meat-inspection stamp "U. S. Inspected and Passed," on pork and raw pork products is not a guaranty against trichinosis, except in the case of those products specially prepared so that they may safely be eaten raw. Some of the processed products are: Italian style ham, coppa, capicola, cured boneless loins, loins in casings, and forms of dry or summer sausage. When there is any doubt as to the previous treatment of pork products, they should be well cooked before eaten.

Make this lip test

LOOK at them . . . and your cheeks, too, without make-up. Do they possess the natural glow of health, which comes from a sufficiency of rich, red blood? If they do, make-up is simple . . . If they don't read on . . . you may find one of the reasons why your skin is not clear and rosy.

You cannot have red lips, rosy cheeks, energy and cheerfulness if your blood is in a run-down condition. Lack of hemo-globin, the red coloring of the blood, may also indicate a weakened condition of the body . . . loss of strength . . . poor appetite.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in restoring a low hemo-globin content. If your condition suggests a blood tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite . . . your color and skin should improve with increased strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes . . . the larger is more economical.

Burns Fiance's Car Through Jealousy

San Francisco.—When a new auto, owned jointly by herself and her fiance, "came between our love," Mrs. Eva Sample, a divorcee, told a police court, she burned the car. She was arrested on a charge of arson and said her fiance, J. F. Jeager, was becoming more interested in the car than in her.

DAD CLAIMS ONLY ONE TWIN IS HIS

Court, Agrees, Gives Other to Wife.

Yankton, S. D.—Ewald Paddle, farmer suing his wife for a divorce, proved to the satisfaction of Circuit Judge R. B. Tripp that he is the father of one twin born to his wife, but not of the other. He was granted his freedom from the married state and custody of the twin he claimed as his, while the other was given to Mrs. Paddle.

"One little fellow looks like me," Paddle testified. "The other one doesn't look like me and don't look like my wife. Besides, my wife told me I was the daddy of one and not of the other. I want the one that favors me. The other one belongs to one of the neighbors."

In the absence of Mrs. Paddle, who did not contest the action, Judge Tripp accepted the husband's story that she had confessed being unfaithful and also his contention that he was entitled to possession of his own offspring.

Five children in all were born to Mrs. Paddle in the ten years since her marriage. In addition to the single twin, Paddle claimed one more child he declared was his. The other three youngsters, whom he denied, went to the wife.

Local physicians said that the twins, both boys, were of the fraternal as distinguished from the identical type. Therefore, in their opinion, it was entirely possible for the pair to have different fathers.

Also, it was recalled that in February, 1932, Prof. N. B. Broman of the University of Lund, Sweden, noted biologist, testified in a court case that from a scientific point of view two fathers could split the paternity of twins. Blood tests made by direction of the court apparently supported Doctor Broman's statement and the contention was upheld. As in the Paddle case, the presumptive father was declared the parent of only one twin.

The French scientists, Menestrier and Mme. Bernard Fontaine, in 1924 wrote a thesis holding that twins need not have the same fathers. All the genetic experts are agreed that identical twins, resulting from the splitting of a single cell, can have but one father. Such twins resemble each other much more closely than do twins of the fraternal type.

Steal Serbian Belle 4

Times in Single Week

Belgrade.—Serbian men still woo their women in ror antic, forceful fashion, and a pretty sixteen-year-old maiden who lives in a village near here, one Gospoda Milka, is now under police guard in her parents' home after having been abducted four times in a week in a battle between a rich old farmer and a youthful peasant.

After Gospoda indicated to the elder suitor that she preferred the attentions of the poor peasant in preference to the advantages offered by his wealth, the rich farmer abducted her while she was walking in a street, and carried her off to his home in the hills. The youth went to her rescue, succeeded in eluding the old man's vigilance and carried her off to his own home for safekeeping.

When the elder Lochinvar found out where she was he led a band of his servants, armed with pitchforks, scythes and axes, to his rival's house, and retrieved the fair Gospoda. He shut her up in his house again, this time heavily barricaded.

The youth quickly organized a band of rescuers and succeeded in recovering Gospoda once more. Then the police stepped in, sent the girl home, forbade her to leave her parents until she had decided which one of the two she will marry and placed the suitors under restraining orders.

Secrets of Indians Die

With Last Medicine Man

Ponca City, Okla.—Hundreds of Ponca Indian secrets have been lost because Little Dance, who died recently at the reservation here, took them with him to a better "teepee."

He was the last of the Panco medicine men, and he lived to become the sole keeper of ceremonial mysteries that ranged from the mixing of paints to the ritual of the forbidden sun dance, and included the key to the rites of the seven tribal "hands of life and prosperity."

Wounded Deer Proves

More Than Match for Man

Magdalena, N. M.—I. P. Erickson, Gallup, N. M., found a wounded 100-pound antelope more than a match for him and was ready to quit when Game Warden Zahley came to his rescue. The two men finally downed the animal. After wounding the antelope, Erickson attempted to build it to earth. When the act ended, the hunter was a half mile from his gun and his body was covered with bruises.

Church of Historic Memory

St. Peter's, Bermuda, Oldest English House of Worship in America, Has Associations Dear to the Hearts of American People.

St. Peter's parish church, in Bermuda, is the oldest English church in America. It was in this church that the beautiful Nea, of Tom Moore's poems was married in 1803, one of her sons later becoming rector of the church. Nea was Hester Louisa Tucker and became the wife of William Tucker. Marrying a man of her own surname brought no ill to her, thus frustrating the old superstition.

Several months after her marriage, Tom Moore, the Irish poet, arrived in Bermuda as registrar of the admiralty court there. St. George's at that time being the most heavily fortified position in the western hemisphere. Moore met Mrs. Tucker, who was only sixteen, at a ball given in his honor by Governor and Mrs. Mitchell in the governor's palatial home. He was immediately smitten with the beauty of the young lady and did not hesitate to tell her so. "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," still one of the world's best loved songs, was written about her by the young Irishman, and one Sunday morning in old St. Peter's they both remained in the church after the conclusion of the service and Moore went to the organ and sang his new song to young Mrs. Tucker.

At the time the Tuckers lived in the "Alley of Limes," as Moore called it. The narrow street is now called Cumberland lane. The ruins of the old Tucker house are less than five minutes walk from St. Peter's church.

Rev. Alexander Richardson was the pastor of the church during the Tom Moore-Nea romance, which was no more than the admiration of a poet for a beauty who filled him with poetic inspiration and the pride and satisfaction of a young woman who was singled out for fame by a man who had already achieved it.

Reverend Mr. Richardson was a picturesque figure in St. George's, which is more Spanish than English in appearance. He was pastor of St. Peter's, with the exception of a lapse of five years, from 1755 to 1805, quitting in 1772 because his salary was five years in arrears, but returning in 1778 upon the payment of all arrears to him. D. H. L. Tucker, son of Nea Tucker, was pastor from 1839 to 1863.

Part of the communion service of St. Peter's dates from 1625. The large chalice, the flagons and the paten, were the gifts of William III, in 1697. The font was brought there in 1782, but dates back to 1550.

The three candlesticks are among the most beautiful furnishings of the church. The one near the altar was installed in 1817. The one to the left was found by the present pastor among discarded material in the belfry. The third, hung in the nave, once diffused its light in the old government house.

The altar and altar rail are of hewn cedar, built by the colony's first governor, Richard Moore, who was a ship's carpenter. They are as old as the oldest portion of the church.

The weather vane, which tops the clock steeple, once showed how the wind blew on the premises of William Pitt, famous British statesman.

In the cemetery surrounding the church on three sides are many interesting tombs. One holds the remains of an American warrior, Richard Sutherland Dale, son of Commodore Richard Dale of Philadelphia, who was wounded in the engagement between the United States frigate President and a squadron of British ships on January 15, 1815. The stone "records the tribute of his parents' gratitude to those inhabitants of St. George's whose generous and tender sympathy prompted the kindest attentions to their son while living and honored him when dead."

To the right of the church stands the William Tucker tomb, which contains the remains of the once beautiful Nea, known in her youth as the "Rose of the Isles."

Beware of Doubling in Making Contracts

Early in the Eighteenth century, says a writer in the London Morning Post, a farmer made a contract which he thought was a good one for him. He undertook to deliver for the sum of £5 two grains of rye on the following Monday, four grains a week later, eight grains the week after that, and so on for a year. All went well for some weeks, but presently he found that his final delivery at the end of the year would require more rye than was sown in the whole of England. A lawsuit took place over the contract. What the farmer had not realized was that though twice two are four, two multiplied by itself fifty-two times comes to nearly ten thousand billion. This number of grains of rye would represent about eight thousand million bushels. An acre of rye produces about ten bushels, so one can work out how many acres would have been required to fulfill the contract. Another famous "two times" case was that of the blacksmith who undertook to shoe a horse for a payment of one farthing for the first nail, a half-penny for the second, a penny for the third, and so on. At first sight this seems quite a reasonable charge—but try working it out!

Doctors Give Creosote For Chest Colds

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on.

Creomulsion with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quickly and effectively stops coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Creomulsion is powerful in the treatment of colds and coughs, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take.

Your own druggist guarantees Creomulsion by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creomulsion as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creomulsion on hand for instant use. (adv.)

TOO TIDY

Read the "Ads" but don't ignore medical opinion

if you want to —relieve constipation gently and safely

—take the exact dose suited to your need
—avoid danger of bowel strain

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of harsh laxatives will do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form.

Can Constipation be safely relieved?

"Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say thousands who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Take the dose that you find suited to your system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving regularly without assistance.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription preparation containing senna, a natural vegetable laxative which relieves constipation gently and safely. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is no "convenience" in any cathartic that's taken so frequently, you must carry it wherever you go!

What is the "Right" Laxative?

In buying any laxative, read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains doubtful drugs, don't take it. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains no mineral drugs. By using it, you avoid danger of strain.

How many dimes and quarters are spent on "popular" laxatives! How quickly they count up, if you frequently use habit-forming help! A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin would save you money—and bring you real relief.

Why Doctors give a liquid laxative

The habitual use of harsh salts, or powerful drugs in the highly concentrated form of pills or tablets is risky.

The properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without discomfort or injury. You need not take a "double dose" a day or two later.

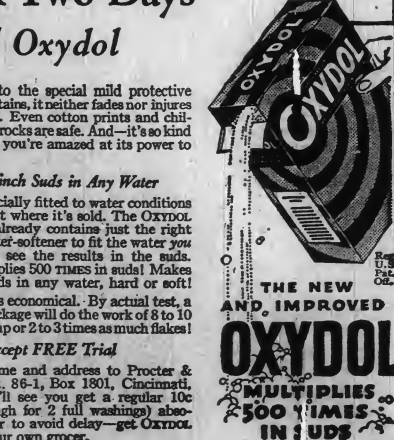

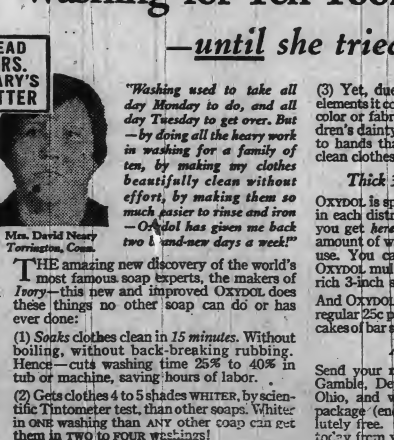

The public can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store.

Axton Points Out Benefits of Proposed Graduated Tax On Cigarettes In Prices and Wages To the Farmers and Workers

That modest high-quality smoke—the 10-cent cigarette—came into the nation's market in 1932 and pulled the cigarette business out of a deep slump. In doing this it put thousands of tobacco factory workers back on pay rolls, gave hundreds of thousands of farmers a better market for their crop than they had enjoyed before, and restored some badly shrunken government revenues.

So speaks Colonel Wood F. Axton, president of Axton-Fisher Tobacco Company, in urging the people of twelve southeastern states producing cigarette tobacco to prevail upon Congress to put into effect a graduated tax on cigarettes at this session. This graduated tax, proportioned to the retail price of cigarettes, will enable the 10-cent cigarette manufacturer to continue helping the farmer to get better prices for his crop, to continue paying the tobacco factory worker a decent living wage, to continue boosting government revenues, and for himself, to earn a very modest profit.

"Putting a graduated tax on cigarettes—in place of the present flat-rate tax of 6 cents a package regardless of retail price—would not be a departure from precedent," Colonel Axton declares. "There is already a graduated tax on cigars. It runs from $2 a thousand on cigars retailing at 5 cents, to $13 a thousand on the highest-priced cigars of the same weight and size."

Paying Biggest Tax
"The 10-cent cigarette today is paying the biggest percentage of tax of any article in America that I know of—6 cents tax on a product retailing at 10 cents."

"What's the reason for the 10-cent cigarette? In 1931 and 1932 whenever things were down and practically 97 per cent of the business was in the hands of four big companies, the price on cigarettes was raised 45 cents a thousand, less 10 and 2 per cent."

"This raise was equivalent to 10 to 12 cents a pound on leaf tobacco, but the 1931 crop sold at possibly the lowest price, quality considered, in thirty years. The reduction almost equalled the raise of the price of cigarettes. Production of cigarettes began to drop."

"A few of us, knowing the consumer had to have cigarettes at a price he could afford, put on the market a 10-cent cigarette, allowing ourselves a very modest profit, but enough."

"As a result cigarette sales jumped. The government collected more tax in the fiscal year 1932-1933, although these were the poorest business years in this country, has had in the recollection of man."

"In order to drive the 10-cent cigarette out of the market manufacturers of 15-cent cigarettes early in 1933 cut the price of their product to 10 cents and 11 cents. The report was circulated that the price of tobacco would be raised so that makers of 10-cent cigarettes could not stay in business with their product."

"But when the price of burley tobacco was sold at a price to average the farmer 4 cents a pound more than he had received in the preceding year, we found we could still make a good cigarette to sell at 10 cents and still make our modest profit."

"In the fall of 1933 the N.R.A. adjusted tobacco workers' wages upward in many plants—which should have been done long ago—and we shortened wage earners' hours. Price of materials increased. There things put up our cost of doing business."

"Then to carry out its welfare program, the government put a parity price on all tobaccos, applying a processing tax. This tax, I want to make plain, is a just tax, because if anybody is entitled to better conditions it is the American farmer."

Millions For Growers
"Of course all these items slashed our profits right to the bone—but we are still selling cigarettes at 10 cents a package."

"Now I honestly believe this competition on 10-cent cigarettes produced many millions of dollars for the grower, and will continue to produce millions of dollars for the grower as time goes on."

"But in order to meet the rise in tobacco prices we must have a slight difference in the taxes on cigarettes retailing for 10 cents and those retailing at two packs for 25 cents or at 15 cents a package."

"If the tax on 10-cent cigarettes is cut 10 per cent the government's return will be 1 per cent less, provided 10-cent cigarettes compose 10 per cent of all cigarettes made. The government's return will be 2 per cent less if 20 per cent of all cigarettes made are 10-centers. And the government's return will be 3 per cent less if 30 per cent of all cigarettes made are 10-centers."

"But this is a fact: the cut in the government's return will be offset many times by the increased consumption of cigarettes over what they would be if all cigarettes are forced to a higher price than 10 cents."

"The farmer of course would fare much better because he would have real, genuine competition among buyers when he marketed his crop. The farmer will recall that, when the four big companies cut their prices in January and February, 1933, and when makers of 10-centers found they had more tobacco than they could well use and dropped out of the market, the price of burley went down once on the markets."

Business For All
"In urging this graduated tax on cigarettes we are not trying to put the manufacturers of 15-centers out of business, or hurt them. Anybody in the industry can make 10-cent cigarettes. But if he does, he must be satisfied with very much smaller profits than have heretofore been made in the business. The principal makers of 10-centers are today employing organized labor at wages agreed upon by the Tobacco Workers' International Union."

"When they tried to stop manufacture of 10-cent cigarettes, the four big companies cut the price of their products $1.19 a thousand. This meant they took more than $100,000,000 less money for their cigarettes than they had taken the previous year."

"One of their spokesmen admitted at a hearing in Washington that they cut prices to drive out of business the 10-cent product and get rid of this competition. If they were willing to spend that huge sum—$100,000,000 in a single year—for that purpose, as admitted, certainly the cigarette consumer and the farmer need the 10-cent center to compete with the 15-center."

Evils of Monopolies
"I believe sincerely that monopolies, and people doing business by combinations in restraint of trade, have had more to do with bringing on the great depression than anything else we have had to contend with. Monopoly stifles competition and raises prices to consumers and lowers prices to producers until they can no longer bear the load that presses down on their backs."

Colonel Axton clearly shows, in his statement, that 10-cent cigarette manufacture had benefitted tobacco farmers and workers and will continue to do so. What benefits the farmers and workers in the cigarette tobacco producing states likewise benefits the butcher, the baker, the candle-stick maker in that large territory."

The graduated tax on cigarettes in place of the present flat-rate tax will make possible continued production of 10-cent cigarettes. The people should, for their own welfare, rally to the cause of the farmer, the tobacco worker, the 10-cent cigarette maker. They can do this to best effect by writing to their Congressmen at once and urge them to vote for the graduated tax. Immediate action is necessary."

It has been possible for the Highway Commission to increase the percentage of high type roads in the State system from 18 per cent of the total miles under State maintenance to 22 per cent and likewise to reduce the percentage of low type construction from 52 per cent of the total miles under State maintenance to 41 per cent."

It has further been possible during the past biennial period for the Highway Commission to increase the total mileage under State maintenance by more than 20 per cent. In other words during the past two years the State Highway Commission had added more than 1100 miles of road to the State Highway System with aid from the Counties amounting to less than $400,000.00, whereas during the eleven years preceding November 1, 1931 there had been a total of only 5277 miles of road constructed and accepted for maintenance by the State Highway Department with aid from the counties amounting to more than $22,200,000.00 or more than 20 percent of the total expended for construction during the same period."

Certainly progress of this nature justified the continuance of a construction program."

MORE MONEY FOR TOBACCO GROWERS

"I want definitely to assure every burley grower who reduces his plantings one-half this spring that he will receive an income during the present marketing year equivalent to one that he would have received with a season's average market price of at least $14.25 without a program," J. B. Hutson, chief of the tobacco section of the AAA, told growers at the Farm and Home Convention at the Agricultural Experiment Station."

"The growers who reduces his plantings one-third will receive an income based on at least a $13.35 season's average price for the entire belt."

Mr. Hutson said that up to that time prices for the entire burley belt had averaged around 11 cents a pound, and that he expected them to advance rather than to decline."

He predicted that incomes from tobacco this marketing season would be more than doubled for all types except burley and fire-cured. The increase will probably be around 50 percent for burley and 60 percent for fire-cured."

Mr. Hutson addressed a large crowd of tobacco growers on the last day of the convention."

ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM THEME OF CONVENTION

The economic adjustment program of the Federal Government may be said to have been the central theme of the recent annual Farm and Home Convention, which was considered one of the most successful in the 22 years that the Experiment Station has been the common meeting ground of the farm folk of Kentucky."

Numerous subjects of vital interest to farmers, especially at this time, were discussed by Kentucky men and women, members of the faculty of the University of Kentucky, and prominent authorities from other states and from the Department of Agriculture at Washington."

Homemakers' held meetings of their own throughout the four days, in which they heard discussions of the place that women are taking in the recovery program, and on such subjects as health, fashions, education and social problems."

The Federal Government sent Dr. J. B. Hutson and Jesse Tapp to explain the program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, while members of the faculty of the Experiment Station and College of Agriculture discussed the program in Kentucky, the agricultural outlook, the use of land reaped from crop production, and other phases of the plan to adjust production and improve incomes. Organizations and groups meeting during the week included the Kentucky Dairymen's Association, the Kentucky Beekeepers' Association, the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, the Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association, the Kentucky Federation of Homemakers, the Kentucky Master Farm Homemakers' Guild, the Kentucky Holstein, Jersey and Guernsey cattle club, rural pastors, stock raisers and farmers interested in special soils and crop problems."

Cars from 52 Kentucky counties and from several other states were parked on the grounds the last day of the convention."

THE GARDEN

Seed Potatoes II

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

Kentucky potato growers are in some measure protected against planting wrong varieties or mixtures of varieties, by the Kentucky Seed Law, passed several years ago, for this Act specifies that all bags of potatoes designed for seed use must bear tag which states the true varietal name of the contents, or in the event there is a mixture, that fact. The integrity of the tags is maintained by a force of inspectors who make note of violations and report them to the proper persons in authority. This is a long step ahead."

Even assuming, however, that the contents of a bag of seed potatoes are properly named, the seed is not necessarily good for there may be present quite enough "running-out" disease and scab and black scurf quite materially to cut down the yield. To escape the risk of unsatisfactory crops, because of these troubles, it behooves any grower of even a garden-size potato plot to use nothing but certified seed."

Certified Seed
Certified seed is, briefly, healthy seed. It is grown under the supervision of inspectors for state departments of agriculture, state seed commissions or state colleges of agriculture, who are able to recognize running-out diseases in growing crops, and who insist on the removal of afflicted plants as soon as they are seen. Later, bin inspections are made and excesses over a total of 10 percent of scab and black scurf are removed, before the tags are finally affixed. The tags may be of whatever color, but to be genuine, they state the name of the certifying agency, and sometimes, the name and address of the grower, to whom recourse may be had in the event there has been misrepresentation."

Unfortunately, the word "certified" has been dishonestly used from time to time, to the confusion of the legitimate trade. Tags have been more or less studiously imitated, both in color and in wording and such names as "Agricultural Institute" attached thereto. As such instances have occurred, legal action has been taken against them, and successfully but not until after some damage has been done. Such misrepresentation has injured the grower and the dealer from whom he purchased the seed, for some of it has been exceedingly "common."

In order that dealers may not inadvertently be hoodwinked again the College of Agriculture at Lexington will welcome any inquiry on the part of any dealer who wishes to assure himself that seed potatoes offered him for resale, as being "certified" are truly so. Thus customers are protected and dealers, themselves, for the Seed Law makes it a misdemeanor to sell or expose for sale within the state, any seed under a certified tag, unless it has been produced under regulars at least as strict as those under which Kentucky growers of that same certified seed operate."

With the cooperation of dealers, spurious certified seed may be barred from the state and growers may be enabled to realize the benefits from using good seed potatoes, which are: increased yield, assured quality, and improved storability."

A sign-up campaign for dairy herd improvement association members is being conducted in Marion county, where dairy leaders are cooperating with J. E. Summers, county agent."

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Mrs. Frances Fleming, Christian county home demonstration agent, conducted a series of demonstration-lessons, showing that "wash" dresses can be made stylishly at low cost, using foundation patterns. Six homemakers' club members helped in the demonstration."

Use of the bar wall tobacco press was shown at four Barren county demonstrations, held in the tobacco warehouses. A smooth press is given the product, raising the market price. Tobacco must be left on the sticks when brought to the market."

Magoffin county farmers intend to buy certified seed potatoes this year, treat the seed and make use of improved spraying methods. A large potato crop is planned."

CONSTRUCTION

OF STATE ROADS IN KENTUCKY FOR 1934 AND 1935 DEPEND LARGELY UPON EXPENDITURES OF STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT.

In anticipation the progress of road construction in Kentucky for the next two years, it is necessary to give attention first to the fixed expenditures of the State Highway Department, which must be paid before any funds are available for road construction and secondly, the amount of revenues appropriated to the road fund of the State of Kentucky for the next biennial period."

The largest item of fixed expenditures is that of maintenance. At the beginning of the biennial period from April 1, 1932 to March 31, 1934 the State Highway Commission had under State maintenance 5520 miles of road and to maintain this mileage $8,500,000.00 of the revenues during this particular biennial period were set up in the budget of the Highway Commission and expended."

At the beginning of the biennial period of April 1, 1934 to March 31, 1936 the State Highway Commission will have more than 6670 miles of road to maintain. The difference being the mileage added to the state system under maintenance during the present biennial period which is an increase of 1150 miles or more than 20 per cent. If we would assume that the cost of maintenance per mile during the next two years would be the same as that during the past two years, then the necessary fixed expenditures for maintenance of these 6670 miles of road during the next two years would be $10,200,000.00. However, it is unreasonable to assume that the cost of maintenance per mile during the coming two years would be as low as it was during the past two years as the cost of labor, which is the chief item of maintenance, is 25 percent greater today than it was six months ago, and the cost of materials and supplies shows an increase of from thirty to fifty percent, therefore, it is only reasonable to anticipate that the cost per mile of maintenance during the next two-year period will be at least 25 percent greater than it was during the two year period ending March 31, 1934, which reduced to figures makes the anticipated cost of maintenance during the next two years $12,750,000.00."

This item of $12,750,000.00 constitutes the first item of fixed expenditures which must be given consideration when anticipating the construction program for the next two years. To this must be added other fixed expenditures such as administration estimated to cost $1,200,000.00, engineering $450,000.00, location $450,000.00, interest on warrants $200,000.00, toll bridge maintenance $350,000.00, workman's compensation $100,000, reserve account for suits pending $400,000.00, uncompleted contracts $1,000,000.00, making a total of $17,400,000.00 of fixed anticipated expenditures for the next biennial period beginning April 1, 1934."

Assuming that the State revenues for the next biennial period would be the same as those certified at the beginning of the past biennial period ($25,490,000.00) there would be left only $8,090,000.00 for construction. However, such assumption would be erroneous, as it now appears that the actual revenues for the biennial period ending March 31, 1934 will be approximately $1,000,000.00 less than those certified; therefore, the anticipated results would be, that if existing revenue producing laws for the benefit of the Road Department remain the same for the next two years as they were during the past two years, the maximum amount of State funds available for road construction during the next two years would be only $7,090,000.00."

It now appears that the State Motor License Tax will be reduced at least 25 per cent and if so reduced, then the revenues for the next biennial period would be likewise reduced a total of $2,250,000.00, all of which reduction must necessarily come off of the construction budget thus leaving a net of $4,840,000.00 for construction."

At the present time it appears as though the Legislature will divert the ad valorem tax from the road fund to the General Fund, and as this tax amounts to $1,440,000.00 during the two year period, it is evident that in determining the amount available for construction of new roads during the next biennial period will be reduced in the amount of the ad valorem tax, this leaving a net for construction of only $3,400,000.00. Even this small amount of $3,400,000.00 would be available only on condition that the other revenue producing measures remain the same as they were during the past two years, i. e. truck license, gasoline tax, and motor bus tax. Any reduction in these revenue producing measures would necessarily result in the elimination of a construction budget of State funds for the next biennial period."

At this particular time we cannot anticipate any Federal revenues due to the fact that there is no continuing Federal appropriation such as in 1932, and we have no right to assume that there will be any Federal appropriations such as can legally be included in the budget for the next biennial period."

In contemplating the construction program for the next two year period we must first give consideration to the uncompleted program now in process which includes 1043 miles of grade and drain, which is like unto a house without a roof, all of which will render no service to the public, and the investment made therein will be lost, unless completed by surfacing. The estimated cost for surfacing graded roads under existing conditions is $10,000.00 per mile, therefore the estimated cost of surfacing the 1043 miles of grade and drain is $10,430,000.00, which sum must be made available in the construction budget in order to complete the existing program of construction."

Even those measures which appear to be certain of passage by the Legislature will so effect the construction budget for the next biennial period as to make it impossible to surface all the 1043 miles of grade and drain, and only by the passage of other revenue producing measures such as tax on lubricating oil and greases will sufficient funds be provided to complete the existing program of construction."

During the past biennial period

"THE CROSS ROADS NEWSPAPER"

VOLUME 59

Established 1875

NUMBER 4

NEW MEMBERS

COMPOSE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION—MEMBERSHIP REDUCED FROM SIX TO THREE ON ACCOUNT OF NUMBER OF MAGISTERIAL DISTRICTS.

The Boone County Board of Equalization convened Monday morning in the Tax Commissioner's office for their first meeting of the present year.

The membership of the board this year is made up of three instead of six, as in former years. This reduction is due to the fact that the magisterial districts have been reduced from six to three.

Magisterial District No. 1 is represented by J. E. (Bert) Gaines, of the Petersburg pike, near Burlington; District No. 2 by M. G. Martin, of Florence; and District No. 3 by J. P. Cleek, of Beaver Lick. The character and ability of these men assure the landowners of the county of a fair and just administration of the duties imposed upon this board.

The sessions of the board are being attended by former Tax Commissioner J. S. Cason and the new incumbent, Wilton Stephens.

WHY NOT A HOME GAME?

Now that open hostilities are raging on the Austrian front, that hatchery of World War troubles of 20 years ago, many are predicting a renewal of that great conflict. Well, we merely suggest that we schedule a home game with them for this time. We went over there before and never even got our expenses paid.

2500 FUNERALS

C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, a leading undertaker of this section, stopped in town for a short time Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Chambers has been very active since he started in business as evidenced by his statement Tuesday that he has conducted more than 2500 funerals.

DR. E. J. LOVE CARING

FOR RELIEF PATIENTS Arrangements have been made with the county relief office whereby Dr. E. J. Love is caring for all cases on relief. Those who have need of medical attention who are on relief should call the local relief office at once so that the physician can be notified.

NO. 5 TOBACCO SEED

The County Agent will be able to secure a limited supply of Experiment Station No. 5 tobacco seed for growers wishing to try out this variety.

These growers securing this seed are requested to give the County Agent a report at the end of the year as to the adaptability and quality of this variety under their particular conditions.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

The local relief office at Burlington, gave out during the month of December, 1933, food vouchers amounting to $328.25, clothing at $184.35, coal $66.50, medical care, $13.20? That during the month of January, 1934, food vouchers were issued amounting to $1,054.21, clothing $493.85, medical care, $73.80? That there are living in this county children, who up to recently, have not attended school for about two years? That there are other children not attending at present because they have no books? That there are people living in the county in shacks, which were once stores? houses? That the housing problem in this county has been acute for sometime?

HEBRON LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hutter, Pastor Sunday School at 10:00 o'clock. Mr. Edwin Walton, Supt. Morning Worship at 11:00 o'clock. Subject of the sermon, "The Cross, a Stumbling Block." Rehearsal of the A Capella Choir will be held Thursday evening, February 15 at 7:30 o'clock, at the church.

The monthly business and special meeting of the Luther League will be held at the church Thursday evening, Feb. 15, after the choir rehearsal.

The monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society will be held Thursday afternoon, Feb. 22, leader, Mrs. Grace Aylor.

Charles Bodie, one of the most progressive farmers of the East Bend section, was a business visitor at the county seat Tuesday afternoon.

R. H. STEPHENS

Another of Boone county's patriarchs passed on when Richard H. Stephens died Monday afternoon at three o'clock from Mitral Regeneration. The deceased had been ill only a short time. He was 85 years of age.

He leaves his widow and one son Benjamin, six brothers and one sister. A vast number of other relatives also survive, beside a legion of friends from all parts of the county.

Mr. Stephens had occupied a prominent position in the affairs of Boone county throughout his active life. He was born and reared in the Rabbit Hash community, where he was a member of one of the oldest and largest families in the county. About ten years ago he moved to this community, where he died a respected and honorable citizen.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 p. m., burial in Odd Fellows cemetery at Burlington.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of Chambers & Grubbs, of Walton.

W. W. Woodward, manager of the Bi-County Farm Bureau Association at Devon, was a business visitor to Burlington last Saturday. He made the Recorder a very pleasant call while in town.

RALLY HELD

FOR UTOPIA CLUB MEMBERS FROM GALLATIN AND BOONE COUNTIES—PROF. HORLACHER REFERS TO BOONE AS "HOME OF HAMPSHIRE HOGS"

Boone and Gallatin county Utopia Clubs held a bi-county Utopia rally at Hebron on last Saturday afternoon and evening. Approximately sixty Utopians attended the event which was enjoyed by all.

Prof. L. J. Horlacher, assistant Dean of the College of Agriculture attended the meeting and gave a talk on the University of Kentucky and the College of Agriculture and its services to its students and the state. A number of Boone county boys and girls are now attending the University of Kentucky and many more have graduated and are now successful citizens. He said Boone county was known the country over and listed in leading agricultural books as the county where the Hampshire hog was originated. Kentucky's position as a sheep state was discussed with the boys following the general meetings.

Mr. W. W. Magill, fruit specialist from the College discussed with the members the necessity of making the farm pay a profit so that they may be able to pass on to their children fifteen to twenty-five years from now the schools, roads and citizenship that the members themselves are today enjoying. He also stressed the importance of the next few years trying one more acre of small fruit as an additional cash income from the farm.

A basket supper at the evening hour was served. Mrs. Frew Slekman and Mrs. Hubert Conner, Conner, mothers of four of the members assisted in making this part of the program a success. A good recreational program was rendered following the regular business session.

The purpose of the Federal Production Credit Corporation will be discussed with the Boone county farmers and a director will be elected at Burlington Court House on Tuesday afternoon, February 20th at 2:00 p. m.

The Production Credit Corporation has for its purpose the loaning of money to solvent farmers for purpose of production of crops or livestock. It works under the Intermediate Credit Bank out of Louisville and is set up under a system quite similar to the Federal Land Bank Associations.

All farmers interested in knowing about this program and wishing to take part in the election of a director from Boone county are urged to attend this meeting.

L. L. Brown, of Florence, made this office a business call Monday and had sale bills printed for the public sale of the late Mrs. Sarah Brown, of near Limaburg. Read the ad in this issue.

WALTON FIVE

CAPTURES DEFENSIVE BATTLE FROM BURLINGTON SATURDAY NIGHT—SCORE IS 23-16—PETERSBURG BULLDOGS TO BE HERE FRIDAY NIGHT.

The Burlington Tomcats lost to the Walton Bearcats at Walton last Saturday night after a very well played game by the score of 23 to 16. It was purely a defensive battle, neither team showing much in the way of an offense. No doubt both team coaches did not desire to lay their cards on the table face up, as each team is accorded a good chance for the county championship and they meet each other in the first game of the tournament.

The Petersburg Bulldogs come here for a return game on Friday night of this week. It will be recalled that these two teams played a bangup game here several weeks ago when the Tomcats won by only four points.

The girls tea malso will play as a preliminary.

CARS COLLIDE

A car driven by W. B. Arnold and another operated by John Sullivan formerly of the Rabbit Hash community collided near the residence of Thomas Hensley on the Bellevue pike near Burlington last Friday afternoon. A man, whose name was not learned by the writer, and who occupied the car with Mr. Sullivan, was cut about the head when the windshield was broken. His injuries, however, were not serious. The autos were badly damaged and were towed to Burlington for repairs.

TO PLAY AT FLORENCE

Three games are on the schedule at the Florence High School gym Friday night, February 16. The high school teams play at Green Springs, while the Independent girls team will play the Martz Independent team from Covington. Three weeks ago these two teams played three overtime periods to a draw and this game will settle their differences.

BRING GOOD PRICES

The firm of Kirtley and Kirtley, auctioneers, of East Bend, report that mule teams brought $240 and $225 per team, cows sold for as high as $45 and corn brought 64 cents per bushel at the Sullivan sale in that neighborhood last Saturday.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

SUCCESSFUL POULTRY SCHOOL

A successful poultry school was held at Florence on last Thursday, despite the winter weather. Approximately twenty poultrymen attended the meeting.

Dr. T. P. Polk, field agent in Veterinary science gave a good discussion on poultry diseases and their control. He especially stressed the life history of Lukema, a new poultry disease, carried through the egg to the chick and outlined methods under which it could be controlled. Plans by which most common diseases could be controlled and the poultrymen feel a degree of safety were outlined.

The colony brooder house and the home made wood burning stove was discussed by Mr. Jim Humphrey, poultry specialist as having proven the most economical and successful plan of brooding chicks. Chicks brooded according to recommendations are returning a profit according to Mr. Humphrey.

Mr. Grant Maddox outlined his plan of chick brooding that had enabled him to successfully raise 2,000 chickens annually. Control of stealing was stressed as an important problem. He recommended a sufficient large flock to enable the use of a workful thief prevention system.

TOBACCO MARKETING CARDS

The tobacco warehouses have requested that in cases where growers do not get their marketing cards filled out when the tobacco is sold to bring their warehouse receipts with them when they request their cards filled out.

LET'S BURY THE HATCHET

We received a letter this week from a very respectable lady reader of ours, who desires that we curb activities of one of our correspondents. This we hesitate to do for we do not desire to step on any one's toes. The writer of the column comes from one of the county's most respectable families and friends of long standing of this newspaper. So does the writer of the letter.

We do not wish to become embroiled in personal differences, such as seem to exist since this information comes to us. However, from reading the column we were unable to detect it before. As long as direct statements of slanderous nature, with actual names mentioned, are omitted the Recorder, as a newspaper, feels that it would be inappropriate and useless to interfere.

We, of course, would not sympathize with nor permit any ridicule of a church society in our columns. The Recorder's columns always have been open to news of the churches and on numerous occasions we have published items of advertising of church affairs without a cent of cost to them, but always at a cost to us.

Of course our columns are open at all times to anyone who feels aggrieved at any inference to answer same. With this we express our fervent hope that the hatchet soon will be buried and all of our readers will be friends again.

L. W. AYLER INJURED

L. W. Aylor, garageman and blacksmith of Limaburg and Burlington, was the victim of an accident Monday afternoon when a band saw he was operating caught his left hand and severed three fingers. He was rushed to Dr. M. A. Yelton, who dressed the member and is making every effort to save the fingers, although it is probably that at least one, possibly two, will be lost. The accident, unfortunate and costly at any time, comes with a shop full of work and Mr. Aylor has the sympathy of the entire community.

STOLEN CAR FOUND

A car bearing Kenton county license No. 461-349, which was reported stolen in Covington last week, was located and identified last Sunday afternoon on the Dry Creek pike by A. E. Lindenschmidt, of South Ft. Mitchell, and who notified Sheriff W. B. Cotton. Mr. Cotton notified Covington police and the owner claimed the car Monday.

WILLIAM F. SNELLING

William F. Snelling, well known farmer of the Bellevue neighborhood, passed away at his home last Sunday, February 11th. He was born January 18, 1859, being just a few days past 75 at the time of his death.

On August 14, 1881, he was married to Miss Louisa Jane Slayback, who preceded him in death 13 years ago. To this union 12 children were born and of which number eight still are living. The deceased was also survived by two sisters, one brother, 27 grandchildren and one great grand-child.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday at his home by Rev. Raymond Smith, of Bellevue. Chambers and Grubbs, of Walton, had charge of the remains for burial.

The Epworth League of the Burlington M. E. church were hosts Monday evening to the Rose Epworth Union, composed of Erlanger, Florence, Walton, East Bend, and Burlington churches. Approximately 150 members of the various leagues were present and enjoyed a program prepared by the committee.

Rev. King, pastor of the Erlanger church, was the principal speaker and made a fine talk on "One's character—and how to keep it."

Following the devotional services came the recreational program.

POPULAR GIRL

WEDS ERLANGER MAN—COMES AS SURPRISE TO MANY—ANNOUNCEMENT MADE THIS WEEK—IS DAUGHTER OF DR. M. A. YELTON.

Announcement of the marriage of Miss Virginia Yelton to Mr. Britton Monroe, of Erlanger, came as a distinct surprise to a majority of the people of this community early this week.

While not a few had suspected the marriage for some time, yet none were certain until the announcement came. The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. E. Walker at the court house on December 23, 1933.

Mr. Monroe is the daughter of Dr. M. A. Yelton, of Burlington and a leading physician of this section, while Mr. Monroe is a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Monroe, of Center street, Erlanger.

The bride is a graduate of Burlington high school, while the groom likewise is a graduate of Erlanger. They are at home at the residence of Dr. Yelton in Burlington. The Recorder joins their host of friends in best wishes for a long, happy and prosperous married life.

NATIONAL REEMPLOYMENT SERVICE

All unemployed men who registered with us during the year 1933 and who are not working please call at the local office in Burlington and have your registration renewed. As we are now in a new year this will be necessary in order to have consideration for employment in the future, should such opportunities arise.

Those who have come to see us for the first time, and those who have had an interview since the first of the year do not have to do this. Remember this applies only to those who have not been in the office since January 1st, and notified us that they are still seeking employment.

We wish to impress on the public that the office will be open from 8 a. m. to 12 noon each day of the week, we are short of office help and must have the afternoons to keep up our other office work. Therefore registrations and re-registrations will be considered between these hours only.

SILVER LEADERS 4-H CLUB

We had our first meeting at the school house Feb. 8. Mr. Fish was with us. We are planning for a great time in club work this year, with the following officers in charge: President, Melvin Moore, Jr.; Vice President, Melvin Moore, Jr.; Secretary and Treasurer, Mary Calvin Atha; Club Reporter, Lloyd K. Jones; Program Committee, Sara B. Ryle, William W. Aylor, and Lloyd K. Jones.

We were sorry Mr. Forkner could not be with us. Our next meeting will be March 5th.

Lloyd K. Jones, Club Reporter

Esquire W. H. Presser, of the Rabbit Hash precinct, was in Burlington on business Tuesday.

CAMPAIGN CLOSES

SATURDAY WILL MARK END OF UNITED EFFORT TO OBTAIN 100 PERCENT SIGN-UP OF TOBACCO GROWERS—92.2 PERCENT "IN THE BAG."

Saturday will mark the close of the Burley Tobacco Sign-Up Campaign in the county and in the state according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. A last minute run of late signers is expected. Six hundred and forty-three growers had signed 92.2 percent of Boone county tobacco acreage under contract on Monday morning of this week.

The Community Control Board Elections are to start on Thursday of this week and be completed on Saturday of next week, according to plans made by the county campaign committee in a meeting held at Burlington on last Wednesday. The dates of the control Board elections will be as follows:

Verona, School building, Thursday, February 15th, 1:00 p. m.
Walton, school building, Thursday, February 15th 7:00 p. m.
Grant, school building, Friday February 16th, 7:00 p. m.
Union, bank, Saturday, February 17th, 9:00 a. m.
Florence, town hall, February 17, 1:00 p. m. fast time.
Hahilton, school building, February 19th, 7:00 p. m.
Petersburg, bank, February 20th, 9:00 a. m.

Hebron, Crutcher's store, February 20th, 2:00 p. m.
Burlington, court house February 21st 1:00 p. m.
Beaver, Sleet's store, February 24th, 1:00 p. m.

Each community will elect a Control Board Committee of three, including a chairman, vice chairman and one other committeeman. The chairman of the community committees will make up the County Control Board. The community committee will assist the County Control Board in the enforcement of the AAA contracts.

Every tobacco cooperater in the government program has been notified of the election in his community. No proxy votes can be made so it is important that all be present at the elections in their particular communities.

Names of tobacco contract signers beginning February 6th, 1934: Frank Allen, A. B. Louden, L. L. Tucker, Bernard Gaines, George Denner, Miss Hattie E. White, L. C. Stephenson, Owen McMullen, Sterling Rouse, Ben E. Harris, R. R. Aylor, Mrs. Mary Frances Williams, J. J. Stahl, Miss Marie Dorsey, Miss Lizzie Dorsey, C. K. Marksberry, Ewing Flick.

W. M. S.

The Bellevue W. M. S. met at the church Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 7th for regular monthly meeting. There were fourteen members present.

Bro. Raymond Smith conducted the Bible study, the scripture was Math 5:10-17.

Mrs. Pearl Huey gave an interesting talk on Missionary Work in inland China.

"We will have an all-day meeting March 7th with a special program in the morning in observance of the March week of prayer, and the regular Missionary program in the afternoon. We hope every member will be present at this meeting. Also we are always glad to have visitors.

Mrs. R. S. Hensley, Pub. Chmn.

4-H CLUB MEETING

The first meeting of the Norbeh Champion 4-H club of Hebron was held Thursday, Feb. 1, 1934 to reorganize the club.

Mr. Fish was present at this meeting and congratulated us on the number of members, which was forty-nine. A membership committee was appointed consisting of: Betty Crigler, Bessie Reeves, and James Dolwick and their duty is to check over the new members to see if they are all eligible.

The newly elected officer presided at the meeting and they were President, Robert, Elkins; Vice-President, Kenneth Wohrley, and Secretary, Betty Crigler.

Prof. Lucy gave us a good talk on making this the biggest club year we have ever had.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, March 6th.

We hope this coming year will be a success.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

"Your secret?" Smif tried to speak brightly, but there was a load on her heart that seemed to weigh down her spirit. "I can guess what it is, and I'm glad if you're happy—ever and ever so glad, Stone."

She held out her hand which he regarded frowningly without taking.

"Sit down over there," he motioned to a chair on the other side of his desk, not rising to place it for her. Then he leaned his elbows on the blotter and bent toward her. "I wonder if you're as good a guesser as you think you are?"

Smif, too, leaned her arms on the desk, resting her head in her hands.

"I guessed last night," she said. "I'd never been certain before, I'd never seen her when she was not grotesquely fat. In her own house, she's charming, Stone."

"So that was the reason you went off with Susan Phelps and left me in the lurch?" he exclaimed petulantly. "That was a mean trick, when you knew I wanted to talk to you."

"How was I to know that?" Smif asked, annoyed at his unreasonable-ness. "You never even looked at me all evening."

"And a good reason I had for that," Stone declared. "It made me perfectly furious to see you sitting there wishing me on Mercy."

"Wishing you on Mercy?" Smif echoed his words helplessly. "Honestly, Stone, I don't know what you mean."

Before he spoke again he pushed the fittings of the desk listlessly here and there. Then, with one sweep he showed them all aside and leaning across it, looked directly into her eyes.

"I mean I'm in love with you. Madly, foolishly, insanely in love with you. So much in love that I'm afraid to look at you in public for fear I'll murder any puppy who happens to be talking to you. Don't you know you are tractedly. 'I've always been such a success in managing other people's affairs while I seem to be an awful fool about my own'."

"Let's make it tomorrow, then," Stone said, taking up the telephone. "After that I'll manage your affairs for you. Ring three on this line, please?"

"Stone! Do you mean to say you have a party line? No wonder Miss Mercedes knew all your plans—" "Hello! Is that you, Septimus? Tell Miss Mercedes I'd like to speak to her. Yes, it's Mr. Nesbit."

"Don't say tomorrow, Stone. I'll have to bring my sisters here—and Cousin Mab must be told—"

"She knows already," Stone interjected. "Lo, Mercy. Just wanted to make an announcement to you. You won't be surprised. You're such a clever girl—" He grinned impishly at Smif and went on: "I'm engaged to Miss Lovely. . . . Yes, we're going to be married very soon. . . . Thanks awfully. I'll tell Smif that. . . . Yes, thanks again. . . . You're going to take Gregory's tip? His aunt is positively authentic and able to introduce you everywhere. I'll send him over to give you all the details. He hung up again, grinning companionably at Smif. "Just as easy as that. She knew it all the time, she says."

"Seemingly everybody knew it except me," Smif smiled back, thinking how young and handsome and gay he was. Happiness was already making a new man of him. "I don't understand why nobody took me into the secret. I suppose Pam knew it, and Susan and Eve—"

"Not Pam," he answered quite seriously. "She is too busy with her own affairs; but Susan of course—and I don't see anyone keeping anything much from Eve—"

"What did it matter? Smif asked herself. She had always said it was easier to hide a conflagration than a love affair, only she had not meant that to apply to her own romance.

"I'm still not altogether happy about your neighbor," she nodded her head in the general direction of Rockmoor. "You may be," Stone assured her. "You see, Madame Saltou, there's something I scarcely dare confess to you. You really are getting a left-over. I'm a flitted man. Mercy fell so in love with her own loveliness that she felt it should not be wasted on a mere country squire in 'ole Virginia.' She's out for a title, and Greg, who's a good chap with a sense of humor and a lot of family feeling, has steered her up against one of his own relatives who will present her to the queen and the other assembled aristocrats and who is much in need of the ready. That's what we were conspiring about at dinner last night."

"When I was so unhappy," Smif said.

"I guessed that was what was the matter this morning," Stone cried tri-

"I Mean I'm in Love With You Madly. Foolishly, Insanely in Love With You."

a dream come true? Even as a child, I told my mother I meant to marry the girl in the miniature." His eyes held hers. He was bending nearer and nearer. The effect was hypnotic. With an effort Smif wrenched her gaze away. "The very first day I saw you it was all I could do to leave without telling you—"

Mercy—She must think of Mercy—She had promised to help her—and maybe Mercy was a prey to the feelings that were tearing at her now. To save herself, since she dared not meet his eyes, she fixed her attention on his mouth. That had been the feature she had held in doubt when first she saw him. Tender, sweet—why had she ever questioned it? And then it smiled and Mercy was forgotten.

"Oh, Stone," she cried softly, "I never knew I liked your mouth before—but I love it."

"I'm glad, I'm glad you do," he murmured, as it sought hers. And as their lips met passion leaped like an electric spark from the one to the other. If it had been unrecognized before, even Smif was aware of it now.

For a space time stood still.

"Darling," Smif said, "I can't—we mustn't. Don't you see? It wouldn't be honorable. Mercy paid me to help her to marry you. How can I go to her and tell her I'm going to marry you myself instead?"

"We'll refund her money," Stone said, lazily content to wait for what he now knew was his. "Even you couldn't force me to marry that piece of perfection. And you don't have to tell her anything. I'd love to do it. Hasn't she made me go in fear of captivity for years? I'll call her on the telephone and tell her we're going to be married. When are we going to be married, dearest? Tomorrow?"

"Oh, I don't know," Smif cried distraintfully, "when Eve warned me that something was wrong and that I'd better stay at home and comfort you—"

Just then two thoughts struck Smif so simultaneously that she could scarcely say which was first.

Stone must never know of her disappointment or her hurt at her brother's broken faith.

And was there any chance that she was wrong in her supposition that he was the buyer of Lovelylea? The mere thought set her trembling. She must know and at once. She was in a panic at the possibility.

"There's only one thing needed now to make me quite content—" she began.

"And that?" Stone asked.

"That Bill-Lee should sell us Lovelylea."

"By jove, haven't I told you? When that was my secret!" Stone exclaimed. "I wrote Bill-Lee that I wanted to give it to you for a wedding present—"

"Wasn't that rather taking things for granted?" Smif inquired mildly.

"No," Stone wagged his head solemnly. "I didn't tell him you were going to marry me. It might have been some other fellow. It was plain they'd be after you in swarms before long. Just cast your mind back to that fool Blanton. Anyway, I asked your brother to keep it a dead secret, because I wanted to surprise you."

Smif's cup of happiness was now running over. Bill-Lee wasn't a cad and a cheat and ungrateful. She looked back at her lover with shining eyes. He would never know what a wedding present he was giving her.

The dogs rose and stretched. Then seeing the tableau, stood on their hind legs and pawed jealously at their master and mistress.

Washington.—Among the characteristics of the New Deal which President Roosevelt is giving is a

of planning for the long-range developments along with quick action for, as well as the rule of the emergency problems. None can say that he has failed to be quick on the trigger when it came to taking some kind of action when emergencies had to be solved, whether one agrees with them or not, but coupled with this haste he has been moving in the direction of long-range planning with a celerity that is, to say the least, unusual in government.

Some months ago, I wrote of the possibilities of the transfer of human beings, like so many cattle or chattels, into new spheres of activity, into a new locale, into places where some of them have a chance for, an even break in the battle for subsistence. At that time, I believed the idea, advanced to me by some of the President's advisers, was largely a dream. But it has gone past that stage and is about to become a reality.

Harry Hopkins, who stepped out to be administrator of the government's job of extending relief to the destitute and who since has become one of the President's right-hand men, is now seriously planning a rehabilitation movement of the very kind that, as I said, was only a dream six months ago. Hundreds of thousands of individual families are involved. Their future is all bound up in the scientific planning or the whim, whichever you choose to call it, of those social engineers of the New Deal. It is experimental, admittedly, but those who are working out the plan claim it can be carried out successfully. With Mr. Hopkins as Rexford Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture and one of the professors of the New Deal, Mordecai Ezekiel, also of the Department of Agriculture and also one of the professors; Dale C. Parrot and Conrad H. Wirth, of the Interior Department, and Jacob Baker, of the Civil Works Administration. Their plans will be completed within another month.

Summarized the program contemplates the physical transfer of thousands upon thousands of men and their families from cities and industrial areas or from farming communities where the land has been worked to death, to areas where the people have a chance to produce their own living instead of being, as they now are, on roles of charitable or government relief organizations. This transplanting seems to have two purposes: First, it will provide those people who are moved with better living conditions and a fresh start and second, it will relieve the crowded conditions and the demand for jobs in the places from which they are moved.

"We have large numbers of families whose economic future is so discouraging that it seems entirely improbable that they will ever again be accommodated in industry, or particularly in the industry where they once had jobs," said Mr. Hopkins. "They are in industries that have been worked out, such as in the steel centers to some extent, in copper areas and in farming country that is no longer productive and where one can make a living out of it."

"As to submarginal lands, in contradistinction to timber land, we find families living on such lands and the government cannot go in and simply purchase the lands and have those families move on and go places. They must have some place to go. So that the plan is not only for these centers where industry cannot help them but for those on submarginal land who are in the same kind of economic stagnation. This plan gets into the government's long-range program and into some of the first steps that are necessary to work out that program. We are going to try, therefore, to take those first steps in the interest of those needy people involved and in the interests of a national economy at the same time."

Thus the picture is unfolded of a general program that, carried to the ultimate, is the herding of the population into the various sections of the country or cities as the planners in Washington deem wise. It is a program that is designed to make the social map of the nation. Those who sponsor it go into ecstasy in discussing the beauties of the dream and the ideals which are sought to obtain. They depict for the transferred populace one permanent joy of living, or as nearly such as may be expected on earth, and in listening to their exposition of the plans, one will feel the sincerity of their beliefs without half trying. They believe it is as near utopian in its possibilities as a government may produce for its people.

"But what will those people do when they have been taken somewhere?" Mr. Hopkins was asked.

"They may do two or three things," he replied promptly. "They may work part of the time in national forests, for example. Large numbers of men are required for rehabilitation and re-planting of our national forests. The Civilian Conservation Corps cannot begin to get all of the work done."

"I think it is time for the government to explore this situation and make plans aside from just giving relief. If the government is going to spend such large sums of money, a substantial portion of it should be spent in constructive enterprises like this."

And with a fund of $25,000,000 to start, we launch on another plan for changing our national life. Mr. Hopkins described the $25,000,000 as "just a starter," and explained that many more millions can and will be used if the ideas prove practicable. He thinks they will.

But among those hardened critics that watch Washington day after day, and who do not have to shape their ideas along political lines, among those who try to be unbiased, there is a hope that the scheme can be carried out and a fear that it is too idealistic for use among people with the traditions of those of the United States. In other words, it is a guess whether the plan will be practicable.

One hardened observer took me severely to task for even assuming that it was possible to execute the plan without wasting many times as much money as it could be worth by any gauge you care to set up. I called attention that there were undoubtedly some families that would welcome an opportunity to get on a piece of farm land, made available to them by the government, for which they could pay as they were able. I thought they would learn a new joy in life itself and become independent, right-thinking citizens.

"Some families" is right," he sneered at me. "But for those 'some' that will make use of the change, there will be twenty times as many that will drift back to their old ways of living at the first opportunity."

It has been unusually interesting to watch the reverberations and reactions here to the speech made recently in Topeka, Kan., by Ogden L. Mills, secretary of the treasury under President Hoover. Strange and paradoxical as it may seem, the Mills speech put an unexpected amount of fire into some Democrats in the administration in support of the Roosevelt New Deal and put fire into others to cause them to criticize it.

Ogden Mills has been derided and ridiculed as few men have suffered in political life. He was born an aristocrat and the politicians opposed to him have made use of that. But Ogden Mills is a fighter, and his Topeka speech showed that he had lost none of his fortitude.

It will be remembered that Mr. Mills charged Mr. Roosevelt with "an unconstitutional effort" to grasp power over the country and accused the President of destroying the rights and liberties of the people under the Constitution. I have seen much less serious charges hurled at a President to be followed by a young riot by his supporters. There have been some attacks on Mr. Mills thus far, but observers here thought they did not carry the old-time ring of a real battle. Of course, it is known generally that a goodly number of the President's own party have been doubtful of some of his plans but they have been afraid to bark too loudly because of the elections next autumn. Those individuals lately have been a little more brave and, when I was around the senate and house of representatives the other day, I heard more mutterings than usual.

I asked some of the avid Roosevelt supporters what it meant. Their answers were almost identical: "They are not real Democrats."

Getting Timorous

But I asked several of those who had been thus catalogued as "not real Democrats" what the significance was of the changed attitude. Their answers were down one groove: "We are just getting afraid of the way this man Roosevelt is leading us."

While the Mills speech has been accepted here as being the opening gun in the Republican campaign for next fall, it probably will have a broader effect than that according to the suggestions I have heard most frequently. Even the chief Democratic leaders under the New Deal admit that President Roosevelt has been busy for a year in development of a Roosevelt party, as distinguished from a purely Democratic party. That being the fact, then, I am told that Mr. Mills has issued a rallying cry for concentration of strength in opposition to the Roosevelt policies, or many of them. Is it not possible, then, Mr. Mills may have started the actual formation of a new Republican party?

As Mr. Mills set his ideas, it is made to appear that he and those who follow him will foster the philosophy of wide-open competition among all, with as little government domination as is possible; that it will be their contention that bureaucratic control shall be avoided in every direction and that the powers of the Chief Executive of the nation shall be limited to those properly delegated by the Constitution to him.

Romans First to Use Silver as Currency

Republic silver coinage was first coined in Rome about 268 B. C. Soon after the end of the Pyrrhic war, the obverse showed a helmeted head, symbolizing Roma, the reverse the Dioscuri, or heavenly twins, charging on horseback to right. The values were indicated by "X" for the denarius, "V" for the quinarius and "IIS" for the sestertius. These marks of value were usually behind the head of Roma.

The "X" on the denarius is found on all coins for many years after 217 B. C. The mark "XVI" occurs on a small group struck about 150-145 B. C. Later the "X" with a bar across appears. After about 110 B. C., marks of value are usually absent from silver.

There is no doubt that the earliest silver coins of Rome are those showing the Dioscuri, followed by others showing Diana driving a biga or chariot. These appeared about 217 B. C., and later the money designers took up the spirit of the changing custom and used the reverse to depict historical events. Through these pictured events it is possible to determine the date of issue of the coin.

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system, or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem:

Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that is all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and it's gentle, perhaps weaken the entire system, or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem:

JESUS' POWER TO HELP

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 8:1-9:34.
GOLDEN TEXT—But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice; for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. Matthew 9:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Forgives a Sinful Man.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Proves He Can Forgive Sin.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Meets Our Needs.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Meeting Human Needs.

In chapters 8 and 9 of Matthew are grouped a number of miracles which exhibit the power of Jesus Christ over the chief foes of men—sickness, sin, satanic power, death, and storms. It is fitting that they should be grouped here following the laws of the kingdom, for they show the power to administer the affairs of the kingdom and produce within his subjects the graces of character demanded by these laws. It would make the lesson too long to attempt to consider all these miracles. Therefore certain of the most outstanding should be selected.

1. Jesus Heals a Leper (8:1-4). Leprosy was the most loathsome and hopeless disease known. In the Jewish ritual it was regarded as a symbol of sin. Just as leprosy was incurable by man, so only the Divine Physician can cure sin.

2. The leper's faith (v. 2). His cry was most pitiable, but his faith was strong. He fully believed that Jesus was able, but was uncertain as to his willingness, to heal him.

3. Jesus' power (v. 3). He put forth his hand and touched the leper, bidding the disease to depart, and instantly the man was cleansed.

II. Jesus Heals the Centurion's Servant (8:5-13).

1. The disease (v. 6). It was paralysis. In paralysis the victim is helpless.

2. The centurion's humility (v. 8). He first sent the Jewish elders and then his friends (Luke 7:3, 6) because he felt his own unworthiness. The condition of this servant was so grave that his master brushed aside timidity and personally appealed to Jesus.

3. The centurion's faith (vv. 8, 9). He believed that if Jesus would but speak the word his servant would be healed. His faith was so remarkable that Jesus marveled because it was not like anything he had discerned among the chosen people.

4. The wonderful power of Jesus (v. 13). He did not even need to see the helpless man and touch him, but needed only to speak the word and it was done.

III. Jesus Heals Peter's Mother-in-Law (8:14, 15).

This woman was sick of a fever. Jesus was invited into Peter's home to heal her, and upon his touching the hand of the patient the fever left her.

IV. Jesus Casts Out Demons (8:28-34).

After stilling the tempest, Jesus crossed to the other side of the sea into heathen territory.

1. Met by two men possessed by demons (v. 28). These men were in a desperate condition (Mark 5:1-17, and Luke 8:27). So fierce were they that no one could safely pass that way, any today are demon possessed and their number is increasing (I Tim. 4:1).

2. What they knew about Christ (v. 29). They knew that he was the Son of God and that he had come to destroy the devil and his work. Among demons there is no doubt as to the deity of Jesus Christ and the judgment to come.

3. Limitation of the devil's power (v. 31). Although the devil is mighty in power, he cannot even enter a hog without God's permission.

4. Christ's power to deliver from the devil (vv. 30-32). The demons quailed before him, not daring to dispute his power, but begged permission to enter the swine.

V. Jesus Opening the Eyes of Two Blind Men (9:27-31).

1. The intelligence of faith (v. 27). They cried unto him as the Son of David which showed they recognized him as the promised Messiah. The prophet had foretold such to be the works of the Messiah (Isa. 29:18, 35:5, 41:7).

2. The persistence of faith (v. 28). These poor men had heard of the wonderful works of Jesus. This wrought in them a desire to be healed. They, therefore, followed him along the way crying out for help.

3. The challenge of faith (v. 28). In reply to his challenge they gave him a definite answer.

4. The triumph of faith (vv. 29, 30). Their faith brought them into touch with the Lord of life, who opened their eyes.

Our Giving Measure

God's great purpose in wanting men to give to him is that we may be enabled to give more abundantly to them. It is impossible for a man to give anything to God that does not come back to the man a thousandfold.

Tact

The observance of tact, the universally lauded, depends chiefly on the omission of certain actions, or even more often of words. To say the right thing at the right time to the right person is perfection.

DIVORCED BY SON OF FORMER KAISER,
PRINCESS WORKS

Lives With Second Husband and Earns Living Painting Portraits.

New York.—The world may soon see a grandson of the former kaiser, hand-picked by Adolph Hitler, as the titular ruler of the "new" Germany.

Behind recent reports from Berlin that the Nazi chancellor is grooming the handsome young Prince Alexander Ferdinand of the Hohenzollern dynasty to become regent of the reich, is a story of fortitude, suffering and heart-break of the prince's mother—the Princess Alexandra Victoria, now living impoverished in Copenhagen as plain Mrs. Arnold Reumann.

Caught in the vortex of great political upheavals that have swept over Europe in the last decade, the royal mother only a few months ago was eking out a living by painting portraits in New York's Greenwich village.

Kept Away From Prince.

A new sorrow has just come into the tragic life of Alexandra Victoria. This time it is a mother's failure to see her only child from whom she has been separated for years. Although they are now only a few hundred miles apart, they might as well be living on different planets. Figuratively, they are worlds apart.

The princess sailed recently from New York for Germany with one dominant hope—to see her boy, now an officer of Hitler's storm troopers. The present regime quickly frowned on her attempts to meet Prince Alexander.

Then she sought out old friends, once powerful court intimates at Potsdam, to whom she appealed. Their efforts, too, in her behalf were fruitless. A direct appeal to the Nazi leader brought a curt and final "No."

Discouraged over weeks of pleading with the highest powers in the Hitler government, Alexandra finally gave up and with her husband sailed for Copenhagen, an impoverished artist and a broken-hearted mother.

Before Princess Alexandra came to America she had lived in a simply furnished flat in Munich, doing her own housework.

Divorced by Wilhelm.

Previously Alexandra Victoria had been divorced by Prince Wilhelm—soon after the Kaiser's flight to Holland. Her ex-husband was awarded custody of their child—now the twenty-one-year-old prince so prominently mentioned as Hitler's personal choice for the regency.

Two years later, the Princess married Commander Reumann, then in the German naval service, but a scandal in high naval circles shortly afterward led to his resignation. Then it was that the pair, ostracized and virtually penniless, went to Munich. But success did not attend the princess' efforts to make a living with her brush, and with her husband she came to New York's Bohemian quarter to live.

Seven years passed—among them America's depression years—and there were periods in which Alexandra and her husband waged a struggle against outright poverty.

Hunter Mistakes Horse for Deer and Walks Home

Boise, Idaho.—Bernard Wiscomb returned home from a hunt with his kill, but he had to walk. Wiscomb went into Sawtooth Lodge country to shoot deer. He rented a horse and rode far into the backwoods. He tied the horse and proceeded on foot. A short distance ahead he saw what appeared to be a deer and he fired. He dashed to the spot where his "kill" lay, and found his horse. It had been instantly killed.

Quail Breaks Window, Lands on Man's Toast

Tiffin, Ohio.—Leroy Swabley had quail on toast at luncheon and did not violate Ohio game laws.

He was munching a piece of toast when a quail crashed through the dining room window and landed on another square on his plate.

The bird, unhurt, was released by Swabley, who swears his story is true and displays the broken pane to prove it.

Without Sleep 8 Years, Still Very Much Alive

Huddersfield, England.—William Blackburn, rabbit-breeder, who, according to doctors and the laws of nature, should not be alive, is still very much alive after going eight years without sleep. Since a serious operation eight years ago, it is claimed, he has not had an hour's sleep. Every night he sits in bed reading and smoking without even dozing.

Texas Turkeys Starving

Kerrville, Texas.—Thousands of wild turkeys are starving to death in this area. Long drought has so reduced the food supply that sheep and goats have eaten most of the grass and other feed that would have helped the turkeys. Many turkeys are in such starved condition that hunters will not kill them.

Etiquette in Hog Killing

RABBIT HASHINGS

BY NOEL WALTON

A STORY from real life: Way back there Uncle J., who enjoyed the reputation of being the biggest bar in these parts at that time and at whom the boys poked much fun came walking hurriedly up the E. Bend road to Rabbit Hash.

"Hey Uncle," hollered one of the loafers on the store porch as the old fellow started down the erry road, "stop and tell us the biggest lie you ever told in your life."

"An't got time!" Uncle J. replied stepping briskly. "Johnny Platt just died and I'm going over the river to get him a coffin. See this stick? Well I got his measurements notched on it." With that he headed for the ferry and over the river. The sad news he left spread quickly and before long a group set out on the long dusty walk to see the bereaved family and console them. But they reckoned without Uncle J.—his story telling powers for when they got to Johnny's house they found him splittin' wood. Uncle J.—told the biggest one eh? A true story.

Apparently "all's quiet on the East Bend front."

Now, "John" you should never sass your betters by saying "Is zat so?"

The battle of Florence held Saturday night furnished considerable excitement, eh Paul?

And the boy from Williamstown is again runnin' in the money up R. H. way. We had hopes either of an auctioneering partnership, or a barber chair behind the grocery store, but we'll have to be satisfied with a Ford garage.

Taxes

Said Statesman A to Statesman B:

"What can we tax that is not paying?"

"We're taxing every blessed thing, here's what our people are defraying:

Tariff tax, income tax
Tax on retail sales,
Club tax, school tax,
Tax on beers and ales."
"Brewer tax, sewer tax,
Tax on motor cars;
Bond tax, stock tax
Tax on liquor bars."
"Poll tax, dog tax,
Tax on money loaned;
State tax, road tax,
Tax on all things owned."
"Stamp tax, land tax,
Tax on wedding ring;
High tax, low tax,
Tax on everything."

Said Statesman B to Statesman A:

"The deficit each moment waxes;
"This is no time for us to fail—
We will decree a tax on taxes."

SNAPSHOTS AT SPORTS

By Neville Dunn

By happening once, it could be an accident. By happening twice, it could be a coincidence. But when Mahan, the young man who plays center for the Transylvania College basketball team, unravels the netting on the goal with a barrage of field goals in game after game, you can put it down in the books that the young man has the stuff.

A multitude of things has prevented the observer who aims his thoughts in this column from seeing Charlie Freeman's Pioneers in action this year. But from all reports, Charlie Freeman—who used to be in the same history class with us in high school—not only has developed a clever basket ball team but he has polished young Mahan until he is one of the very finest basket ball players this Kentucky city of many fine basket ball players has ever seen.

Competition is that thing which distinguishes between a flash in the pan and substantiality. The weaker the competition, the more brilliant the flash. The tougher the going, the weaker the flash. Reliability and substantiality do not always assert themselves against weak competition. If possessed, they invariably show themselves when there are mountains to be climbed and raging torrents to be crossed.

Now, take this young Mahan chap.

Morehead sent a star in a youngster named Combs over here to do battle against Transylvania. Combs is no morning glory either and he put up such a whale of a fight, he scored something like 25 points. But Mahan, meeting for the first time this season perhaps, a young man who was a worthy foe, one capable of pushing him to the limit what did he do? He tossed in 26 points!

The University of Louisville came to Lexington to step on the Pioneers much in the fashion of an arrogant giant squashing a caterpillar. Louisville was undefeated in the S. I. A. A. and it was perched highest of all in the standing.

Louisville had a first class basket ball team—its record showed that. It was favored to take Transylvania in stride. Yet, Louisville, as confident as it must have been, realized that the most dangerous threat to its position was Mahan. The Cardinals came here prepared to stop Mahan—to concentrate on him.

In Louisville, Mahan faced the kind of competition that makes a player of his courage and quality strain at the leash. Here, was a challenge! And to men like Mahan, a challenge is the sweetest thing in life.

Mahan tore into Louisville. His example set his team-mates afire. They tore into Louisville. And Louisville, the mighty Louisville, acknowledged as the best S. I. A. A. team in Kentucky, lost by one point. The game went into two extra periods. Transy won, 37 to 36.

And Mahan, numerically just one fifth of Transylvania's team, made 27 of Transylvania's 37 points! That is being a champion and that is what a champion does when the going is tough and the cards are stacked against him.

IN MEMORY

Of our dear mother, Mrs. Kate Dolwick.

I cannot say and I will not say that she is dead, she is just away; With a cherry smile and a wave of the hand,

She has wandered into an unknown land.

And left us dreaming how very fair III needs must be since she lingers there;

And you—oh you, who the wildest yearn,

For the told time step and the glad return.

Think of her faring on, as dear In the love of there, as the love of here;

I think of her still as the same I say, She is not dead, she is just away.

—The Family.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

Our debating teams participated in two debates of interest during the past week. On Wednesday the team composed of Elmore Ryle, William Cook and Betty McCullen journeyed to the Hebron school and on Thursday we were pleased to welcome members of the New Haven team here for another debate. Harry Cook, Joseph Rouse and Ivan Norris represented our school in this debate. It is indeed gratifying to note the intense interest shown all over the entire county in regard to this particular school activity.

The American History class was rendered a very interesting and instructive talk on the subject of Problems of Finance of the President by Elmore Ryle on Monday of this week.

We are pleased to have Harry Blackburn as a new member of the Junior class.

The fifth grade has quite a number of new students. They are Leon Day from the Petersburg school, Joseph Tanner from the Florence school and Jimmie Edwards from the Hamilton school. Members of the class are very happy to welcome these students.

Nothing in Head Size as Gauge to Mentality

The Australian aborigines, generally considered the least intelligent of living races, have very small skulls, but their next of kin in mental mediocrity, the Eskimos, have heads the same size as our own.

The average size of an English head, as measured for hats, runs from 7 to 7 1/4. But can it be maintained that everyone whose hat brings him within this range has an ordinary mind? Then both Mr. Winston Churchill, whose size in hats is 7 1/4, and Mr. Lloyd George, who takes a 7 1/2, are men of average intelligence. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald just escapes the rut with a 7 1/4 hat.

The largest cranium of which a well-known firm of London batters has record belonged to the late Prince Lichnowsky, German ambassador in London before the war. With a size in hats of 8 1/4 he should have been a superman! The difference between big heads and little heads is a physiological one. A big head is known to contain a wider expanse of brain than a small one. But a big brain bears no relationship to a big mind. Otherwise some of the higher animals with a brain larger than man's would be masters of the earth.—London Tit-Bits.

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be thus regulated to suit individual need.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. R. A.

Bloody Riots in Paris Drive Out Daladier, and Doumergue Becomes Premier—Devaluation of Dollar Brings Flood of Gold.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Gaston Doumergue

FRANCE seemingly narrowly escaped a civil war. Following two days of bloody rioting in Paris and other cities, Premier Daladier and his cabinet capitulated and the reins of government were put in the hands of Gaston Doumergue, the seventy-one-year-old former President who was in retirement on his country estate. His reappearance on the political stage was in response to the pleadings of President Lebrun and many other patriots who were convinced that he alone could restore the country to quiet. It was conditioned on pledges that both chambers of parliament would support him unreservedly and that the president would give him an executive order dissolving the parliament and calling new elections, to be used if he considered it necessary. So the "iron man" of France, as he has been dubbed, returned to Paris with plans for a small cabinet made up of former premiers and party leaders and with power to make himself the virtual dictator of the country.

War veterans, Monarchists, Communists and other elements joined in the violent demonstrations that forced out the Daladier regime. All joined in opposition to the government, though none of the groups was in accord with any others in other respects. The mobs were furious and fought desperately with the police and the troops that Daladier had brought into the capital. The rioters, operating mainly in the Place de la Concorde and the region about the Palais Bourbon where the chamber of deputies sits, were raked by machine gun fire, sabered by mounted troops and clubbed and shot by the infantry and police. But they returned to the fray time after time and would not cease the struggle until Daladier resigned. The number of dead was estimated at fifty, and more than a thousand persons were wounded. After the battles were over the boulevards in the center of Paris presented a scene of desolation and destruction unequalled there since days of the commune in 1871.

Nationalist elements resented especially the removal by Daladier of Jean Chippie as prefect of police, feeling that he was being made a scapegoat in the Bayonne bond scandal. The Communists and Socialists accused Chippie of fomenting the rioting, but the "right" elements said the "leftists" were determined to get the Corsican out of the way because they knew he would block the proletarian coup d'etat they were planning. The Royalists were in the mix-up hopeful, as always, that they might be able to restore the monarchy and put on the throne the duc de Guise, head of the Bourbon house of Orleans, who lives in exile in Brussels. Naturally the pretender shares in that hope, but he was quoted as deploring the bloodshed.

DEVALUATION of the dollar, and the purchase of gold at $35 a fine ounce caused a turmoil in the world's money markets and an immediate result was a great flow of gold from Europe to the United States.

Prof. Warren

The pound sterling and the franc made gains, but not enough to suit President Roosevelt and his monetary advisers. Later both the pound and franc declined again, and the confusion was made greater. The French were alarmed by the drain on their gold and expressed intense resentment against the American policy, charging that the administration was making deliberate efforts to embarrass France.

For the time being the administration was prevented from driving the dollar down to its projected parity points in foreign exchanges by the rising tide of American dollars flowing back to this country. But most of its financial experts were confident that the 50.00 cents value would be made to prevail after a reasonable time to allow for the shakedown. As for the $35 an ounce for gold, it is the opinion of Prof. George F. Warren, chief deviser of the experiment that is under way, that the figure must be raised if prices of commodities are to be put up materially. Frank E. Gannett, the Rochester newspaper publisher, after a visit to the White House and talking with both the President and Professor Warren, said in his Rochester Times-Union that he had been convinced by those conversations "that we shall continue to raise the price of gold" and that the $35 figure probably would succeed only in preventing prices from slipping.

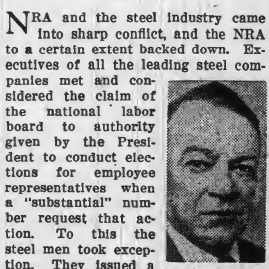

By the President's devaluation stroke a treasury deficit of $1,900,000,000 was transformed overnight into a surplus of $973,716,937.

IT WAS authoritatively stated in Washington that the President believes that excessive interest rates on all classes of debts should be reduced as an important step toward reduction of the debt structure. His viewpoint applies to foreign debts owed to United States citizens, to private debts and to those of industry. He was said to be of the opinion that reduction of interest would make payment more probable, and that fixed charges also could be cut down.

Bills before the senate, which have house approval already, would enable corporations and municipalities or other political subdivisions of states to scale down the principal and interest of their debts through an agreement with the majority of their creditors.

Legislation is already in effect which enables the individual to rearrange his debt and interest rates through a pact with the majority of those he owes and to give similar help to railroads. There have been complaints that these laws have not been particularly effective and that they need strengthening. The President, in letting it be known that he thought the debtor was paying too much on obligations contracted in better times, did not say what he believed was a fair rate nor did he specify particular charges that he regarded as too high.

Ger. Johnson

NRA and the steel industry came into sharp conflict, and the NRA to a certain extent backed down. Executives of all the leading steel companies met and considered the claim of the national labor board to authority given by the President to conduct elections for employees representatives when a "substantial" number request that action. To this the steel men took exception. They issued a statement saying the industry intends "to resist a attacks" upon company unions and that it holds that the present plan of employee representation complies with the NRA. The statement, however, declared the steel industry "is co-operating wholeheartedly with the President in his efforts for national recovery and subscribes fully to the principle of collective bargaining as provided in section 7 (a) of the national recovery act."

The NRA had given out a press statement implying that all company unions are dominated by employers. This drew sharp criticism, and the statement was retracted. Administrator Johnson and NRA Counsel Donald Richberg upheld the right of the labor board as stated above. They asserted, however, that the executive order which said that representatives elected by a majority of workers "have been thereby designated to represent all the employees," does not abridge the rights of labor minorities to conduct negotiations with employers.

SAMUEL INSULL, who was due to be ousted from Greece, on February 1, was permitted to remain for a time because of ill health, but the government at Athens then informed him unofficially that he must leave before February 13, two physicians having reported he was able to travel without danger to his life. The fugitive immediately began packing up but at this writing it was not known where he would go in his effort to avoid extradition.

TWENTY-TWO days after he was kidnapped, Edward G. Bremer, banker of St. Paul, Minn., was set free in Rochester, Minn., and made his way home, nervous and with wounds on his head inflicted when he was "snatched," but otherwise unharmed. His father, Adolf Bremer, wealthy brewer, had paid the $200,000 demanded by the kidnappers, in $10 and $5 bills, through an intermediary. During his captivity Bremer was kept in a dark room and under constant guard.

E. G. Bremer

State and federal law enforcement agencies were conducting an intensive hunt for the abductors of Bremer, who probably numbered ten or more. It was believed the victim was held in either Sioux City or Kansas City.

Vernie Sankey, notorious kidnaper who was captured recently at Chicago and taken to Sioux Falls, S. D., for safe keeping until his trial in a federal court, committed suicide in his cell by hanging, using a loop made of necktie. He had admitted the abduction of Charles Boettcher of Denver and Haskell Bohn of St. Paul.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT called congressional leaders into conference and with them formulated bills designed to bring the stock markets of the country under federal control. The measures were then introduced in both house and senate. They deal with short selling, margins trading, specialists, pool operations and manipulation.

BACKED by the President, a federal grand jury investigation was going on in Washington that promised to uncover a $10,000,000 scandal in the War department. Two lawyers prominently connected in the past with the American Legion were said to be involved. It was asserted that automobile manufacturers had been asked for a fee of $50,000 in return for War department contracts for trucks running into millions.

The house naval committee made an inquiry into airplane and engine contracts that, it was predicted, would lead to changes in the Navy department's system of audits.

WILLIAM P. McCracken, who was assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics in the Hoover administration, and three air line officials got into a jam with the senate committee that is investigating air mail contracts. All four of them were cited to appear before the senate to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt. McCracken practices law in Washington. The others are L. H. Brittin, vice president of Northwest Airways; Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, and Gilbert Glavin, Hanshue's secretary. McCracken has been under technical arrest but this was vacated.

Chairman Black's report to the senate showed that Brittin admitted that he had removed from McCracken's office and destroyed subpoenaed correspondence; and also that Glavin, on order from Hanshue, had removed confidential papers since recovered by the committee.

Senator Black also told the senate that testimony before the committee showed post office contracts had been awarded "collusively and fraudulently" and that former Postmaster General Brown and McCracken participated in a "secret meeting" held in a room adjacent to Brown's Post Office department office at which the country was divided into certain mail routes and contracts were distributed among "particular" operating companies.

IN A unanimous opinion the Supreme Court of the United States held that all persons accused of violating the late national prohibition laws and whose cases had not been finally adjudicated by December 5 last, when the Eighteenth amendment was repealed should be set free. The opinion held that repeal canceled the power of prosecution.

According to the Department of Justice, there were 8,578 prohibition cases, with about 13,000 defendants, pending in federal courts.

WITH little debate the senate passed the bill introduced by Senator Hiram Johnson of California which is designed to prevent the fronting of America of private loans to countries now defaulting on past debts. Before passing it, the senators amended the measure so that it would not hamper the President's new scheme to grant to foreign nations loans with which to buy American goods.

Sen. Hiram Johnson

A proviso was written in declaring that loans to foreign defaulters could still be made by government owned corporations.

As it now stands, however, the bill puts in the hands of the administration its most powerful weapon for forcing payment of defaulted war debts. No defaulting nation may float any private loan in this country, and any American aiding in the illegal flotation of a private loan to a defaulter would be liable to five years in jail and $10,000 in fines.

According to Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC, the President's plan calls for the creation of a trading bank which will partially underwrite extension of credits to foreign purchasers of American goods. The bank would be entirely owned by the government, so the arrangement would actually be a partial government guarantee of payment to the American producer. The bank would be a division of the RFC.

ONLY one representative voted "no" when the house of representatives passed on the bill to appropriate $950,000,000 for continuation of CWA and direct relief activities. The lone opponent was Representative George B. Terrill of Texas, Democrat. The money is to be used by the federal emergency relief administration for keeping up the federal dole to the idle for another year and for continuing the Civil Works administration until the early part of May. About 500 millions is to be used for the former purpose, it was said, and about 450 for the CWA.

OSDEN L. MILLS, who, whether or not you like him, is one of the most forceful leaders of the Republican party, has often been spoken of as a possible or even probable candidate for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination in 1936. But the New Yorker has now removed himself from that category. While in California to see Herbert Hoover and others, Mr. Mills told the press "I most certainly have no intention of becoming a candidate. Nor will I mix in local or factional politics."

Howe About:

War and Debt Temperance Plea Farming Situation

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

THE people never had any sense; I haven't much hope for the future, either as to myself or others. Once they kept a war going on thirty years.

You may say we have more sense than that now, I am not so sure of it. Our last war was conducted on so magnificent a scale that the world became bankrupt in four years, and we had to quit; whereas it is related Frederick the Great paid for his wars as he went along. When he quit, he didn't owe a penny, and had no pensioners to move on his capital, and threaten to take it. Boys coming on soon supplied Frederick with more farmers; food was produced again in a year. . . . But a war debt constantly increasing and drawing interest, will ruin anybody.

I have noted that many people who annoy me, occasionally turn out to have a good deal of sense. One man sent me pamphlets daily for weeks, but finally the pamphlets were made into a book called "Toward Liquor Control." I have read the book. It was written by a number of rather notable men employed by the Rockefeller foundation to look thoroughly into the problem of liquor control, and make a report about it.

The book is one of the best written, most sensible, and important I have ever read. It includes a review of our general American shiftlessness in public affairs, and which has finally bankrupted us morally as well as financially. I recommend the book to everyone who believes a little in common sense and decency, and in preserving the little civilization we have managed to achieve.

The book is a plea for temperance not only as to intoxicating liquors, but in everything else. We are very intemperate in our eating, in sex matters; in all phases of public affairs. In education, religion we must become ashamed of our intemperance, or we shall be humiliated before the world more than we have been lately.

Not less than 88 per cent of our industrial workers are hampered by improper diet; of all money spent by their families on food, 78 per cent is misapplied, either on improper or too costly or otherwise uneconomical dietaries. This disgraceful percentage holds in everything else we do.

Americans became so rich we reached the Coal Oil Johnny stage in extravagance and shiftlessness, and we must do better, as Coal Oil Johnny did in the poor house.

Although he said a poor-house diet would kill him, after living so long on terrapin and turkey, it actually resulted in better health; actually assisted in restoring him to sanity and industry.

When I was a boy, and my father farmed and preached the old gospel, we occasionally had a horror. Once a farmer drove into Pole creek after a rain, and was drowned. His horses drowned with him.

It was terrible, but we didn't have excitement often. Once a man had nose-bleed for days, and constantly grew weaker, as nothing could be done to stop it. We all went over to look at him; everyone was excited. Once a man was bitten on the thumb by a rattlesnake. He had cut down a hickory tree, to get the nuts, and the accident happened while he was picking them up. The man put his thumb in his mouth, and sucked the poison out! We talked about that for days. Another time a farmer came home from town drunk, and everybody ran over to his house to suggest a remedy. One woman suggested that he drink a pan of milk. She had lived in a town in Indiana, where we all came from, and knew about such things; and the man got well.

The Civil war was going on then, and an occasional soldier came home on furlough with tall tales to tell, but we had no such terrors as I hear of every morning and evening now, when I get the papers. Somewhere the other day the members of a family were eating supper, when an airplane fell on their house. The house and seven persons were burned up, with the neighbors looking on; all they could do was to save the house next door.

In my day, farmers were at least steady men; now they are rioting, a thing I never heard of even town men doing until I was a man grown. We were poor people, but always had plenty. Now farmers say they are starving. Millions of them actually have starved in Russia, because town men take what the farmers raise. In my boyhood we hardly ever saw a town man; specially they didn't come out carrying guns, and tell us what part of our corn we could keep, and what part they wanted to support the government's N. A. B. D., which means a new and better deal.

Viking Game Board Found

Harvard archeologists found an ancient Viking game in Ireland. It was found in a Tenth century lake dwelling. The game consists of a board about nine inches square, perforated with 49 round holes. The center hole is surrounded by a double ring, cut in the wood. This board is set inside an ornately carved frame with two wood handles. Each handle is rounded like a doorknob, one almost twice the size of the other. Christian crosses, of a type found on the Isle of Man are also on the game board.

MARVELOUS SURGERY

An artificial heart has been developed by Moscow surgeons, which, when perfected, is expected to revolutionize methods of operating on the heart. It is a device for pumping the blood through the arteries like a real heart. The heart of a living dog was taken right out of its body and operated on while the "artificial heart" kept the body alive. Sixteen stitches were taken in the heart and then it was put back into the body. The dog has survived.

BEAUTY TALKS

By

MARJORIE DUNCAN

CARE OF HANDS AND ARMS

IT WOULD be a very simple matter for every woman who uses a good skin food on face and neck (and every woman should, you know) to massage hands and arms too with a little of the cream. Notice the hands and arms of operators in beauty salons who give facial treatments—soft and smooth, aren't they? It is the constant contact with cream that does it.

Try this treatment. At night before retiring, wash hands and arms thoroughly with a good nail brush, bland soap and warm water. Rinse very thoroughly in warm and then in cold water. Dry with a soft towel. Next massage with a good-skin food or warm olive oil. Or you can make a cream at home, using equal parts of olive oil, cocoa butter and lanolin. Melt the cocoa butter and lanolin in order to measure. Then pour the three ingredients into a clean container and stir to a creamy consistency.

When massaging the arms use a firm, rotary motion. Pay special attention to the elbows, massaging the left elbow with thumb and third finger of right hand and vice versa.

Leave a little of the cream on overnight to further soften the skin. Wear long cotton gloves, or cut the sleeves out of an old flannel nightgown, or use a clean, old pair of white stockings. This will avoid soiling bedclothes and at the same time give you full benefit of the creaming.

In the morning, pat quite briskly with a pad of cotton moistened with ice skin tonic, or use a little witch hazel for the purpose.

Massage the hands with the cream too, working round and round and then firmly downward as though putting on a new pair of gloves.

For bleaching the hands, dimming tan or freckles or removing fruit juice stains, keep a half lemon handy. This is excellent for discolored elbows too. Rub the lemon over entire hand and arm, or dig nails into it. Do this before massaging with cream and immediately after follow with the massage to counteract any drying effect of the lemon juice. Remember to wear gloves for household tasks as well as outdoors and to avoid harsh soaps and powders for washing dishes, scrubbing, etc.

For very quick action, if hands have been neglected and you wish them to look lovely at short notice, many readers have reported excellent results from the use of a ready-prepared hand jelly and whitener combination.

HOME MANICURE

PALE hands, pink-tipped, nails diligently cared for, add immeasurably to feminine charm, grace and good grooming.

Of course, it is best to have a weekly, or twice monthly, manicure by a professional. But if it is a very simple matter to keep the nails in perfect condition. Only a minute a day will be necessary to run an emery board over the outer edge, to push back the cuticle with a soft towel after washing the hands (this should be a habit) and to apply a bit of cuticle oil or nourishing cream along the nail bed. This decreases any danger of hangnails and makes it unnecessary to have the cuticle cut frequently. After massaging with the softening cream or oil, an orange wood stick should be used around the base of the nail to keep the cuticle shapely and free.

If you find it necessary to give yourself a complete manicure at home you will need: a file, emery board, orange wood stick, cotton, cuticle remover, polish, nail white if you wish, cuticle scissors and buffer. First, remove any remaining polish with a small piece of cotton moistened in the remover. Then file and shape the nails. Remember that the shape of the nails should conform with the shape of the fingers, slightly pointed for tapering fingers; rounded for the stubby fingertip; oval for the average. File from the sides to the center of the nail. Now use the emery board, rough side first and finish with fine side to insure a perfect finish.

Many of the finer beauty parlors then buff the nails with dry polish. This step may be included if you wish. The next step is soaking fingertips in hot, soapy water and softening the cuticle. Dry fingers thoroughly, each fingertip separately and gently push back the cuticle. If flesh under nail tip is badly discolored use a bleach. Equal parts of hydrogen peroxide, lemon juice and ammonia. Or powdered pumice and peroxide to make a paste for very stubborn discolorations. Work this back and forth with pointed edge of orange wood stick, wrapped in cotton.

One reason why hangnails form so soon after a manicure is the fact that very often the cuticle removers used are quite drying. The soap and water soaking also swells the cuticle. Faulty manicuring may be the cause of the hangnails. Make it a point to massage a little olive oil or cream into the cuticle and nail base every night for a few minutes and you are sure you will not be troubled by the hangnails.

Harrison Fisher First in Portraying Beauty

The artistry of a French peasant maid who concealed her scantiness of hair with some ribbon was the odd inspiration that caused Harrison Fisher to draw the first of his long series of magazine covers, idealizing the beauty of young feminine America. He was known as the "father of a thousand pretty girls," but he never married.

Reared in Brooklyn, schooled at the Mark Hopkins institute in San Francisco, widely traveled in England and on the continent, Fisher knew the girl of the New York drawing room and of the western plains. He was born during the Garfield-Arthur period; he saw the fashionable world in coaches behind teams and in the side saddle; on bicycles and in linen dusters, goggles and flowing motor veils and then in limousines. He felt the wild pulsation of the Spanish war, and live through the World War well into an exciting period of readjustment. He knew Victorian England, and the England of Edward and George.

Fisher portrayed rather than interpreted. Thousands of drawings and illustrations that flowed on the point of his pen have been for an interesting generation, far closer to the American home than the famed treasures hanging in museums abroad.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Loss of Jobs to Tobacco Workers and Markets To the Farmers Threatened Unless Tax On Cigarettes Is Changed

By E. LEWIS EVANS
President, Tobacco Workers International Union

I appeal to all the people of the twelve southeastern states producing cigarette tobacco to join the tobacco farmers and the tobacco factory workers in urging Congress to put a graduated tax on cigarettes in place of the present flat-rate tax.

What will happen unless Congress does take such action?

Several hundred thousand farmers will lose the market for a large proportion of their tobacco crop.

Scores of thousands of tobacco factory workers will lose their jobs.

Trade with these farmers and workers will be cut to the starvation point.

The government will lose a good many millions of dollars in taxes.

What is this all about? Let me explain.

War-time Measure

The present cigarette tax of 6 cents a package was fixed as a war-time measure in 1917, when 15 cents a package was the bottom retail price for cigarettes.

After the war nobody kicked about this tax so it was never altered.

During the boom years and up until 1931 the manufacture and sale of cigarettes steadily increased. But the depression hit the industry at that time and it sank fast. Everybody concerned with the business, directly or indirectly, was hurt.

To try to offset this slump certain manufacturers, notably Axton-Fisher Tobacco Company and the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, began to make cigarettes—a good smoke that was cheap—to retail at 10 cents for a package of twenty.

Popular "Smokes"

These 10-cent smokes immediately became popular. The sale of them went up fast all over the country, showing that millions of smokers wanted to use "roll-your-own" cigarettes, instead of rolling their own, if the price was low enough.

Such a tax is not quite fair. It should be in proportion to the retail price of the cigarette, with the higher-priced smoke paying a higher tax. There is now such a graduated tax on cigars—the 5-center paying a lower tax than the 10-center, and the 10-center paying a lower tax than the 15-center, or the quarter cigar.

Since there is a graduated tax on cigars, we feel to see why

These new lower-priced smokes were a blessing to the farmer, giving him a tobacco market at better prices, and a blessing to the tobacco factory worker, giving him a steady job and support for his family. Business improved in the cigarette tobacco states and government revenue from the cigarette tax went steadily upward.

By cutting out fancy packages and certain costly selling expenses, the manufacturers were able to give smokers a quality product and to make a modest profit on their business.

Conditions Changed

That was the situation several months ago. But now conditions have greatly changed, and unless a remedy is provided the results will be serious for everybody.

The manufacturers have increased wages of workers to comply with the NRA code. They now have a processing tax to pay along with other increased production costs. They cannot further lower manufacturing or selling expenses.

Today they have no profit whatever in 10-cent cigarettes. Without profit there is no inducement to continue manufacturing. If they quit making them, tobacco farmers and we tobacco workers, and the people we buy necessities from, will be out of luck.

This brings us back to the graduated tax on cigarettes. As I have said, all cigarettes pay a government tax of 6 cents a package, whether the package sells for a dime, or 15 cents, or a quarter, or 50 cents.

Tax Not Quite Fair

Such a tax is not quite fair. It should be in proportion to the retail price of the cigarette, with the higher-priced smoke paying a higher tax. There is now such a graduated tax on cigars—the 5-center paying a lower tax than the 10-center, and the 10-center paying a lower tax than the 15-center, or the quarter cigar.

Since there is a graduated tax on cigars, we feel to see why a similar classification may not be applied to cigarettes.

The makers of the 10-cent cigarette say that if Congress will put into effect the graduated tax on cigarettes, allowing a very small cut in the tax on 10-cent cigarettes, they can go on making this product.

Very Little Cut

They ask for a reduction of only two-fifths of one cent per package on the 10-centers; the present rate of 6 cents per package on 15-centers; and an increase of three-fifths of one cent above the present tax on smokes selling for more than 15 cents per package.

It seems to me and to the thousands of workers I speak for, that this proposal of the manufacturers is just and fair to all. To their plea for a graduated tax I add that of the Tobacco Workers' International Union. I urge the tobacco farmers, business men and bankers to join us in this appeal to Congress, because all will benefit.

Congress wants to do the right thing by the people. A special subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee is studying the graduated tax on cigarettes.

Raise More Money

Perhaps a more cogent reason for the Committee to give the subject special research is that the higher the retail price of the "roll-your-own" cigarettes the greater the drift toward the "roll your own" smoke.

The consumer is doing this not because he prefers to; it, but because he is hard-up. He gives little or no thought to the very important revenue fact that the "roll your own" makes return to the Government a revenue of only 18 cents a pound of tobacco, whereas the "roll-your-own" cigarette gives a return of $1 a pound of tobacco.

It would seem therefore to be good financial policy by the Committee to make the very slight concession asked.

This is a large number and as each is a separate problem, it takes concentrated thinking on the facts each presents in order to give constructive advice, which I always hope such talks avail.

Much time was spent on my part in giving publicity to the Dental Clinic which was held at the Court House the last week of the month and in making the arrangements necessary. I do hope that it was fruitful and of benefit to the children who received dental care and also to the publicity it brought may prove a stimulus to other parents to begin early to have their children's teeth regularly cared for by a dentist.

At the request of the State Board of Health I assisted Dr. S. B. Nunneley in a class which he taught to the foreman of the C. W. A. road projects. By this instruction it is hoped that first aid may be intelligently given should accidents occur, and prevent as far as possible any serious conditions developing.

RED CROSS REPORT

OF NURSING SERVICE FOR JANUARY 1934

January brought to the Red Cross Nursing Service many duties, for one thing I found myself very thankful, namely that the month gave me thirty-one days which contained even so, all too few hours for the many tasks given one person to do.

Four children were taken to the Children's hospital for the removal of tonsils. Arrangements were made for a four-day-old baby to be taken to the same hospital. This baby's life was in jeopardy unless the attending physician unless this could be arranged for. I may say he is coming along very nicely now, having been there two weeks. Plans were made for another child to go each week to this same hospital for blood transfusions.

Twenty-one persons came to me to hold conference in behalf of the health of their child, or children,

SIGN-UP CLOSES

WITH 97 PERCENT OF TOBACCO ACREAGE UNDER CONTRACT—COMMUNITY CONTROL BOARD ELECTIONS HELD THIS WEEK.

The Boone county AAA Tobacco Sign-Up closed in Boone county on last Saturday with 680 producers signing, or 97 percent of the total tobacco acreage of the county. Splendid support was rendered by the growers to the very close of the campaign.

The Community Control Board, beginning on last Thursday, are being set up as rapidly as possible in order that there will be least delay in preparation of the contracts for their presentation to the Secretary of Agriculture.

The first Community Control Board election was held at Verona on last Thursday and the last one will be held at Beaver on this coming Saturday. Each community will elect a community committee of three members, the chairman of which is the director to the County Control Board.

The following Community Control Board elections have been held and the following officers elected: Verona—G. C. Ransom, chairman; O. K. Powers, vice-chairman; H. R. Fisher, committeeman.

Union—Ezra Blankenbaker, chairman; Jos. A. Huey, vice-chairman; H. L. Coppage, committeeman.

Walton—J. C. Bedinger, chairman; B. W. Franks, vice-chairman; T. F. Helle, committeeman.

Grant—A. S. Burcham, chairman; Louvet Rogers, vice-chairman; W. H. Presser, committeeman.

Petersburg—John Kloop, chairman; Howard Huey, vice-chairman; L. S. Snyder, committeeman.

Hebron—Mark Halladay, chairman; Eli Williams, vice-chairman; William Hill, committeeman.

Hamilton—August Trapp, chairman; Melvin Moore, vice-chairman; F. H. Sebre, committeeman.

Burlington election is scheduled for Wednesday and Beaver for Saturday of this week.

RED LETTER DAY

IN NEW HAVEN BASKET BALL, WHEN FLORENCE KNIGHTS AND KNIGHTENGALS VISIT NEW HAVEN—CLOSE GAMES EXPECTED.

A red letter day in New Haven basket ball for the year is on the calendar for Friday night of this week when the Florence Knights and Knightengals visit there.

During the early part of the season the New Haven boys took the Knights into camp rather easily, but since that time the Knights have improved to a great extent and Coach Alphin promises that New Haven won't be a "haven of rest" for the Tigers Friday night.

As a contrast, and to make the program more interesting, the New Haven girls lost to Florence when they last met, but the proteges of Coach Jimmy Vest also have showed more promise of late and this game may reverse the former result.

BURTON-ALGE

The many friends of Miss Hazel Burton and Mr. Willard Alge are congratulating them since their marriage last Saturday evening. The young people were united by the Rev. G. E. Graden, pastor of the local M. E. church, at his home in Alexandria.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Burton, of the Hebron community, the groom being the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Alge, of the Woolper neighborhood near Burlington.

The wedding couple were accompanied to the altar by Miss Anna Lee Burton, sister of the bride, and Albert Sebre, a neighbor of the groom.

SEWING CLUB MEET

The 4-L-L-Als, 4-H Sewing Club girls of Florence met at the home of one of the leaders, Lucille Taylor Saturday afternoon, Feb. 10, to organize a club. There were six members present and we also had Mrs. Rayschulte with us, who is to be our first and second year teacher. We elected the following officers:

For first and second year sewing, President, Bonita Russell; Vice-President, Betty Jean Carpenter; Secretary, Madeline Holden; Treasurer, May Campbell; Publicity Superintendent, Florella Tanner.

Third and fourth year, President, June Belle Rayschulte; Vice-President, Evelyn Highhouse; Secretary, Mary E. Tupman; Treasurer, Elemina Hastings; Publicity Superintendent, Nina Darby.

We also looked over our play which we are planning to stage, "The Deestrick Skule of Fifty Years Ago."

COUNTY CAMPAIGN

OF CORN-HOG PRODUCTION WILL OFFICIALLY START NEXT THURSDAY, MARCH 1—PROMISES TO BE PROFITABLE PROPOSITION.

The Boone county AAA Corn-Hog Sign-Up campaign will officially start on next Thursday, March 1st following a meeting of the county campaign committee at Burlington.

The AAA corn-hog reduction program promises to be a profitable proposition to a large number of Boone county farmers. It will pay them $5.00 per head on their base allotment and 30 cents per bushel on their corn land taken out of production. The program will be pushed to a rapid completion of the sign-up according to county agent H. R. Forkner.

The county campaign committee members appointed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration to assist in the sign-up are: S. B. Slett, Chester L. Tanner, Howard Huey, Karl Rouse, Edward Rogers, August Trapp, E. J. Aylor, J. A. Harris, Charlie Hemfling, L. L. Weaver, and A. C. Johnson. They will be assisted by two community committee members appointed from each community.

LEADERS CONFERENCE

TO BE HELD AT FLORENCE
The 4-H Leaders Conference will be at the home of one of the Florence leaders, Miss Taylor of the Dixie Highway, Friday, Feb. 23 for an all-day meeting. We would like every leader to be present, for Miss Lassie is to be present with some interesting news. The meeting will start around 10 o'clock slow time.

HOPEFUL LUTHERAN CHURCH

DOGS RAID SHEEP

Dogs raided the flock of sheep of Dr. M. A. Yelton Monday of this week and injured a number of his nice ewes.

County Road Observer, A. O. Rouse sold the past week a pair of fine black work horses to Howard Cleek, of near Union. Mr. Rouse stated without hesitation that this was the finest team he ever had owned and he recommended them as such to Mr. Cleek. The price was not disclosed.

BOY INJURED

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON WHEN GUN IS ACCIDENTALLY DISCHARGED—REMOVED TO ST. ELIZABETH HOSPITAL FOR X-RAY EXAMINATION.

John Lewis Coyle, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Coyle, of the Verona neighborhood, accidentally shot himself in the left leg last Wednesday afternoon with a 22 calibre rifle.

The lad was brought to the office of Dr. E. J. Love, who cares for relief patients in the county, and who made an attempt to locate the bullet. After a time he decided that it had lodged beneath the knee cap, although he was unable with his facilities to find it.

The boy was removed to St. Elizabeth hospital, Covington, for an X-ray examination. Reports from there indicate that the young man is doing nicely.

Young Coyle explained that he was trying to saw off the barrel of the gun and did not know that it was loaded. During the process the gun was accidentally discharged.

Read the public sale ad. of J. F. Baxter, of Florence, in this issue of the Recorder on Saturday, March 3rd. Sale will start at 12 o'clock (fast time).

Jacob Cook, of the Bellevue neighborhood, was mingling with friends in Burlington, Tuesday.

Pat Code and daughter Miss Agnes, of Walton, were business visitors to Burlington Tuesday afternoon.

Rev. H. M. Hauter, Pastor of Hopeful and Hebron Lutheran churches, was a caller at this office Tuesday afternoon and had his name put on the Recorder's list.

Charles Snelling, of Woolper Creek, was a business caller at this office Monday morning, and while here advertised a sale of personal property to be sold of his father, the late W. F. Snelling. Charles is administrator of the estate. Read the ad. in other columns of this issue.

G. A. Porter and wife were shopping in the city Monday.

William Green has been quite ill for several days at his home near town.

Ted Cress spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Akin at their home on the Petersburg pike.

Ross Russ, manager of the Reemployment Bureau, spent Tuesday in Lexington, on business, in regard to that work.

W. A. Pettit, who has been ill for several weeks, is improving, his many friends will be glad to learn. Mr. Pettit has been suffering with rheumatism.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

BIG YEAR AHEAD OF 4-H CLUBS

Boone county 4-H Clubs are looking forward to a big year ahead according to county agent H. R. Forkner. Already approximately 250 members have enrolled in ten community 4-H Clubs of the county and are making plans for the starting of their project work.

Work will not be the only reward for 4-H members during 1934. A good balanced program has been planned including Junior Week, Spring rallies, 4-H club camp, fairs, judging teams, shows, sales, achievement days and other events of interest are in store for members who satisfactorily carry on their project work.

E. E. Fish, field agent in club work from the University of Kentucky will meet with members during the next two weeks to advise and assist members and leaders in getting their project work started.

4-H TOBACCO SEED

The County Agent has received 100 packages of tobacco seed for 4-H tobacco project members. The seed has been donated by Mr. J. V.

TWO MEN

REPORTED TO BE FEEBLE MIND-ED AND ESCAPED FROM AN OHIO INSTITUTION WERE RETURNED BY W. B. COTTON AND DEPUTY SUNDAY.

Upon receiving a call from Joe Peeno, at Constance, last Sunday morning, Sheriff W. B. Cotton and Deputy Frank M. Walton went to Mr. Peeno's residence, where they found two men at the road side, each of whom were acting suspiciously.

Mr. Peeno had informed the officers over the phone of their queer actions and they immediately questioned them and learned that they had escaped from a feeble minded institute near Cincinnati. They said they had walked as far as Constance.

They were taken by the officers to Station X in Cincinnati and turned over to authorities who placed them in the custody of the institute from which they escaped.

The Valentine party given by the local chapter of the Eastern Star was a pronounced success. Approximately fifty people patronized the tables and all enjoyed a most pleasant evening.

A. B. Renaker, secretary of the Boone County National Farm Loan Association, was in Louisville on business Wednesday of this week.

Mrs. Gaines Stott, of Petersburg spent last Wednesday and Thursday with her mother, Mrs. B. E. Aylor, of near Burlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Maners, of Wilamstown, and Miss Mary Helen Loderick, of Erlanger, were calling on friends here, Saturday.

Mrs. Lavina Kirkpatrick and family entertained relatives from Cincinnati Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shearer, of Newport, were Sunday afternoon guests of Mrs. Louisa B. White and Miss Ruth Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burton entertained the following guests at their home near Hebron in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Alge last Sunday: Miss Marjorie Hensley and Messrs. Stanley Ryle, Albert Sebre, Otis Hendrix and Harold Arnold.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Kelly and son of near Florence, were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kelly.

Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Aylor, of near Burlington, entertained last Saturday. Mrs. Henry Siekman and daughter and Mrs. John Methven and daughter, of Middletown, Ohio.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Alge, of the Woolper community, last Sunday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Willard Alge, Misses Elizabeth and Anna Lee Burton and Messrs. Harold Arnold and Albert Sebre.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEET

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Florence M. E. church met at the home of Mrs. John Fogle, Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 7, 1934. The meeting was for all parents with children. The topic was about children. Mrs. Alta Miller and Mrs. Edna Foster sang a duet. Mrs. Moss sang a solo and Mrs. Albee gave a talk on the missionary work of our little children.

This meeting was very interesting and worthwhile for any one present. Those not present please come out to the next meeting, which is to be at Mrs. John Fogle's March 7. This meeting will be an all-day session. Ladies Aid in the morning and Woman's Missionary Society in the afternoon. Lucille Taylor, Pub. Chmn.

AGED WOMAN

PASSES TO HER FINAL RESTING PLACE FRIDAY EVENING AFTER AN EXTENDED ILLNESS—FUNERAL HELD LAST SUNDAY.

Mrs. Sarah Carpenter passed away Friday evening at 6 p. m. following an illness from Coronary Emboli in her 89th year. She leaves one granddaughter, Bessie Maxwell three great grandchildren, one nephew, N. W. Carpenter, two brothers, one sister to mourn her going.

Funeral services were held Sunday at 2 p. m. from the home by her pastor, Rev. Don. . . pastor of the Petersburg Christian church, of which she was a member many years, in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends, after which the remains were laid to rest in the I. O. O. F. cemetery, by the side of her husband, who preceded her some 23 years ago.

Palbearers were Albert Molly, Newton Sullivan, Thos. Hensley, Raymond Goodridge, Wm. Carpenter and W. W. Carpenter.

Chambers & Grubbs were in charge of funeral arrangements.

Miss Marilyn Dickerson, of Union was the week-end guest of her sister, Mrs. William Greenup.

Wild ducks have been seen on the river the past week. A good indication that spring weather is not far off.

Rufus Tanner, of Florence, called on the Recorder last Friday and while in town interviewed quite a few of his old acquaintances on some business matters.

Mrs. Lamar Congleton, of the Petersburg pike, has been quite ill for several days with tonsillitis.

Paul Hafer, of Hebron, was a business caller at this office Tuesday morning. Mr. Hafer is administrator of the estate of his father, the late O. C. Hafer, a notice of which will be seen in another column of this issue.

Martin Williamson, of near Waterloo, spent the week-end with Manley Ryle and family in Burlington.

W. W. Woodward, of Devon, was a business visitor in Burlington Tuesday afternoon.

The Ohio River at some points was frozen over Tuesday morning—river men claiming the ice not over one inch thick.

Mrs. Adam Bell, of Hopeful is spending a week with her sister-in-law Mrs. John Bell, of Crescent Springs.

RICHWOOD MAN

DIES SUDDENLY WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON—WAS ONE OF COUNTY'S MOST PROMINENT FARMERS—FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FRIDAY.

Wednesday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock, when Mrs. J. O. Griffith returned home they were horrified to find her husband dead in the driveway. It is not known how long he had been dead. The cause of his death was heart trouble. Mrs. Griffith had been to Covington, Ky. in their automobile and stopped at the New Haven school for her son, J. O. Griffith, Jr.

Mr. Griffith was one of the successful farmers of Boone county. He was a man well liked and was prosperous. He was born in Kenton county but had lived in Boone county the greater part of his life. His age was 80 years, 2 months and 15 days.

He was married to Miss Mattie Miller about fifteen years ago. To this union was born, son, Jerry O. Griffith, Jr. Besides his wife and child he is survived by one brother, Chas. L. Griffith, several nieces and nephews. One sister Mrs. Samantha Jackson, died some months ago and a brother J. ferson Griffith died a number of years ago.

Funeral services were held at his late home Friday on Richwood pike near U. S. Highway 42, at 1 o'clock p. m.

Funeral Directors Chambers & Grubbs had charge of arrangements.

W. M. S.

The Sand Run W. M. S. will meet at the church March 1, 1934 at 10 o'clock for an all-day meeting. The morning will be devoted to our regular monthly program, subject, "Periods of Lost Power." The afternoon will be given to week of prayer for Home Missions. The afternoon subject being "Entrusted With the Gospel." We hope every member will be present and bring some one with them. Visitors always welcomed.

CRESCENT SPRINGS

TO BATTLE WITH TOMCATS AND KITTENS FRIDAY—THIS GAME WILL MARK LAST APPEARANCE OF CAPTAIN ROUSE AND WILLIAM COOK.

The Burlington Tomcats and Kittens are preparing to entertain the two teams from Crescent Springs here Friday evening.

On a former occasion at Crescent Springs the Tomcats and Kittens each won their games, but neither by such a score as to indicate anything approaching a cinch for either team this week.

This game will mark the last appearance on the home court of Captain Dudley Rouse and William Cook as members of the high school team, so come out fans and give them a hearty au revoir.

Prof. J. A. Caywood, principal of the Crescent School for the past two decades, formerly was principal here and made many lasting friends. He went from Burlington directly to Crescent, where he has made an outstanding success. We hope that he accompanies his team.

BURLINGTON

Tomorrow is the anniversary of Washington's birth.

J. B. Crigler, of Hebron, was in town Monday, and qualified himself as a candidate for Constable in Magisterial district No. 1 at the primary election; and his name will appear on the ballots.

Last week J. J. Berkshire received a hound sent to him from Virginia by Hammett Carder. John says the pup is a beauty, and he expects a wonderful runner when it is fully developed. Name her Virginia, John.

Sunday night after services at the Point Pleasant church, Mr. W. S. Walton and Miss Nannie Turley were united in marriage by the pastor Rev. Sutliff. An appropriate hymn had been selected and while being sung the fair couple marched up to the pulpit and were married to the surprise of every one.

WALTON

Robert Simpson, he of the melodious voice, is getting up a class in vocal music. Mr. Simpson is noted for his singing accomplishment. Very few people are blessed with such a voice. The silver songster, will no doubt, make a success of it.

Someone told me that Dr. Jones is an expert at checkers in the Phymagellon Club.

Men who bring a case of cramps to this place, are compelled to take same away with them. Cause—jog dry. I don't know what we will do for bait this summer when we go fishing.

UNION

Joe Myers must be running for some office. I saw him in town recently—he seldom comes.

Matson Rachal spent this week in Cincinnati and Covington.

Charlie Bannister has a serious attack of la grippe this week.

Miss Mattie Whitson closed her five months' school at Big Bone Springs, last Friday.

FLORENCE

T. L. Swetman has returned from a trip to Harrodsburg, where he was in attendance at the bedside of his brother-in-law, W. Y. Crigler, who has been dangerously sick, but is improving.

Rev. Geo. N. Buffington received a telegram from China that Rev. Clarence Reed, the devoted missionary and his little daughter were very ill at Shanghai, being troubled with some malady peculiar to that climate, an 'dit was feared that neither of them would recover. Mr. Reed is loth to give up his work, having mastered the language and having a mission at Shanghai that is self sustaining. He wanted to go to northern China where natives never have a fire to warm by, though the thermometer goes to 70 degrees below zero. The natives keep warm by increasing their clothing, wearing from 15 to 20 suits of clothes in extremely cold weather, gradually peeling them off as the weather moderates. Bishop Wilson has asked the Board of Missions to send Mr. Reed home, as it would be suicidal for him to remain longer.

PETERSBURG

Ed Heaton, of Lawrenceburg, was in town last week.

We had sleet for several days last week—I meant Sleet Hume.

Hudson, son of Berry Trulock is very ill at present.

A four inch snow fell here last Wednesday night.

The Mayflower could not run several days last week, on account of the wind. The waves rolled five or six feet high.

W. E. Vest was in town the other day, and your correspondent had the pleasure of puffing one of his five centers.

Miss Lou Allen who has been in the city for some time, returned home Wednesday.

John Gibson, of Falmouth is visiting relatives here.

Among the visitors in town last week were: Misses Ella Gould, Lizzie Carter, and Harry Farris, of Lawrenceburg.

Geo. Vesemir has moved into his new house on First Street.

GUNPOWDER

The Union correspondent is looking up Mike Caton's boat, failed to notice what material the water tank at his mill is made.

The social given at the residence of J. H. Freeman in honor of the Misses Himes was attended by guests too numerous to mention. Parlor games and music were the order of the evening.

Mrs. E. H. Snyder is on the sick list.

GASBURG

Henry Terrill has moved back to his farm from Aurora.

Gasburg, probably has the oldest house in the county. It was built by Daniel Mosby, father of the late Robert Mosby, in 1796, lacking only two years of being a century old. It is still in fair condition and used as a dwelling. There is a pear tree nearby that was planted at the same time.

ERLANGER

Miss Stattie Childers entertained a party of young folks last Friday evening.

A. C. Cates is at Hot Springs, Ark., for the improvement of his health.

When Erlanger is incorporated, she will grow more rapidly. When will that be?

Dr. Slater, after a week's confinement with la grippe, is able to practice again.

A. C. Collins, of Florence was a visitor here Friday.

LIMABURG

Miss Pearl McAtte's school will close on the 23d.

Mrs. J. W. Utz is recovering from her spell of illness.

No tobacco has been sold in this neighborhood. There will be an average crop this season.

T. A. Crigler, of near Ludlow, will move to his farm near Hebron.

NO LOANS TO FARMERS INCREASING PRODUCTION

Farmers planning to increase production are not eligible to loans from production credit associations according to a rent ruling of the Farm Credit Administration.

In order to obtain a production loan, a farmer must be a member of a county production control association, which means that he has signed one or more agricultural adjustment contracts; or he must present a certificate from the organization showing that is not increasing production contrary to the program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Lists of farmers cooperating in the reduction program are to be prepared by county production control associations. The appearance of an applicant's name on a list, or a certificate issued by the county council, shall be accepted by the production credit association as satisfactory evidence that the applicant is eligible for a loan in so far as his cooperation in the production control program is concerned.

Fifty Union county women are using improved methods for the first time, after receiving information from Miss Sadie Wilgus, home demonstration agent. Eighteen are planning meals, 35 reorganized child feeding methods, and 10 had physical examinations.

All Farmers Are Urged To Demand Graduated Tax On Cigarettes For Protection Of Their Crop Prices

By BEN KILGORE

Executive Secretary

Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation

Any step which will help the farmer get a higher price for his tobacco is worth thinking about. Tobacco farmers must have a better market for their crop.

It was with this in mind that the executive committee of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation held a special meeting several days ago to study the proposal in Congress to graduate the Federal tax on cigarettes.

We had been told that revision of the tax was proposed by manufacturers of 10-cent cigarettes as a measure absolutely necessary to their continued operation. Naturally, if the existence of these companies were jeopardized, interests of the tobacco growers would be at stake, also, for the makers of low-priced cigarettes buy large quantities of American-grown tobacco.

The tax on cigarettes at the present time is 6 cents a package, regardless of whether the package sells for 10 cents or 50 cents.

Proposed Tax Rates

The proposal is to make the tax more proportional to the retail price of the cigarettes. The tax on 15-cent cigarettes would remain the same; the tax on more expensive cigarettes would be increased by three-fifths of a cent and the tax on 10-cent cigarettes would be reduced by three-fifths of a cent.

The executive committee made a careful study of the question and decided to go on record as favoring the proposal for a graduated tax on cigarettes.

We wanted to know what was the attitude of the national organization, so I telephoned Mr. Edward A. O'Neal in Washington, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation and chairman of the new National Agricultural Conference.

Mr. O'Neal not only expressed himself as favoring graduation of the tax but also said that he and Mr. Chester Gray, legislative representative of the American Federation, would extend all possible efforts toward securing the passage of the tax schedule in Congress.

Fair Tax Proposed

With the endorsement of national and Kentucky officials of the Farm Bureau movement, I feel no hesitance in advocating adoption of the measure in the interests of farmers—especially the farmers of the twelve southeastern states in which cigarette tobacco is grown.

That the graduation of cigarette taxes according to price would be fair and just is not questioned. The tax on cigars is in proportion to the selling price of the various types. Other taxes are graduated according to the value of the commodities upon which they are exacted.

No differential has been made in the tax on cigarettes, we found, for the simple reason that it was not until recently that conditions warranted a proportional schedule. The 6-cent tax was applied in 1917 as a war measure. At that time 15 cents was the lowest price for which cigarettes sold. It was not until 1932 that the 10-cent cigarette, the "poor man's smoke," was placed on the market to match depression-deflated pocketbooks.

10-Center Helps Farmers

A study of the tobacco market during recent years shows how the appearance of the 10-cent cigarette has affected the farmer.

For nearly ten years earnings of tobacco growers had been decreasing and profits of manufacturers had been increasing.

During that time profits of manufacturers rose from 30 per cent to 68 per cent and earnings of farmers dropped from 70 to 32 per cent. The position of the gains was reversed almost exactly, with agriculture taking the small end.

When lean years of depression set in, the consumption of cigarettes began to decline. The price of burley decreased from 15.59 cents in 1930 to 8.63 cents in 1931. The large manufacturers dominated the market and competition among buyers was at a minimum.

Boosted Burley Prices

A new competition and a new channel of consumption appeared when certain independent manufacturers began making cigarettes two years ago to sell for 10 cents a package. Cigarette consumption began to go up again and an element of rivalry appeared on the loose leaf floor. The price of burley rose again in 1932 to 12.60 cents.

Operations of the 10-cent cigarette manufacturers have been growing more and more extensive. What this means to the farmer does not need to be pointed out.

During the first year or so, production of 10-cent cigarettes had been worthwhile, because manufacturers were content with a small profit, a much smaller profit than that made on the four leading brands of 15-cent cigarettes.

Developments during the last few months have made it impractical for these independent companies to continue manufacturing 10-cent cigarettes when the tax is 6 cents. Paying to the government a tax of 25 1/2 per cent of the manufacturer's net selling price (before tax), they cannot compete with cigarettes on which the tax is only 12 1/2 per cent of the selling price.

Manufacturing Costs Up

Costs of manufacturing have been rising. Wages are higher under the NRA, materials are higher and the factories have the processing tax to pay. The manufacturers tell us that after they have paid taxes and other costs, they can make a profit of only two-tenths of a cent on each package of cigarettes.

The situation is serious, they say, and from what I learn from Louisville's two 10-cent cigarette makers, Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation and Axton-Fisher Tobacco Company, largest in that branch of the trade, the 10-cent cigarette may be driven off the market unless the tax is adjusted on an equitable basis.

That this would mean a loss to the farmer, especially at this time when definite attempts are being made to improve the market, has been pointed out already. It would also mean a loss to smokers. An estimate has been made that by providing consumers with a low-priced smoke and forcing price cutting among 15-cent cigarettes, the 10-cent cigarette saved smokers $150,000,000 in one year.

Help to Government

The effect a change in the tax rate would have on government revenues must be considered, but it is held that rather than cut revenues, the adjustment would increase revenues. This is important at a time when a desperate effort is being made in Washington to maintain the government on a stable foundation in spite of costs of the recovery program.

The experts say that when consumption of cigarettes declines because of economic conditions, many smokers start "rolling their own" with loose tobacco. The federal tax on this kind of tobacco is only 18 cents a pound, while the cigarette tax amounts to $1 a pound.

When you take this into consideration, along with the fact that 10-cent cigarettes contain far less foreign tobacco than "fifteen centers" and that the 10-cent cigarette seems likely to grow in sales, it appears that the government need not fear its revenues will be reduced by graduation of the tax.

Less Foreign Tobacco

The amount of foreign tobacco used in cigarettes is important to the farmer, also, for the American grower makes no profit on tobacco grown in Turkey. It is stated that the 15-cent cigarette contains from three to four times as much foreign-grown tobacco as the 10-cent cigarette.

Manufacturers of 10-cent cigarettes claim that they pay the farmer as much for his tobacco as makers of more expensive cigarettes do and the grower receives substantially the same part of the consumer's dollar from either cigarette.

Members of our executive committee who studied the proposal for a change in the tax represent a variety of agricultural interests and therefore were able to consider the problem without prejudice.

Dr. C. G. Stephenson, Clark County, president of the state Federation, is a country physician and a large tobacco and livestock farmer. Mr. M. Hume Payne, Bourbon County, first vice president, is an outstanding burley grower. Mr. O. C. Whitfield is a master farmer in Hopkins County. Mr. Charles M. Meacham, Jr., is a pioneer Korean lespezea grower. Mr. R. E. Nute, president of the Jefferson County Farm Bureau, is an extensive fruit grower and turkey raiser.

Now Up To Congress

The proposal for adjustment of the tax has been made in the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, and, I am told, has not found an unsympathetic attitude.

A sub-committee has been appointed to study the question and soon will conduct a hearing on the subject.

Farmers from North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, as well as manufacturers, will testify before the committee in behalf of a graduated tax.

Considering that the tax change is only slight and that the interests of tobacco growers in twelve states are involved, we believe it will be to the advantage of agriculture if farmers everywhere will write to their Congressmen asking them to give favorable consideration to the proposal.

HAVE VISION OF FLYING AT 554 MILES AN HOUR

An airplane capable of flying 554 miles an hour, using existing engines, could be built today by applying known aerodynamic principles to its design and construction, according to John Stack of the national advisory committee for aeronautics. This is 131 miles an hour faster than the present speed record.

What such a high-speed plane would be like is described by Mr. Stack in the first issue of the Journal of the Aeronautical Sciences, reprinted in the Literary Digest. It would differ only slightly in form from the transport planes used on transcontinental airways.

The wings of the hypothetical plane would span 29.1 feet; the fuselage would be 40 inches in diameter. The plane would have completely retractable landing gear or would be catapulted like the early Wright planes, and could land on its fuselage. The engine and pilot would be completely enclosed, vision for the pilot being provided by windows or indirectly by mirrors. The wings would be centered on the fuselage.

A model of this plane has been tested in wind-tunnels and bears out Mr. Stack's calculations. The plane would have a landing speed of 103 miles an hour—a dangerous speed, but one which could perhaps be cut with proper auxiliary devices. The same kind of plane, equipped with 3,000 horse-power engines and new types of propellers, could fly at a computed speed of 600 miles an hour, or nearly 80 per cent of the speed of sound.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the care—use of strong laxatives may do harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is no "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

Maj. Emil Fey

On the side lines watching events closely and biding their time, were Nazi Germany, Fascist Italy, France just recovering from its own internal row, and the rather frightened members of the little entente.

Great Britain, determined that Germany and Austria shall not be united, was warning Hitler to keep his hands off. Soviet Russia would like to put a finger in the pie but is fully occupied with the threat of war with Japan.

Vice Chancellor Emil Fey and Prince Ernst von Starhemberg of Austria were determined that the Socialists should be driven out or exterminated and the country made wholly Fascist, and Chancellor Dollfuss was going along with them.

The revolt of the Socialists was evidently carefully planned and the rebels were well armed and capably led. But at this writing they had won no victory of moment and their strongholds in Vienna, mainly the huge communist apartment buildings, had been smashed by the government artillery. In Linz, Graz, Steyr and other centers the results were the same.

After several days of fighting, in which two or three thousand persons were killed and many more wounded, Dollfuss gave the Socialists five hours in which to lay down their arms on promise of pardon except for the chief leaders. This brought insufficient response, and the government troops went into action again in the suburbs to which the rebels had been driven. The latter met the attack stoutly, especially in the section just across the great Reichsbrücke where they were occupying big buildings and trenches. Major Fey was in charge of the operations in and about Vienna, and Prince von Starhemberg was in command at Linz and Steyr.

Though the German government was not openly mixing in the mess, the official Nazi newspapers were egging on the Austrian Socialists. Hitler and his comrades claim that a majority of the Austrian voters are Nazis and prophecy that the time is near when Dollfuss will fall and the Austrian Nazis will be in control. The whole tone of comment in the German press expressed sympathy with the "misled" workers of Austria, and the League of Nations and its members were warned not to interfere in the struggle.

Reports originating in Paris said 75,000 Italian troops had been massed at strategic points along the Austrian frontier and that they and the Fascist frontier guard were ready for any eventuality. The Italian government officials said this troop movement had been going on for some time and was only part of a fundamental change in Italian military policy.

London correspondents dug up a story, from an Austrian source, to the effect that the Austrian Socialists obtained the arms with which they had been fighting from Czechoslovakia, either from the Czech government direct or with its connivance. A railroad from Prague to the south runs through a part of Austria, and the story goes that trains loaded with arms and ammunition consigned to some place in Czechoslovakia were emptied of their cargoes somewhere between Gemundt and Pressburg.

It is also alleged that arms have been shipped up the Danube from Pressburg to Vienna or nearby points, and smuggled ashore.

Czechoslovakia doesn't at all like the idea of being surrounded by Fascist countries and has been encouraging democratic movements against both the German and Austrian dictatorships. Prague is full of refugee Socialists.

TEN days in jail was the sentence pronounced by the senate on William P. MacCracken for having tampered with correspondence in his files after the files had been subpoenaed by the special committee investigating air-mail contracts. The same punishment was awarded L. H. Britton, vice president of Northwest Airways. Two other defendants were acquitted. MacCracken already had been fined $100 by the District Supreme court for misrepresentation in obtaining a writ of habeas corpus before actually being arrested. He was given time by the senate to perfect an appeal from its verdict.

The army went ahead rapidly in its preparations for carrying the air mails after the cancellation of contracts by Postmaster General Farley. Headquarters for this service were opened in Washington and put under the command of Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's telegram to the President protesting against the summary cancellation of contracts led Postmaster General Farley to make public his report to Chairman Black's investigating committee justifying his action. In this Farley made sensational charges that the government had been defrauded to the extent of $46,800,000 in the letting and operation of air-mail contracts. He asserted that his predecessor, Walter F. Brown, had joined in and directed a conspiracy by which competition was smothered and all contracts were awarded by secret agreement to certain favored air lines.

SECRETARIES ICKES, WALLACE, Dorn and Perkins were named by the President as a committee to draw up definite plans for his permanent public works program. This is intended to effect great economic and social changes and will cost probably more than half a billion dollars yearly. Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers take it for granted that even after business has achieved recovery there will be from three to five billion persons still unemployed and that they must be cared for by something like the Civil Works administration.

This new project as now conceived includes these major undertakings: Methodical development of waterways, water power, flood control, soil erosion preventives, reforestation, and other public works. On these works employment would be furnished in the manner of the present CCC and CWA.

Decentralization of industry through establishment of small industries in rural regions to enable people to make a living partly by farming and partly by factory employment. A start in this direction is now being made in the subsistence homesteads, for which twenty-five millions of recovery funds have been allocated.

Government purchase of submarginal lands unit for cultivation, which would be added to the public domain and devoted to forest development. For this purpose twenty-five millions already have been allotted.

THE Civil Works administration obtained from congress an appropriation of $50,000,000 for its immediate uses and its workers, numbering 3,800,000 persons, received their pay. But at the same time Administrator Harry Hopkins began the task of cutting down the forces, ordering reduction of from 50 to 90 per cent.

He directed that work cease on all federal civil projects not on federal or other public property. By Hopkins' plan of cutting down the total number of employees about 10 per cent a week, the CWA army will be virtually out of existence by May 1.

The largest force affected by the nonpublic property order is in the public health service. Hopkins ordered it to stop malaria control efforts employing 23,779 men, rural sanitation using 32,010 and the sealing of mines by 6,571 workers to prevent water acidity in the Ohio valley.

COL. HORATIO B. HACKETT of Chicago was appointed director of the housing division of the Public Works administration by Secretary of the Interior Ickes. He succeeds Robert D. Kohn, a New York architect, who has held the position for the last nine months.

Selection of Colonel Hackett, a member of the Chicago architectural firm of Holabird & Root, was regarded in Washington as a move to speed up the federal housing corporation. Given $100,000,000 of public works money for low cost housing developments, it is spent very little.

PREMIER TSALDARIS of Greece doesn't accept the verdict of several government physicians, that Samuil Insult is well enough to stand deportation without danger to his life. Tsaldaris said it would be "murder" to compel the fugitive American to travel in his present physical condition, so he will be permitted to remain in Greece until his health improves.

As Insult is seventy-four years old and has clever advisers in Athens, his extradition may not be obtained for a long time if ever.

MELVIN A. TRAYLOR, president of the First National bank of Chicago and one of the country's leading financiers, died at his home of pneumonia after fighting the disease bravely for several weeks. Mr. Traylor was born in a log cabin in Kentucky 55 years ago and made his way to leadership in business by sheer ability. He also became prominent in politics to be considered favorably for the Democratic nomination for President in 1932. Chicago and the country sustained a considerable loss in his death.

JAPAN'S new ambassador to Washington, Hiroshi Satou, presented his credentials to President Roosevelt, and the two gentlemen exchanged assurances of friendship and mutual confidence between their countries.

Satou said he was sure that "whatever question, either political or economic, may arise between our two countries, can and will be amicably composed in a spirit of friendship and mutual confidence—the spirit that has characterized our relations ever since Japan made, at the instance of the United States, her formal entry into the family of nations."

"I share fully," the President said in reply, "the view which you have expressed that all questions which may arise between our two countries will be resolved in a spirit of friendship and mutual confidence. You will find this government devoted now as in the past to the principle of maintaining peace in the Pacific region as elsewhere and ready to co-operate cordially and sympathetically with your government in all of the many lines of endeavor which are possible in pursuance of and toward making prevail that principle. It is our constant desire that, by co-operation, all the countries of the Pacific region may continue to enjoy peace and may attain conditions of abiding prosperity."

INDEPENDENTS and insurgents in congress have long advocated an amendment of the Constitution providing for direct election of the President, and at last the first step toward this change has been taken. Senator George W. Norris' resolution proposing the amendment was approved by the senate judiciary committee, with only Senator Stephens of Mississippi voting in the negative.

Should the amendment be written into the federal Constitution it would abolish the present system by which citizens vote for Presidential electors instead of for the candidates themselves. Under the amendment the names of Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates would be written on the ballots and the votes cast directly for them.

The amendment would also do away with the present system by which a state's whole electoral vote (equal to its representation in both houses of congress) is cast for the candidate receiving a plurality of votes cast within the state. Instead a state's electoral vote would be pro-rated according to the proportion of the entire vote which each candidate received.

GOVERNORS of all the states have received from the administration a draft of a model state recovery law which would make all national codes of fair competition automatically effective within the states. It would remove the threatening possibility of a constitutional barrier to the enforcement of those codes among concerns that do not deal in interstate commerce.

The model law would authorize the state governor to consent to the utilization of state and local officers by the President of the United States "in effectuating the policies of the national industrial recovery act." A violation of a code would be made a misdemeanor in the state with a penalty of $500 a day for each offense and for each day the violation continues.

Where a license under the NIRA is required, a person doing business without one would be liable to a fine of $500 or six months' imprisonment or both for each day of the violation. These state penalties are copied after those in the national recovery act.

The state law pronounces the existence of a statewide emergency and defines its own termination on June 16, 1935, unless the President shall by earlier proclamation have proclaimed the emergency ended.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT having decided that the civilian conservation corps shall be maintained at full strength until March 31, 1935, orders to this effect have been sent to the commanding generals of all army areas. There will be two enrollment periods of six months each, the total number of men to be 300,000. Additional local experienced men will be enlisted in some of the states, in the eighth and ninth corps areas in the extreme West.

The President already has announced that he will ask congress for an appropriation of from $275,000,000 to $300,000,000 for the corps.

REPRESENTATIVES of business groups in Washington said they were fairly well satisfied with the new revenue bill which was brought before the house, though there were some objectionable provisions which they hoped might be removed by the senate finance committee later. The bill now represents a compromise between the recommendations of the Hill subcommittee and the suggestions of the Treasury department. The chief changes are those with respect to depreciation, consolidated returns and corporate reorganizations. The bill does not reduce depreciation allowances as did the subcommittee recommendations. Nor does it abolish consolidated returns for affiliated corporations. While it imposes an extra tax on corporation earnings when consolidated returns are filed, this is not so objectionable as the entire elimination of the privilege.

While the upper surtax brackets have been scaled up somewhat they do not increase greatly the tax applying to a person who has an earned income credit. The tax burden is increased somewhat on a person without earned income, but with corporation dividends and government bonds not subject to normal taxes which are reached by commencing surtaxes above a single 4 per cent normal tax instead of above normal rates aggregating 8 per cent.

WASHINGTON, Adams Both Late for Inauguration

WHEN Washington was inaugurated the old Federal hall was the Capitol of the United States. At that time New York and Philadelphia were rivals for the honor of being the Capital of the nation, notes the Washington Star.

The first President was inducted into office on April 30, rather than March 4, not by design, but because of the procrastination of the congress and the difficulties of travel in that day. Congress had set the first Wednesday in March, which fell on the fourth of the month, as the date for "commencing the proceedings under the said Constitution," but when March 4 came neither the senate nor the house could muster a quorum and so could not organize. Only 13 members of the house answered to their names.

Two summons were sent out to members, but it was not until April 1 that the house finally managed to count a quorum. The senate obtained a quorum April 6, more than a month after the appointed day. On the same day a joint session of the two houses was held in the senate chamber. When the electoral votes were opened and counted, it was found Washington was elected President, and John Adams Vice President.

Washington and Adams were formally notified and this, together with their journey to New York, delayed the inauguration until the thirtieth.

George Washington One of Signers of Constitution

IN MAY, 1787, a constitutional convention met at Philadelphia, then the National Capital. George Washington was president of the convention, which was attended by 55 delegates from the states. A constitution was drawn up after about four months and was adopted by 39 of the delegates on September 17, 1787; 16 declined or failed to sign. Ten delegates appointed by the states did not attend the convention. Some of the best known names among the signers were George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, James Madison, Alexander Hamilton, Robert Morris, Roger Sherman, Charles C. Pinckney, James Wilson. Delaware was the first state to ratify, followed in order by Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Virginia, New York, North Carolina, Rhode Island. It was declared to be in effect in March, 1789.

The Twenty-Second of February

PALE is the February sky,
And brief the midday's sunny hours;
The wind-swept forest seems to sigh
For the sweet time of leaves and flowers.

Yet has no month a prouder day,
Not even when the summer broods
O'er meadows in their fresh array,
Or autumn tints the glowing woods.

For this chill season now again
Brings, in its annual round, the morn
When, greatest of the sons of men,
Our glorious Washington was born.

Lo, where beneath an icy shield,
Calmly the mighty Hudson flows!
By snow-capped fall and frozen field,
Broadening, the lordly river goes.

The wildest storm that sweeps through space
And rends the oak with sudden force,
Can raise no ripple on his face,
Or slacken his majestic course.

Thus, 'mid the wreck of thrones shall live
Unmarred, undimmed, our hero's fame;
And years succeeding years shall give Increase of honors to his name.
—William Cullen Bryant.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT

LOFTY and grand, the wonderful shaft erected in Washington, D. C., by a grateful nation in recognition of the services of Gen. George Washington, attracts thousands of visitors who annually through the Nation's Capital. The monument is of white marble, 555 feet, 5 1/2 inches in height, and 55 feet, 1 1/2 inches square at the base. The cornerstone was laid July 4, 1848. The United States government, under an act of congress, took over the monument in 1870. An elevator accommodates 35 passengers.

ENLIGHTENMENT

An army officer was showing his fair young guest round the barracks. Presently a bugle sounded.

"What's that for, Tom?" she asked the young man.

"That's 't' t'atoo," he replied. She raised her eyebrows understandingly.

"Oh, I see," she said. "I've often seen it on soldiers' arms, but I didn't know they had a special time for it."

Prorastination
Wife—John, I gave you this letter to mail a month ago and I just found it in your pilot coat pocket!

Husband—I remember! I took off the coat at the time to have you sew a button on it and it isn't sewed on yet!

What, Again?
Tony—Are you going to Helen's birthday party?

Henry—What twentieth is it?
Tony—Her twentieth.

Henry—No, I went last year.—Pathfinder.

Carrying the Air
Neighbor—Where's your brother, Freddie?

Freddie—Aw, he's in the house playing a duet. I finished my part first.

SUBSTITUTE

Shopper—Have you a circulating library?

Salesman—No, madam, but I can show you some nice revolving bookcases.

Not His Fault
Mother—Did you know that every time you draw your breath, some one dies? I've just been reading about it.

Son—Well, I can't help it. If I stop drawing my breath I'll die.

Spare Him
He—Isn't it about time baby called me daddy?

She—I've decided not to let him know who you are until the little darling gets a little stronger.

Some Compliment
Hostess—Dear, you are eating nothing.

Her Boy Friend—My pet, when I look at you it takes my appetite away.—Chelsea Record.

Mrs. Katherine Hicks Rachal, is in Walton for a visit with her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Gaines.

BANQUET GIVEN BY

G. R. GREAT SUCCESS

The Mother and Daughter banquet given last Thursday night by the Hebron G. R. club was hailed as a most wonderful success. It was given in the school auditorium, the table seating 70 in number and set the entire length of the gym. The former was decorated very cleverly in red and white, carrying out the red and white for Valentine's Day. Candles, alone were used for illumination and the light from these, against the background consisting of red and white napkins and placards at each plate gave a beautiful effect.

The senior boys, acting as waiters, with Woodford Crigler acting as chief, served four courses to the guests. Between the courses the following program was held, with Eva Mae Grant as toastmistress:

Speech of Welcome—Eva Mae Grant.
Response from—Mothers—Mrs. Hildreth Dolwick.
Blessing—Dorothy Mae Burns.
Duet—Misses Deillah Dolwick and Frances Slekman.

Plano Solo—Helen Wahl.
Reading—Louise Elkin.
Vocal Solo—Vera Goodridge.
Plano Solo—Vivian Hood.
Quartet—Group of girls.
Talk—Bessie Jones.

Between these numbers G. R. songs were sung.

At the end of the program string music was also rendered by Francis Souther with the guitar and the other Senior boys singing.

The table was presided over at one end by Mr. Chester Goodridge and the other by Mr. Edwin Walton.

Toasts also were given between courses. The former were sung to the officers of the G. R. Club, the mothers, teachers and various others who attended. Mrs. Robert Grant was the only mother present who had two daughters in the club, while Mrs. Melissa Hankins was the oldest mother present.

The banquet was prepared by the alumnae of H. H. S. and we again wish to thank them for the assistance they gave.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEET

The Boone County Woman's Club met on 18th with Mrs. Beatrice Huey. The following program was rendered:

Roll call answered to with a New Year poem.

97th Psalm read by Mrs. Anna Huey.

Current Events—Mrs. Elza Voshell.

A good talk on Yosemite National Park with pictorial folder views of same—Mrs. George Kreylich.

Quartet, "When They Ring Those Golden Bells"—Mrs. Anna Huey, Mrs. Genia Green, Mrs. Londa Maurer and Mrs. Neva Seebree.

"A Sermon to the Sisters," reading by Mrs. Lula Huey in costume. "Are You?"—Mrs. Josie Maurer. The Corner Where You Are—Mrs. Goodridge.

"Mandy's Wedding"—Miss Mattie Kreylich.

Helpful Hints to Housewives—Mrs. Clara Seebree.

"Kentucky Cardinal" continued—Mrs. Avalon Walton.

The writer was not present at this meeting but those attending reported a very enjoyable afternoon.

The February meeting was held the fifteenth with Mrs. Elza Voshell.

Scripture reading, 23rd Psalm by hostess.

Life of Washington—Mrs. Lula Huey.

General Quiz—Mrs. Katherine Easton.

Talk on Big Trees of Yosemite National Park by Mrs. George Kreylich.

Current Events—Miss Estelle Huey.

"How Lucy Backslid," reading by Miss Mattie Kreylich.

"Ky Cardinal" continued by Mrs. Avalon Walton.

Lincoln's Boyhood—read by Mrs. Missouri Rice.

Glad to have those visitors, Mrs. Maxwell and daughter, Mrs. Leroy Voshell and Mrs. Laws present, also Mrs. Lula Walton as she had not attended any of the meetings for quite a while. A social hour followed the program during which refreshments were served which were enjoyed by all.

No single system of soil treatment can be applied with equal success to all of the soils of the state. Each particular kind of soil and to some extent each farm presents its own problems. —W. L. Burlison, at Farm and Home Convention.

Only chicks from blood tested, purebred stock will make much profit this year, conditions indicate. Fifty good pullets will pay more than 100 poor ones. Flocks should be started early so as to be ready for early fall high prices. Rocks and Reds should be hatched by March 18, Leghorns not more than a month later.

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

Last year, many Kentuckians learned for the first time just how valuable a garden can be from an economic standpoint and many found out that, although they already knew of some of the advantages that follow from gardening, their knowledge was only slight. Even though the emergency that made us "garden conscious" may not be so pressing in 1934 as it has been for the last few years, gardening should continue, because of many reasons.

First, a garden has aesthetic value. There is distinct beauty in rows of green, growing vegetables, apart from the promise of harvest to come. Even the straightness of rows and the general orderliness of a good garden have a beauty of their own. Too, the fact that a gardener must practice orderliness, if he is to have a good looking garden—and nobody cares to risk having any other kind—may inspire orderliness in the gardener's everyday living.

Part of gardening is outwitting the insects and the vegetable diseases; this partakes almost of adventure in what may be humed lives. Again, preparing ahead for the pest control campaign—and preparation must be made ahead—may conceivably make the gardener more forehanded in his everyday living.

The growing of a good garden still in the gardener a feeling of partnership with the Almighty for gardening is creative business. This feeling of partnership may, and does, redound to the enhancement of living from day to day.

Last, gardening is exercise, and healthy exercise, and exercise that returns quite tangible profit through some persons call it work.

Gardening is work and it may even become drudgery unless planning is done. For example, many persons err in having a garden too large for their needs, or rather, they make plantings of some vegetables much too large to use, once they begin to "come in." Because of this, there are periods of glut during which vegetables are wasted, and of course, so are the efforts of the gardener. At the same time, though, there exist actual shortages of vegetables that might have been planted in the space that is too, that after periods of glut there are times of scarcity of the very vegetables of which there was surplus, further reducing the effectiveness of the garden, assuming that a garden should furnish vegetables in a steady stream at a rate they can be efficiently used.

Certainly, gardening in the manner just described is drudgery, but gardening after a plan is not. Accordingly, it behooves 1934 gardeners to plan that their crops will behave in orderly fashion, that a full variety of vegetables will be continuously harvested in the amount the family can use without waste. Part of planning is to arrange for adequate fertility to maintain the growing schedule at full speed. Part is anticipating the past campaign. Part is to be provided with tools with which the various operations may be done with utmost dispatch; for example, the possibilities of a garden plow or wheel hoe in cultivation are too generally overlooked, though that piece of equipment can conceivably earn its cost even in the first year, providing planning is done.

Above, have been given a few hints as to what a real garden may be made to become; in the weeks to follow, various features that together make up planning will be discussed.

PLANS MADE TO PUT CORN-HOG CAMPAIGN UNDER WAY IN STATE

Agricultural Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky., Feb. 14—With the burley tobacco sign-up campaign nearing completion, Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the College of Agriculture announces plans to launch the corn-hog production program throughout the state.

This part of the national agricultural adjustment program calls for a reduction of at least 20 percent in corn and 25 percent in hogs this year.

Farmers who sign contracts will be paid 30 cents a bushel on the yield of the acreage removed from production, figuring average yields in 1932 and 1933, and $5 a head on three-fourths of the average number of hogs farrowed and sold in the past two years.

For example, if a farmer has been growing 25 acres of corn, he would reduce this to 20 acres. In return, he would receive 30 cents a bushel for the amount of corn which the county association estimated would have been grown on the 5 acres removed from production.

If he farrowed an average of 20 pigs in the last two years, he would agree to farrow only 15. These he would raise and market in the usual way, and would receive in addition $5 a head on them from the government.

The corn hog-production campaign will be conducted by county agents and local committees, working under the general supervision of the extension service of the College of Agriculture.

TOBACCO OUTLOOK IS MUCH IMPROVED

The outlook for tobacco growers of Kentucky has distinctly improved since last year, says the annual outlook statement of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington. Relatively large production, prices near or above those prevailing a year ago, and payments in connection with the production adjustment program, promise improvement in the income of tobacco growers in the present marketing season, above the income received in any recent year, and a purchasing power higher than that of several years. Similarly favorable factors promise to prevail for the 1934 crop.

The use of burley tobacco has declined moderately in recent years and disappearance now appears to be about 275 million pounds annually. Production has exceeded disappearance in each of the last five years with the result that stocks have attained all time levels. Total supplies at the present time are in excess of one billion pounds or approximately 50 percent above normal.

Prices are averaging somewhat below those of a year ago but in view of the large crop, the second largest on record, and the payments due in connection with the tobacco production adjustment program, income to burley tobacco growers within the present marketing year will be about 50 percent larger than in either of the last two years and will provide farmers the largest purchasing power that they have realized in any year since 1919 with the possible exception of 1928.

The outlook for the 1934 crop is somewhat uncertain. The production adjustment plans of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will substantially reduce production of growers who subscribe to the program. The present market prices appear to be sufficiently low to discourage new production of increased production among present growers. That this will be the result is, of course, uncertain. Moreover, an excessively heavy carry over is imminent and marked improvement in open market prices next year is hardly to be expected.

The situation for dark tobaccos is characterized by moderate production and stocks that are near normal. The foreign market for the various types of dark tobacco has worked to their disadvantage in recent years because of the difficulties of international trade restrictions but at the present time it is operating to their advantage. Export demand for these types appears to be improving and the prices prevailing for the present crop reflect the depreciation of the American dollar in foreign exchange. Prices received for the 1933 crop over those received for the 1932 crop represent an advance of approximately 30 percent for western fire-cured, 40 percent for eastern fire-cured, 20 percent for one sucker, 75 percent for Henderson stemming, and 130 percent for Green River.

The income of farmers at these prices plus benefit payments in connection with the tobacco adjustment program will provide a larger income within the marketing year and a larger purchasing power than the growers have received in recent years.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Set at least five eggs or buy three chicks for each pullet to be housed next fall. Five hundred eggs should produce 300 chicks, half of which will be cockerels. Normal losses and culling will bring the number down to 100 good pullets next fall.

In planning the garden this year, many homemakers are providing for one or two new vegetables to add variety in the family diet. There are many more or less uncommon vegetables that can be grown in Kentucky, and that would be valuable additions to the home-produced food supply.

Some folks had rather serve the Lord on six months credit, than to see Jesus Christ for cash.

WESTERN KENTUCKY FARMERS SIGNING TOBACCO CONTRACTS

Western Kentucky farmers now are signing contracts to reduce the production of dark air-cured tobacco this year. County Agents, assisted by local committees, are engaged in the task of placing the AAA reduction program before all tobacco growers.

Growers of air-cured tobacco who agree to reduce production by 30 percent will receive a rental payment of $12 an acre on the acreage removed from production, and the government in addition will add 10 percent to the sale values of their 1933 and 1934 crops.

Growers of fire-cured tobacco who agree to reduce production by 25 percent will receive the rental payment of $12 an acre on all land taken out of production, and have the sale values of their 1933 and 1934 crops increased by 7 1/2 percent.

Growers may select any one of the following productions from which to figure their reduction:

(a) Average acreage and production in 1932 and 1933.

(b) Acreage and production in 1932, provided the 1932 acreage was not more than 13 percent greater than in 1933.

(c) The 1933 acreage and production, provided the 1933 acreage was not more than 20 percent greater than that of 1932.

(d) Eighty percent of the 1933 acreage and production.
(e) Eighty percent of the acreage and production in 1931.

Codes adopted by association of seed, vegetables and fruit producers make it unlawful to use such terms as "certified" and "registered" in the sale of potatoes and other seeds and products, unless proper inspection and certification have been obtained from state and other official agencies.

As the butchering season nears an end, housewives should consider canning chops and other meats. Canning makes it possible to have practically fresh meat at any time, and provides a way to preserve parts of the carcass that cannot be cured.

HEBRON HIGH

The Hebron girls were again victorious by defeating the Dayton girls in an over time period 28-24. Good playing was shown by both teams.

The Hebron boys were not so successful. They were defeated by Dayton. Mr. Ross was referee.

Don't forget Friday night, when the boys and girls will play the Campbell county boys and girls, from Alexandria. This game ends the season for the teams.

THE FARM AND HOME

The new spare time should make possible creative activities within the home, especially for 4-H club members. As the trek to the country begins, home amusements should be developed. Mr. Ing furniture, leather work, and remodeling clothes is suggested.

Naturalness is the style keynote this season. Mrs. Evelyn Tobey, New York fashionist, told Farm and Home Convention guests a slouchy carriage should be avoided, erectness and grace cultivated. Hair should be soft, with loose waves, a touch of the feminine.

After cans of pimentoes have been opened, the product can be kept for a week or ten days with proper care. The homemaker can put the unused pimento in a clean glass jar, fasten with a rubber band. It may then be put in the refrigerator, and used as needed.

RECEIVES BOK AWARD

The thirteenth annual Philadelphia award, founded by Edward W. Bok in 1921, was bestowed upon Dr. Lucy L. W. Wilson, internationally known educator and principal of the South Philadelphia High School for Girls. The award consists of a gold medal, a scroll and a check for $10,000 and is presented each year to the Philadelphian who has contributed the most to the welfare of the community of which Philadelphia is the center. She is the first woman to receive the award.

NOT SO FOOLISH

When Howard A. Smith of Capa Mich., invited 280 unemployed Detroiters to work his farm on a co-operative basis, neighbors scoffed at his plan. But it turned out mighty well, for Smith divided total sales of $15,000 worth of farm produce with the Detroit men, retaining $7,500 for himself. No wonder he smiles.

Lesson for February 25

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 9:35-11:1. GOLDEN TEXT—Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.—Matt. 9:37, 38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Twelve Workers for Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Twelve Workers for Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Win Others to Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Win Others to Christ?

I. Jesus' Compassion for the Multitude (9:35-38).

As he went on his rounds preaching the gospel of the kingdom, he saw the multitude as sheep having no shepherd, and his sympathy for them was aroused. This moved him

1. To declare that the harvest was plenteous but the laborers were few (v. 37). He saw the whole needy world as a ripened field of grain ready to be harvested, with but few who were willing to labor in the harvest field.

2. To ask them to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into the harvest (v. 38). Those whom he would send forth as laborers into his harvest field he desired to be imbued with the spirit of sympathy which would move them to pray for the thrusting forth of laborers.

II. The Laborers Chosen (10:1-4).

These twelve humble men were chosen and commissioned to carry forth the work of the propagation of the kingdom.

III. The Sending Forth of the Twelve (10:5-42).

The sending forth of the twelve shows the methods adopted by Jesus Christ in the propagation of the kingdom. It should be clearly borne in mind that this chapter does not outline the policy of missionary endeavor in the present age. In order to show the dispensational aspects of the lesson, the following divisions of the chapter are suggested:

1. Instructions bearing immediately upon the apostles' work to the death of Christ (vv. 5-15). Observe a. The sphere of their mission (vv. 5, 6). They were to go only to the Jews. They had no message for Gentiles or even Samaritans. No such restriction obtains with reference to ministers today.

b. Their message (v. 7). "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." By this is meant the promised kingdom of Israel was at hand—Jesus Christ, the promised king, was present and ready to set up his kingdom. The Jews rejected and crucified him. In this time of his rejection the church is being selected from all the nations.

c. The supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 8). They were clothed with power to work miracles.

d. Their maintenance (vv. 9, 10). They were to make no provision for their support, but to depend wholly upon the Lord who sent them. Since they had received the message and power gratuitously, they were to give it out in the same way.

e. The responsibilities of those to whom the message was delivered (vv. 11-15). If the people would not receive them or hear their message they were to turn away and pronounce judgment upon them.

2. Instructions concerning the testimony from the day of Pentecost onward (vv. 16-23). After Pentecost testimony for Christ would be fraught with great danger. Both Jews and Gentiles would assail the messengers with the most bitter persecutions. How appallingly this has been fulfilled! Christ's witnesses have been scourged in the synagogues before heathen magistrates. Instead of bringing peace to the homes, Christ's witnesses have brought divisions of the fiercest kind among many families. In their defense the missionaries were to rely upon the Holy Spirit to aid them. These conditions were literally experienced in the period from Pentecost to the destruction of Jerusalem. Since the fall of Jerusalem no one has been scourged in a synagogue. Verse 23 seems to carry the work forward to the time of the preaching of the kingdom in the tribulation time. The Lord's coming is so speedy that their testimony is cut short.

3. The teaching applicable in all ages (vv. 24-42). The disciple has the position of oneness with the Master. He is, therefore, courageously to declare the whole counsel of God, though most violently opposed. Though their testimony results in bitter opposition, the messenger should not be surprised or discouraged, for so completely is the Lord identified with his disciples that he accepts treatment of them as treatment of himself.

Jesus the Master

When we read the New Testament, in the actual words of our Master, are we never startled to discover how exacting a Master he is? Never has there been a religious teacher who has made so great a demand upon human character as Christ.

Love

Love is heaven, and heaven is love. Whoever or whatever leads a man into that unselfish life, leads him to step forward in religion.

GOOD JUDGMENT CALLED FOR IN RAISING CHILD

I know a family whose children I have watched grow to maturity. They had money; the children had not only a good nurse but a fine nursery governess as well.

Yet these children are frail and white. None of them seem to have the healthy stamina to which they were entitled. What was wrong?

I remember two things. They were insufficiently fed and were subjected to a rather heroic form of fresh-air treatment when little.

If the point is unprovable that too careful a diet and too much cold air will not undermine strength, it does prove, at least in this case, that they will not guarantee it either.

These children were sent out daily to play for long cold hours. They were warmly dressed, of course, and provided with things to keep them active and busy. But the neighbors used to shudder at the rigid regimen that took no account of the thermometer.

Their five o'clock nursery supper consisted of a light cereal and milk. It is never sensible to go to extremes with children, to make rigid rules that won't stretch on occasion and make concessions to common sense.

Fresh air is good, but time, place, kind and quantity do play an important part. It is the same with food. Care in diet is important but not the care that verges on starvation.

Good judgment works more miracles than unendurable codes.—Olive Roberts Barton, in the New York World-Telegram.

Auto Royal Privilege

In Nepal, the country extending for 520 miles along the southern slope of the Himalayas, in northern India, the sanctity attached to kingship is still so strong that only members of the royal family are permitted to own automobiles.

By special concession, certain high officials of Nepal are permitted, to own cars, but other than these officials and the family of the king, no one, no matter how wealthy, may own a car. Because of this restriction, the country, with a population of more than 5,000,000, had only 150 automobiles when the last figures were obtained.

CAT SAVED ORPHAN

With the tearing down of a house at 22 Vasterland street, Stockholm, Sweden, which bore over its entrance door the effigy of a cat, has been recalled the story of how the tabby found the relatives of an orphan girl. While returning from Hayti to Stockholm with his wife and three-year-old daughter, the captain of a Swedish sailing vessel died. Soon afterward his wife succumbed. The nurse, who had been engaged during the voyage, did not know whether the daughter had any relatives, nor how to trace friends. The ship cat, which was from Stockholm, started as soon as the boat landed, to guide the nurse up one street and down another until she reached 12 Vasterland street. There it stopped, and in the house was found the child's grandmother. Many old people in Stockholm still remember the cat and its search.

Is This Too Good for Your Cough?

Creomulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven major helps in one—the best helps known to science. It is made for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Creomulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is a little more than a single help. But your druggist guarantees it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known. (adv.)

Make this lip test

LOOK at them . . . and your cheeks, too, without make-up. Do they possess a natural glow and health, which comes from a sum of rich, red blood? If they do, make-up is unnecessary. If they don't read on . . . you may find one of the reasons why your skin is not clear and rosy.

You cannot have red lips, rosy cheeks, energy and cheerfulness if your blood is in a run-down condition. Lack of hemo-glo-bin, the red coloring of the blood, may also indicate a weakened condition of the body . . . loss of strength . . . poor appetite.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic, but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very necessary in restoring a low hemo-glo-bin content. If your condition suggests a blood tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite . . . your color and skin should improve with increased strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes . . . the larger is more economical.

CHAPTER I

When Ranceford Kershaw came out of the post office at Valley Center, his daughter Lorraine, seated at the wheel of the Kershaw car at the curb, saw instantly that he had received some mail of a disturbing nature. His head was bowed a little, as from a blow and in his tread there was a lag that bespoke an inhibition slightly greater than that induced by the bullet that had shattered his hip many years previous.

When he reached the car he leaned against the front door; then slowly his head came down until his face was hidden. He shivered faintly and a sigh, half pain, half despair, escaped him.

His daughter watched him with something of the alert, professional concern of a trained nurse. Only in Lorry Kershaw's eyes, profound affection and pity shone.

She knew her father suffered from angina pectoris, and two doctors had told her a long time ago that she must be prepared to lose him suddenly. They had warned her against exhibiting the slightest concern during one of his attacks, since that would merely add to the grief and worry of her father and perhaps hasten the end.

So the girl waited until he raised his face and smiled at her a trifle sheepishly. "That was a real twister," he gasped. "I figured I was a goner for sure. I don't think I could stand another like that one, Lorry."

"Nonsense," Lorry twisted his great nose. "You ain't sympathetic," he protested, with a show of irritation. But the girl knew he was secretly pleased; that her comradely badinage helped materially to allay his excitement and the resultant furious pounding of his heart.

"Too bad about you, isn't it?" she jeered. "You know very well the doctor's orders are to avoid excitement and to cultivate a placid outlook upon life at its worst. Nevertheless, the instant you receive bad news you selfishly hoard it. Don't you know that bad news split between us doesn't occupy nearly so much valuable space in that stifled breast of yours? You climb into that car, Rance Kershaw, and cease your nonsense."

Rance Kershaw grinned at his daughter lovingly. He relished being bullied by her, for he was fully aware of her reason for bullying him; aware that under her calm, debonaire exterior there were tears and terror.

They drove in silence for about two miles. Then her father said: "You were right, darling. I found a real jolt waiting for me in the post office. The Valley Center bank has bought our mortgage from the Savings Bank of San Francisco, an' Babson's called it. Got to pay up in five days or the bank'll enter suit to foreclose."

"Yes, that was quite a shock," Lorry agreed, "but it might be worse. We have a year in which to redeem the ranch, and in that time we may be able to refund our mortgage."

"We'll be counted out thirty days after the suit is filed. Nate Tichenor will close in on us and take the cattle as soon as he hears Babson has filed suit. And after that it wouldn't be worth while tryin' to refund the ranch mortgage. A cattle ranch without cattle on it is a liability."

"Still we're not downhearted," the girl protested. "We have two thousand head of feeders that aren't mortgaged to Nate Tichenor and we can get twenty dollars a head for them. If we sell them now we can escape with forty thousand dollars, but if we hold them to put more fat on them Babson or Nate Tichenor will attach them to help cover a deficiency judgment. Forty thousand dollars can be made to earn 5 per cent net. That's two thousand a year. And I have a high school teacher's certificate secured in the University of California. I can earn eighteen hundred dollars a year teaching school—and on thirty-eight hundred a year you and I can live the life of Rolly. Not a worry in life, old-time."

"You can live the life of Rolly on it, honey, but I shall not. It will kill me to give up Eden Valley—an' you know why."

"It would have been a blessing if our family had never seen Eden Valley," the girl cried passionately. "It's been paid for in blood and tears and heartbreak and social ostracism, and all we have to show for the years is a private cemetery filled with Kershaw women who died heartbroken and Kershaw men who passed away with their boots on. And at last the Hensleys have triumphed over us."

"They got two more in their cemetery than we have, Lorry."

"But they haven't any debts—and after fighting fifty years to own all of Eden Valley they'll win at last. Nate Tichenor must have money enough to buy in our ranch at the sheriff's sale. Well, he's earned his victory. If anybody is to get our part of Eden Valley, I hope it will be Nate Tichenor. I wonder what sort of man Nate Tichenor has turned out to be?"

"I dunno, Lorry. I wouldn't attempt to figure even a half-breed Hensley. His father, folks do say, was a right peaceable, fair man, an' when he married Angie Hensley he wrote me, enclosing his photograph, an' advisin' me that marryin' into the Hensley family didn't mean he'd married into the Hensley-Kershaw feud. I took him at his word—an' he kept it. But his son was raised a Hensley. He went armed after his fifteenth birthday. I figured him an' your brother, Owen, would shoot it out some day, which was why I never sent Owen to the high school at Valley Center. The principal discovered Nate Tichenor wore a forty-five in a shoulder holster, an' ordered him to leave it home thereafter, but young Tichenor wouldn't do it, so they hove him out o' high school. An' they do say he was the smartest boy in the country."

"He's been gone from Eden Valley since the war," Lorry mused. "Nine years of life outside may have civilized him. I hope so. You've got to admit, dad, he hasn't been an importunate creditor."

"He don't have to be. The longer he holds, the more interest'll accumulate an' the more cattle he'll have to levy on for his deficiency judgment. He's smart. He don't figger to do no half-way job bustin' us."

"Well, whatever happens to us it will be worth while," the girl finally suggested, "provided it ends this senseless, bloody feud."

"The feud ended," Ranceford Kershaw replied, "when your brother was killed in France. The last Hensley I tangled with put me out of the runnin'. A man so crippled he can't walk a mile or set a horse has got to wait for his enemies to come to him."

They were passing a cluster of buildings set among some scattered bull pines in the meadow about a quarter of a mile to the left of the road. A lateral road led from a gate on the main highway down to these buildings which constituted the headquarters of the Hensley ranch. Since 1920 when Angie Tichenor, the last of the Hensleys, had died while her son was in the army in France, the Hensley headquarters had been deserted.

For thirty years Ranceford Kershaw had never passed that gate without keeping a wary eye on the Hensley headquarters. And since the habit of thirty years may not be broken in six, he gazed upon the buildings now—and started as he saw a column of smoke issuing from the chimney of the low ranch-house. Lorry saw the smoke also, and instantly stopped the car.

"It'll be too late to dispose of them two thousand feeders now," her father told her. "Nate Tichenor's back. Him an' Babson are both after us. They'll strike together. Ah, poor Lorry—my poor little girl. Sorry, honey—so sorry—"

He sighed deeply and lurched over against her; his head fell on her shoulder. She set the brake, moved a little in her seat, put her right arm around his neck to steady him and with her left tilted his face upward toward hers with a look of love unutterable; racked by excruciating pain, nevertheless his high courage was equal to the effort of a smile; and then the light went out of his eyes and his heavy breast was still forever.

For a long time she had known that some day he would leave her thus—suddenly, awkwardly. . . . After while her thumb pressed the button in the center of the steering wheel and a series of raucous, low-drawn shrieks came from the motor horn.

The Kershaw pride was in the dust at last. The last of the Kershaws was appealing to the last of the enemy for help!

For two hundred years the Kershaws had not been able, with patient submission, to tolerate more than a modicum of civilization. The first progenitor in America arrived with Lord Baltimore; thereafter each generation moved at least one state farther west; one might have traced the hebra of the tribe by its headstones, albeit many a Kershaw never found a grave at all. They were hunters, trappers, soldiers, and cattlemen.

When Robin Kershaw, at the age of twenty-two, came home from the Mexican war, he discovered that during his absence his father's ranch in northern Texas had been raided by Comanche Indians, his family slaughtered and the cattle stolen or dead in a drought.

Robin Kershaw rode with Fremont to California and, when gold was discovered, was among the first to stake a claim in the Sierra foothills. Before the snow flew in the winter of '52, he had amassed a fortune of half a million dollars—and it was time to be moving on.

He was now twenty-eight years old and he could afford to marry and move on to the solitude the Kershaws called peace. The land hunger was gnawing at his heart; he liked the cattle business and he had in him full measure the ancient primitive urge for free grass and free water. So he married a Juno who had walked to California beside a covered wagon in '49 and with her rode up into northeastern California and cast about for a spot where the Kershaw odyssey should end.

On a day in the year of 1853 he drove his three pack mules out of the timber on to a bald spot on the crest of what is now known as the Goose Nest range, and saw three thousand feet below him the land of his heart's desire.

"Lovely—and lonely," the girl beside him murmured, and she spurred her horse in beside him and slipped her soft hand into his, so rough and calloused. Thus they looked upon their heritage.

It was a wild elliptical valley into which he gazed; Kershaw estimated it should contain nearly one hundred thousand acres. It was, in reality, a vast mountain meadow. No trouble to winter cattle there. He could cut sufficient wild hay to insure bringing them out in the spring strong and fat. A large stream meandered down the approximate center of the valley.

After a long, searching, wistful contemplation of the scene below him Robin Kershaw said: "We'll call it Eden Valley."

The two youthful pioneers slid down through the talus and pine needles at last into the beginnings of Eden Valley—a canyon about a quarter of a mile wide and four miles long.

Kershaw rode his horse out into the brown whirling creek waters until they lapped his stirrups, then turned back and joined his wife on the high ground along the foot of the hills.

"A creek in the summer—and fall, but a good-sized river in the winter and spring, Lorry," he announced. "There'll be no dry years in this country, Lorry; and there'll always be a world of water for summer irrigation."

The partner of his brave dreams nodded, for she, too, was a child of the soil and could understand his enthusiasm. "The country's laid out like a frying pan, Robin. This narrow canyon is the handle and the big valley is the pan."

Keeping to the high ground at the base of the hills they journeyed down the Handle to the Pan, fording numerous lateral torrents that roared down the mountainside to the main stream below.

Debouching from the Handle into the Pan (for so they continued to allude to the peculiar disposition of the country) Kershaw discovered that the creek was now, indeed, a river. And as was the case in the Handle, so it was in the Pan. For fully a mile on the west bank of the stream the ground was inundated.

"God's ditch-tender in Eden Valley, Lorry," he exulted. "Once a year for perhaps a month. He gives free surface irrigation on a strip two miles wide and no man knows how long."

He left her and rode out into the sluggish wash to a point within a hundred yards of the main channel. "From a foot to six inches deep," he announced, when he rejoined her on the high ground. "What a grand soaking! And then a couple of inches of new rich silt from the high country back yonder is left behind to fertilize the grass when the waters recede to the channel!"

She smiled upon him, rejoicing with him in this discovery of unlimited free grass and water.

On a mesa about forty acres in area, and backed up against the western hills, they found the location for their future home. Perhaps a hundred stately pine trees grew upon this mesa, with lush green grass between.

"I can have a garden," Lorry murmured rapturously.

"And there's timber to our hand for our home and outbuildings," he added. "We'll build a grand big log house and well furnished. When this valley has been surveyed and thrown open to settlers we'll have a squatter's right to this site, on account we've been here first."

They camped that night in the pine grove. Side by side, on a foot-deep carpet of soft pine needles, they lay under the stars that night and talked and made brave plans for their future.

Truly, they were as Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden; there, beneath their heavy woolen blankets, content in each other's arms, they saw no vision of the serpent. They dreamed not of the hatred and envy of humankind that one day should make them, their children and their children's children fight to the death for this dear silent land; that one day the waves of a new civilization would engulf them; that one day they should be crowded!

The following morning they continued their journey down the valley. Half-way down, the land on each side of the creek rose to a slight angle toward the hills on each flank, thus gradually narrowing the area subject to annual overflow from the creek. The channel of the creek grew deeper, too; the man who would irrigate these lands in summer would have to erect a very expensive dam to raise the waters above the bank level and divert them out over his haylands. Unquestionably, the upper half of the valley was, by far, the most desirable from every point of view, and there rose in the heart of Robin Kershaw a fierce desire to own it. Yes, he must have not less than fifty thousand of those rich acres. He could support a cow to every three acres, probably less; that meant he could run, in the valley alone, not less than fifteen thousand head.

"I'll be the cattle king of Eden Valley," he told his wife suddenly.

Presently the valley commenced to pitch downward, the angle of pitch increasing gradually as they rode. The nativity of the soil and the quantity of grass decreased with the pitch; the valley commenced gradually to pinch until finally they found themselves riding through a gorge about two hundred feet wide, walled in by towering granite cliffs about a hundred and fifty feet high. The gorge suddenly debouched into a vast, semi-arid plain into which the surging torrent of Eden Valley creek poured, gradually flattening out in the inhospitable soil.

A Robin Kershaw turned in his saddle and looked back. "If a feller wanted an' there was some other good cunner yonder that wanted irrigation, he could easy put in a dam in this box canyon. Plenty o' bulidin' material right handy."

The buttress of forested mountains on the northern side of the valley had gradually decreased in height until at lower end of the valley they degenerated into a spur of grassy hills.

NEW LIGHT ON FIRST "WRITING"

Its Origin Now Carried Back to 2000 B. C.

Whether the alphabet was invented by the Semitic miners who were working in the turquoise mines of the Sinai peninsula, or whether the alphabet originated with the Phoenicians, scholars are not yet ready to decide, says Science Service, reported by the Kansas City Star. Prof. Roman Butin of the Catholic University of America says, however, that in any case the alphabet came into existence no later than 2000 B. C. Professor Butin spoke on the origin of the alphabet before a meeting of the Archeological Institute of America at Syracuse, N. Y.

Up to a few years ago the Moabite stone of the Ninth century B. C. was the oldest Phoenician writing known. Then alphabetic writings by the Phoenicians as old as the Thirteenth century before Christ were found at Byblos. The practical-minded Phoenicians were commonly credited with giving the world the alphabet.

The discovery that stone tablets from the Sinai peninsula bore crude alphabetic characters upset theories as to age and origin of the alphabet. Professor Butin, who examined the tablets in Cairo, and made a translation, still is studying their significance.

In these tablets, he said, the alphabet system is not yet standardized. The shorthand of alphabetic signs is shown in a transitional stage from its picture origin. A house, "Beth," might be drawn with one or two rooms, with or without a door, but it was still "Beth" and it stood alphabetically for B. A human head might be drawn in profile or full face, but it was recognized as a human head, and its value was R, the first letter in the word "Resh."

The names of the objects which the Sinai people used in their alphabet seem to be identical with those on which the Phoenician alphabet was founded, Professor Butin said. But the oldest Phoenician signs known already are so conventionalized that they seem to be evolved from earlier forms.

There is a strong temptation to say that the Phoenician alphabet, as it appears on the oldest monuments, is evolved from the script of the Sinai tablets, Professor Butin said, but this is not proved. The original form of the Phoenician alphabet still is to be found, and it may turn out to be older than the Sinai tablets which are dated at about 1900 or 2000 B. C.

PERSIAN ROSE

In the little churchyard at Boulogne, Suffolk, England, a rose tree is growing, reared from a seed that was planted originally on Omar Khayyam's grave at Naisapur, in Persia. Now it flowers over the grave of Edward Fitzgerald, the poet, who transformed the original Persian of the Rubaiyat into immortal English verse. The flower was planted there ten years after the poet's death, on October 7, 1893, by the Omar Khayyam club, after having been brought from Persia by William Simpson, "artist-traveler." The rose tree grows and blooms each spring unknown to the careless world.

Bulgaria Ranks Third for Men and Women Who Live More Than 100 Years

Recent investigations reveal that there are 153 persons in Bulgaria who are more than one hundred years old, according to a correspondent in the New York Times. This figure, in proportion to the total population, gives Bulgaria third place for the world record, Lithuania being first and Portugal second. Of these 153 persons, only four have lived their lives unmarried; 85 are men and 73 are women; among them are 143 Bulgarians, four Pomaks, three Turks, three Gypsies, two Jews, one Armenian, one Kutzovlach and one Rumanian.

Of the women, eleven have had five children, four had eight, eight have had nine, three had ten, one has had eleven, one has had twelve, four have had thirteen, one has had fourteen, one has had fifteen and two have had sixteen.

Of these men and women, thirty-seven were parents before they reached the age of sixty, but twenty-eight became parents between the ages of sixty and sixty-five, forty-one between the ages of sixty-five and seventy, twenty-one between seventy and seventy-five, nine between seventy-five and eighty, while two had children when over eighty.

"Longevity appears to be hereditary, for the parents and grandparents of these old people mostly lived longer than the average. Thirty-three of them are teetotalers, while 125 drink moderately, but only 48 smoke, a curious fact in a country which grows tobacco. They are all even-tempered, cheerful folk.

Sixty-nine of them have spent their lives as shepherds or shepherdesses, forty-eight have worked upon the land, eighteen were servants, three were blacksmiths, two dressmakers, two gardeners and one nondescript. Only fifteen spent their lives as housewives.

Managing Canadian Indians

The administration of all Canadian Indians is carried on by the department of Indian affairs at Ottawa. Every province is divided into agencies each of which includes several reserves. An Indian agent is made responsible for the welfare of the Indians residing in his agency. On reserves where agriculture is carried on, a farm instructor promotes agricultural work among the Indians. Each band of Indians also has a government of its own elected by the members of the band. The chief and councillors (or headmen) are elected every three years. Each band cannot have more than one chief and fifteen headmen. Two headmen are allowed for every two hundred Indians.

RABBIT HASHINGS

BY NOEL WALTON

ANOTHER STORY from real life: "Way back thar," Mr. R. and "Whit" had two crops of tobacco in the same field, and as a result passed much gay badinage. Mr. R. had planted in one corner of his patch some watermelon vines. But as the summer progressed the watermelons died, until only two big ones were left. They were big, fine ones tho, and Mr. R. looked forward every day to the time when they would be ripe.

Finally one Saturday night he thumped the melons and decided, since they were just right, to eat them the next morning. But when he went down to get them they were gone. He fretted and fumed and finally in high dudgeon went to hunt up "Whit" for he was certain that only "Whit" knew about them.

Just then Whit moseyed up the hillside.

"Hey Whit," he yelled in high dudgeon, "You derned old reprobate, I bet you got these melons. I been waitin' to eat 'em for a month. They was ripe too."

"Why boss," drawled Whit, "You don't suppose I'd steal green watermelons as you?"

And we note a renewed interest in the socials by one of the boys nearby. Better watch out Nan, or there'll be some new store help.

We agree with the Ed. very much, in his suggestion that the hatchet be buried. We were of that opinion too, some time ago, but couldn't convince everyone of the same. We are sorry that any one may have misconstrued the meanings of several quips we made, but at the same time we will appreciate any published inferences to us as long as the truth is approached as nearly as we have done. Personal feelings of our own have been as a rule, eliminated from our column, unless they were supported either by a strong consensus of public opinion or by a common horse sense belief and that they are right. The assertion that we have ridiculed any church society as an organization, or any of its principles is an absolute untruth as a survey of the past columns will indicate. So let's bury the hatchet.

BRIEF CASES

By Barefax

Another week has passed and with it passed St. Valentine's Day, a party here, a party there, a basket ball game, a romance, a quarrel and a reputation.

Wednesday was St. Valentine's Day. The "Perfessor" gladly condescended to open and read the contents of each and every valentine before passing it on to the receiver. This caused quite a few blushes from the gentle sex as horse laughs from the not-so-gentle sex. To be appropriate, although somewhat in arrears, we will give the 'low-down' on the sadly degenerated St. Valentine's Day.

Valentine

Valentine was a physician in Rome, who was beheaded in 296 because of his religion. It became the custom for lovers to send letters or valentines on his name-day back in the middle ages. It was also the custom for lovers to send letters to asking their consent in marriage or "proposing." We wonder what motive is behind this "keeping" of St. Valentine's Day in this day!

Walton! Burlington! Florence! Petersburg! New Haven! Hebron! Verona! We hope that you didn't read Saturday's (Feb. 17) paper. One reputation absolutely gone! What a life!

Statements that are supposed to be true:

Buster is a Boston Terrier, not a bulldog. Wonderful, eh? Sue is very sensitive about m... as was demonstrated Friday. Did she blush?

Perry (the "give me liberty or give me a woman" Perry) is nursing a pet grouch. Possibly indigestion, due to the recent change in diet!

Baby L..... got a calling down the other night. Was that nice R? Popular literature as seen at Hamilton:

"True Confessions."

"Do's and Don'ts of courtship."

"Letters" by D. R. and W. A. Hamilton is getting sentimental!

Bob is slowly being led astray! Aren't you ashamed?

Were you "buzzing" V....?

We understand now why they go home to "work!" We like that kind of work, too.

If we are still alive next week we will attempt again to ruin a perfectly good—

GOOD WILL 4-H CLUB MEET

The first meeting of the Good Will 4-H Club of Petersburg, was held Wednesday, Feb. 14th at 2 p. m. at the school house for reorganization of the club. Mr. Forkner was with us.

The following officers were elected: President, Edgar Snyder; Vice-President, Janet Walston; Secretary and Treasurer, Lola Antas; Publicity Committee, Janet Whiston. She in turn appointed Duncan Huey and Dorothy Bradburn as assistants; Sergeant-at-arms, Harold D. Deck.

We are looking forward for a successful meeting March 6 at 1:00 p. m. with Mr. Fish.

We are planning for a great time in our club work this year.

Janet Walston, Club Reporter.

CONFERENCE CONSIDERS

RURAL CHURCH PROBLEMS

The church's part in the improvement of rural life in Kentucky was the central theme of discussion at a conference of country pastors at the recent annual Farm and Home Convention at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington.

Following the conference, members of each denomination present selected a representative for a committee to form a Kentucky rural pastors conference board. Members of this committee and the denominations they represent are: Rev. L. B. Gatlin, Fayette county, Baptist; Rev. Angus M. Gordon, Shelbyville, Southern Presbyterian; W. L. Nofcier, Wilmore, Methodist; Rev. T. W. Rainey, Fayette county, Presbyterian; Dr. V. L. Moore, of Lexington, Southern Methodist and Rev. F. H. Price, of Annville, Reformed. Other denominations will be invited to select representatives for the board. Dr. W. D. Nicholls and Merton Oyer, of the College of Agriculture, were made delegates-at-large.

A resolution asked the College of Agriculture to sponsor a rural church survey of the state.

STATE SERVICE FOR FARMERS CONTINUES

The services of the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station to the farmers of the state are being continued so far as possible, with the added task of administering the various agricultural adjustment programs of the AAA. Dean Thomas P. Cooper announces.

County agent, home demonstration agent and 4-H club work and numerous other activities of extension service of the college are emphasizing, as always, the value of good practices and high quality. Scientists at the Experiment Station are continuing their studies and research for new facts of value to agriculture.

Through timely publications, newspapers, radio and letters, information is being distributed to men and women, boys and girls on thousands of farms in the state. Hundreds of letters are answered weekly, giving requested information on problems of farmers and farm homesteaders.

Stock raising, crop production, tobacco growing, orcharding, cooking, sewing, soil maintenance, control of animal and plant diseases, the fight against insect pests, fertilizer problems, pure seeds, marketing, op rotation, and numerous other matters of vital interest to the farmers of the state are given the attention of experts at the Experiment Station.

Diagnosing and treating diseases, problems of breeding, feeding and marketing of livestock bring hundreds of letters for information. Closely related to animal husbandry is the work of analyzing feeds, in order that farmers may know exactly what they are buying. This service alone saves farmers large sums every year.

Other departments look after such problems as the use of limestone, marl and fertilizers, the control of weeds, making studies and tests that require the services of experienced chemists and other experts with specialized knowledge.

All fertilizers sold in the state are analyzed at the Experiment Station, to insure their quality. In a special laboratory, tobacco seed is cleaned for farmers, thousands of samples of seed tested for purity and unknown seeds identified. A nursery inspection service sees that diseased trees and shrubbery are not sold.

Spray formulas and schedules are worked out in the departments of horticulture and entomology and studies made of insects and diseases that must be controlled by fruit growers.

The Experiment Station and College of Agriculture thus are a clearing house for the innumerable problems of agriculture.

COUNTY TOURNEY

TO GET UNDER WAY MARCH 1ST AT WALTON — HEBRON AND HAMILTON GIRLS WILL BE FIRST TEAMS TO COMPETE FOR HONORS.

Promptly at 7:15 p. m. Thursday March 1st, the annual county-wide (district) basketball tournament will get under way in the Walton high school gymnasium.

The opening game will find the Hebron and Hamilton girls' teams locking horns with Florence and Petersburg boys to follow an hour later. The night cap will be put on by the Verona and Hamilton boys' teams.

Friday afternoon hostilities will be resumed when the Walton and Florence girls play at 2 o'clock. Other games follow: Petersburg and New Haven girls at 3 o'clock; Burlington-Hebron girls, at 4 o'clock; Burlington-Walton boys 7:15; Hebron-New Haven boys will follow to end the doings for Friday evening.

Semi-finals will follow on Saturday afternoon, while Saturday evening will witness the championship games and awarding of trophies.

These trophies are said to be very handsome and have been donated by the following firms and individuals:

Tournament winner (boys)—donated by Collins & Vest Chevrolet, Inc.

Tournament winner (girls)—donated by Dixie State and Walton Equitable Banks.

Tournament runner-up (boys)—donated by Johnson's Restaurant.

Tournament runner-up (girls)—donated by Kroger Grocery & Baking Co.

Team sportsmanship (boys)—donated by Jones' Drug Store.

All-Tournament team (boys)—donated by Chambers & Grubbs, Funeral Directors.

All-Tournament team (girls)—donated by Tatman & Sons Grocers; Bert Schneider, Meats; and W. W. King.

These trophies are on display at the office of the Kentucky Central Electric Co., in Walton.

Admission prices for the tournament will be 40 cents for adults and 20 cents for children. Season tickets may be purchased for $1.50.

All games will be played on Central Standard (slow) time.

Arrangements are being made by Coach Beavly and his capable assistants to accommodate the contemplated large crowd in their customarily efficient manner.

While speculation is rife as to the probable winner of the tournament, yet it seems to a man up a tree that the winner is very doubtful, although the majority of critics sorta lean toward the Hebron girls and Walton boys. However, if one were to advance a prediction along these lines he no doubt would start a fine argument.

At any rate we shall see what we shall see.

Col. R. E. Kirtley, of East Bend, made this office a business call Tuesday afternoon and left an ad, which will be found in other columns of this issue. Young Kirtley is a son of Esq. B. C. Kirtley, of East Bend, who is well known as an auctioneer in these parts. Reuben has followed in his dad's footsteps and will ply his trade as an auctioneer in this and adjoining territories. He is a graduate of the Reppert School of Auctioneering, located in Indiana and is well qualified.

A representative of the Recorder has been circulating among our subscribers on a little collecting expedition for the past several weeks and has received the most courteous treatment for which we wish to take this means of extending sincere thanks. Drop in and let us thank you personally when in Burlington.

J. G. Smith, agent for the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company, of Bloomington, Ill., was a caller at this office last Friday. Mr. Smith was here on business pertaining to the company and was accompanied by Jack Kelly of Falmouth, district manager. Mr. Smith is agent for Boone county for this company.

B. H. Tanner and Earl Johnson from the Ft. Pleasant community called at the Recorder office while in town Wednesday morning.

KIRKPATRICK-WALTON

A marriage which has been anticipated for some time was consummated last Sunday evening at the local Baptist church by Rev. F. E. Walker when Miss Georgia Kirkpatrick and William Walton were united in the holy bonds of wedlock immediately following church services.

The bride is the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Kirkpatrick and has been employed in the merchandise establishment of her father here for several years and during which time she has made many local and valued friends. The groom is a son of the late Jack Walton and wife and was born and reared near and in Burlington. While a very young man he enlisted in the United States Marine Corps and spent seven years in that service. Since his honorable discharge from the marines he has been employed in various capacities in this locality.

Both of these young folks have the best wishes of a host of loyal friends in this and adjoining communities who join in wishing for them a long, happy and prosperous married life.

HOLLAND VISITOR

Burlington was honored by a visit from a native of Holland Tuesday afternoon when Mrs. Franken and her two small children from the famous Dutch country called for a short time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cropper.

Mrs. Franken and her children have been visiting for several days at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Mary V. Gaines, and is leaving soon for an extension of their tour to California.

Mrs. Franken is a daughter of Dr. James Gaines, formerly of this county and a more distant relative of a number of other Boone county citizens among whom are numbered the Cropper family here.

Miss Mary Bess Cropper visited the Franken family in Holland last summer while on an European tour.

VAS YOU DERE, SHARLIE?

We note in the icy issue of January 17, 1918, the following story, which was headed "A Cold Weather Flib" and which some folks may doubt:

"Jailer Charles Fowler recites the following cold weather experience: Last Saturday night he got ready to retire after having read the usual number of chapters in his Bible, but when he attempted to turn the lamp out he found there was nothing doing in that particular. He then attempted to extinguish the blaze by blowing it, and again nothing was doing. Upon investigation he discovered that the blaze was frozen solid, and the only way in which he could get rid of it was to break it off and cast it into the heater."

Mr. Fowler stated Tuesday that part of the story was left out in the issue of this date. He said he threw the wick out and an old hen ate it the next morning and laid hard boiled eggs for four days.

AUTOMOBILE THIEF

IS CAPTURED BY BLOCKING ROAD WITH STATE HIGHWAY TRUCK—WAS TURNED OVER TO KENTON COUNTY AUTHORITIES.

Early Tuesday evening Sheriff W. B. Cotton was notified by Kenton county police that a man was headed for Constance from Ft. Mitchell with a stolen car. Sheriff Cotton and Deputy Frank Walton started immediately for Constance, but upon arrival at Hebron found that the car already had passed thru there toward Idelwild.

Sheriff Cotton phoned Scotchorn's store in Idelwild and he made arrangements to block the road and arrest his progress. State Road Overseer Bolivar Shinkle placed his truck across the highway and within a few minutes the car arrived.

The driver, however, leaped from the car and started on a run down the creek with a posse in pursuit. He was caught and held until the arrival of the officers, who brought him to Burlington for examination.

He gave his name as Melvin Mack, aged 23, and said that he had relatives in Boone and was trying to reach their home, hoping to elude officers. He was held in Burlington until the arrival of Chief George Langley and Patrolman Nuxoll and Froelicher, who removed him to the Covington jail.

YOUNG UNDERTAKER RECEIVES LICENSE

F. Daniel Bullock, of Hebron, who has been conducting the funeral business of his father, the late W. A. Bullock, has recently passed the state board examination for Funeral Directors, according to the announcement of R. Lee Shannon, Shelbyville, Ky., Secretary of the state board.

Daniel completed his embalming course at the Cincinnati College of Embalming and was graduated from that institution on December 9th, 1933 after having finished his second year of College work at Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio, last June.

The late W. A. Bullock established the funeral business at Hebron in 1902 and conducted the business until the time of his death last June. His son Daniel will enter the thirty-second year of the continuance of the business in Boone county this year.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

TOBACCO CONTROL BOARD

The Boone County Tobacco Production Control Association will meet Thursday afternoon at Burlington to make plans for checking contracts of the members of the association.

The County Agent urges all growers to file their warehouse receipts for the pounds listed on their contracts for the years taken at the base.

The Control Board according to Administrative rulings must divide growers into two groups, those with Supporting Evidence, and those without Supporting Evidence. Those without Supporting Evidence will be the only ones that will be subjected to any allotment reductions if any are made either by the county or by Washington.

Warehouse receipts, a statement from the warehouse that so many pounds were sold by the growers is classified as Supporting Evidence. The County Agent's office will be glad to get Supporting Evidence if the growers will notify the County Agent by mail what warehouse the crop was sold, and in whose name the crop was sold. Supporting Evidence is needed only for the year or years taken as a base. Where 1933 is issued the marketing card is sufficient evidence.

All growers who have tobacco to be appraised are urged to notify their Community Control Board Committeeman.

4-H COUNCIL ANNOUNCE

CLUB AWARDS SATURDAY The Boone county 4-H and Utopia Council will meet at Burlington Saturday afternoon, March 3rd to check the 1933 4-H Community Club scores in achievement and work and to announce the winners of the Banks of Boone County trophies.

This will be the first meeting of the council in 1934. A new score card, grouping of community clubs and other important business will also be discussed.

ORCHARD SPECIALIST

TO VISIT BOONE COUNTY W. W. Magill, fruit specialist from the College of Agriculture will meet with Boone county fruit growers in two meetings on next Tuesday week, March 13th. The exact place and time of the meetings will be in next week's paper. These meetings have always been of considerable interest to all growers attending, bringing before them for discussions the latest outlook on the new crop year and latest developments in producing better quality market fruit. All who are interested in fruit problems are invited to attend.

EXAMINATION CORN-HOG

TABULATING CLERK An examination for the selection of one or more County Tabulating Clerks to assist in securing and checking information on Corn-Hog contracts will be held at the County Agent's office in Burlington on Saturday, March 10th at 9:30 a. m. The rate of pay for those selected in this work will be 50 cents per hour less 15 percent reduction paid Federal employees.

The tabulating clerks will work under instructions of the State Statistician and under the supervision of the County Agent. Only those who are accurate and rapid in mathematics need apply.

PRODUCTION CREDIT ASSOCIATION PLANS

LOANS FOR FARMERS

The Northern Kentucky Production Credit Association completed its plans for organization in a meeting held at Owenton on last Thursday. Headquarters are set up at Williamstown and the association will be in position for the receiving of loan applications as soon as applications forms are received through the Intermediate Credit Banks.

Loans from $50.00 to $5,000.00 will be made by the association to solvent farmers for the production of crops or livestock. The loans will be backed by chattel mortgages given by the borrower. Each borrower will purchase 5 percent of capital stock in the association for the amount he borrows on a plan similar to that of the Federal Land Bank.

Mr. A. Threlkeld of Grant county was elected president of the Association and Mr. Dean Richards of Gallatin county secretary. Mr. C. Liston Hemphill of Constance, R. was elected director from Boone county and also a member of the executive committee. All farmers interested in making applications for loans in Boone county should contact Mr. Hemphill through Hebron telephone exchange.

ANDERSON-COOK

Friends of Miss Mildred Anderson and George Cook, both of the Camp Ernst road, were greatly surprised last week to learn of their marriage, which took place in Lexington, on Saturday, February 17.

The young couple were united by the Rev. Wilson, secretary of the Kentucky State Christian Missionary Society.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Anderson, of near Burlington and formerly of Covington, a well and favorably known throughout this community. She formerly was assistant principal in Burlington high school, where she made a competent and popular instructor.

The groom is one of our foremost young farmers and a graduate of Burlington High School, where he made many lasting friends who join those of his bride in extending congratulations and best wishes.

Lloyd Dixon, of Amsdale, W. Va., was the week-end guest of Miss Dorothy Nell Furnish.

Heaviest Snow For Many Years Falls During Week End

Snowfall Is Followed By Extremely Cold Weather--Temperature Drops To Lowest Mark Since Winter of 1917-18 Files Show

The heaviest snow that has fallen in this county for many years started Saturday afternoon and continued thru Sunday. The snowfall was followed by extremely cold weather on Monday and by Tuesday morning the mercury had dropped to a low mark that has not been approached since the famous cold winter of 1917-18.

This assertion may bring up an argument, as we have noted in some publications that it was the coldest weather since 1898. However, we believe we have the facts to prove that January 12, 1918, was colder than Feb. 27 of this year and in fact one of the coldest days on record. The snow was much deeper in 1918 and the wind blew a gale that made actual existence a gamble.

Tuesday morning we had weather reports that had the mercury standing at various points from 3 degrees below zero to 30 below. The thermometer in front of the Peoples Deposit Bank here always registers somewhat higher on cold days than most any other and it was accounted for at 3 below, while Calvin Cress, who lives in the frigid lower regions of town reported 24 below. Edward Easton from down on old Woolper reported 24 below, while one thermometer at Limaburg was reported to have been read at 30 below.

Below we quote a story from the January 17 issue of the Recorder in the historic 1918 winter. In addition, and in order to double check, we had Jesse Kirkpatrick to bring forth his old reliable diary, which states that the mercury failed to rise above zero for a week. The 1918 story may chill your bones to read it, but here it is:

About noon last Friday snow began falling and by two o'clock it was coming down thick and fast. At dark it was several inches deep, the wind had begun to blow a gale and the mercury was on the toboggan. The night that followed was about as rough as any ever experienced in this part of the country, and by daylight Saturday morning the temperature had receded about 40 degrees, in some parts of the county thermometers registering as low as 24 below zero, while in Burlington 18 below was about the lowest. To keep comfortable in the house was almost impossible and the consumption of fuel was given the limit. The telephone service was badly disabled, while the wind during the night had made some of the roads in the county impassable by piling up immense snow drifts that blocked all kinds of traffic. Stock was suffering and the owners could not give the animals the necessary attention because they could not stay out in the intense cold very long at a time. The wind Friday night came from a little west of south and did not cease to blow until Sunday morning by which time the thermometer was registering at zero, the temperature having begun to ascend about dark the night before. This was a very great relief, but the cold had entered the houses and it was with difficulty that a room could be kept anything like comfortable any time during Sunday.

Owen Ross, who resides in the Hopeful neighborhood, got uneasy about his dairy cows last Saturday thinking they were about to freeze. He said they stood with all four feet as close together as they could get them, while long, heavy icicles hung from their mouths, the animals shivered dreadfully. Mr. Ross expected to visit his barn often Saturday night to look after the comfort of his cattle.

Twenty-four below zero was reported from Bullittsville neighborhood Saturday morning. At some points in the county thermometers were reported registering 30 below zero, but they were probably exaggerating conditions somewhat.

The weather is something fierce in this part of the country when the mercury is 15 below zero and a stiff breeze is blowing, don't care if that breeze does come from a little west of south as was the case last Saturday.

A person of ordinary weight could walk on top of many of the snow drifts, the snow seeming to be of unusual weight and packing hard. Had the wind laid Saturday night the egg would have frozen. "Leonard Kite, of Waterloo, was among the first to find out that the weather was extremely cold, his thermometer going as low as 24 below Friday night."

"W. L. Kirkpatrick froze one of his ears going from his store to his residence last Saturday, a distance of probably 800 yards. He had the ear covered and frequently put his hand over it, but it was no use. He applied a handful of snow to the ear and the frost was drawn out and he has not felt any inconvenience from his experience so far."

Many people could not get fire enough in their grates or stoves last Saturday to make their rooms comfortable. In some instances the temperature could not be raised above 45 degrees.

"Last Friday night was the longest night Courtney Kelly, of Locust Grove neighborhood, ever experienced. He retired at his usual hour but soon discovered it was too cold to remain in bed, when he hustled back to the sitting room, where he sat up the remainder of the night in company with a red-hot stove."

A great many flowers that had been cared for successfully thru the previous cold spells were killed last Friday and Saturday nights, some of them being killed in rooms where there had not been the slightest freeze this winter. "So far only one instance has been reported where water was frozen in a tea kettle that was sitting on a stove in which there was a fire."

The blizzard that struck this part of the country last Friday night was the worst ever. The wind sent the cold into everything that was possible for the cold to penetrate and livestock that was exposed to it suffered greatly. The mercury in some localities was reported as low as 20 below zero. The rural mail carriers out from Burlington were unable to make their rounds Saturday on account of the snow being badly drifted at many points in the roads.

The blizzard that came Friday night put out of business those Burlington teams that were hauling coal from Constance for replenishing local bins.

LOCAL BASKETEERS

WIN TWO GAMES FROM CRESCENT SPRINGS FRIDAY NIGHT—WAS FITTING CLIMAX TO HIGH SCHOOL CAREERS OF FOUR OF CONTENDANTS.

In two games that marked the swan song of several high school athletes, both boys and girls, the Tomcats and Kittens emerged with two victories as a fitting climax to their high school careers as far as home appearance is concerned.

The local teams handed two defeats to the Crescent Springs fives that were quite impressive, at least so much so that the issue never was in doubt from the opening whistle to the bark of the gun. The boys who finished their high school careers Friday night were Capt. Dudley Rouse and William Cook, while the senior girls were Ethelyn and Lucille Ryle. Misses Anna Lee and Elizabeth Burton also played their last games with the locals, as they will play with Hebron next year, having lately moved to that community. The former has been the leading scorer for the Kittens this year and will be missed from the Kitten ranks.

Both teams are polishing their plays for the tourney this week at Walton.

FORTY YEARS AGO

BURLINGTON

The candidates have one more month in which to hustle.

The mercury stood at eight degrees above zero Saturday morning.

The farmers have not done much preparing on their 1894 crop.

The groundhog is still entitled to the credit of being a pretty correct weather prophet.

The ground was in excellent condition to receive the snow which commenced falling Sunday morning.

O. N. Grant's store in Bellevue, came near being destroyed by fire one day last week. He was at dinner when the fire was discovered. Its origin can not be accounted for. Damage small.

J. Frank Grant, S. W. Tolin and J. M. Lassing have, recently qualified for Notaries Public of this county.

Walter Crigler was in town one day last week and purchased all the water buckets he could find, preparatory to embarking in the molasses business.

If Walton succeeds in landing a canning factory she will find that it will be a great advantage to that part of the country, and will be followed by other enterprises, equally as beneficial to the community.

W. B. Watts, who claims to have associated with Daniel Boone and other pioneers, was in this office one day last week. He says he is old, cold, dry and healthy, never having held a position of public trust nor asked for one. Having sized up the Colonel's aspiration it is believed he thinks he could fill the office of Constable with honor to himself and credit to those whom he associated in childhood.

PERSONAL MENTION

Miss Katie Smith will begin teaching a school here next Monday.

Jerry Moore of the Bullittsville neighborhood, was in town, Friday.

A. M. Hoard and W. M. Underhill of Beaver, were in town yesterday.

Rev. Merriman occupied the pulpit in the M. E. church here last Sunday.

Miss Olgie Kirkpatrick was visiting her sister at Erlanger, several days last week.

Mr. Dudley Rouse was in the city one day last week laying in his spring stock of goods.

D. Beall was home over Sunday from Richmond distillery in Trimble county. He is pleased with his present location.

J. J. Walton and wife returned last Friday from their bridal tour in which they visited some of the principal cities in the South.

John G. Gaines was in town last Saturday. He does not come to town very often.

H. Clay White, of Williamstown, was here yesterday, and we understand that he purchased John William Gaines' house and lot and will soon become a citizen of this town.

GUNPOWDER

Our friend Willie talks of taking a trip to Shelby county.

Any one wishing to buy a Thirring hog can find one by calling on Martin Hull.

It is hard to tell which wears the broadest smile, Butch Vaughn or H. L. Tanner, as they both have bran new babies at their house.

LOCUST GROVE

Jim Will Ryle delivered 4600 lbs. of tobacco to J. J. Huey & Co., at 6 cents all around. Don Williamson sold his crop to the same firm at 5 1/2 cents.

Ezekiel Rice will move on his farm, known as the Wesley Rice farm, which he inherited from his father's estate.

Geo. Hammond rented Mrs. Nora Satchwell's farm and will be with her this year.

Prof. Rice of Gallatin county, is teaching the school in Beach Grove district.

PETERSBURG

Mrs. Charles Conroy, of Aurora, was visiting relatives here this week.

Mrs. Jas. Loder returned home last Thursday, from a pleasant visit with relatives in Aurora.

Mrs. Mary Wingate is visiting her daughter in Cincinnati.

Charles McWethy is visiting in Cincinnati.

J. B. Berkshire, of Burlington, was in town Monday night.

The distillery is going to mash 1500 bushels per day this week.

James Tolin was in town Saturday.

CLUB BOYS SELL TOBACCO

Fifty-one Allen county 4-H club members sold 28,350 pounds of one-sucker tobacco grown on 25 acres, at an average of $6.24 per hundred. They also received $53 in prizes. Merrill Sarver, a club boy, grew 2,650 pounds on one acre that sold for $202. Average yields were 1,132 pounds per acre, and average receipts $70.

Washington county poultry raisers had 500 birds accredited and pullorum tested during January, by P. L. Slaton, project leader.

CHECK ON PUBLIC WORKS ARRANGED

A detail of special inspectors has been appointed by the Public Works Administration to supervise the employment policy of the public works program and non-federal construction projects being built by States or political units with money from the Public Works Administration, to prevent political favoritism, payroll padding or other irregularities, according to an announcement that has been forwarded to Edward F. Seiler, State Reemployment Director, National Reemployment Service. The National Reemployment Service has been designated as the labor agency for such projects.

Inspectors employed and paid by the Public Works Administration will be assigned to each public works job from the time it gets under way until it is finished. Their duties are to see that workmen are hired according to regulations.

If favoritism is detected, the inspectors will report the name of the men given preference and the amount paid to each. Bond contracts and grant agreements give representatives of the Public Works Administration the right to inspect all payrolls and other records. In case any irregularities have been detected in handling payrolls or hiring men, the Public Works Administration will hold out the necessary amount from the allotment.

When inspectors are unable to detect evidence of favoritism, but suspect that favoritism is being used, secret service operatives will be assigned to the investigation.

Contractors who hire men irregularly will be met with the refusal to pay the wages of such workers, according to Mr. Seiler whose Reemployment offices in the state will work in close cooperation with the special corps of inspectors who have been assigned.

Residents of any locality who suspect that there has been favoritism or any other irregularities on any public works project should write to Administrator Ickes in Washington or to the National Reemployment Service headquarters.

STREAMLINES LATEST IN WOMEN'S DRESSES

The 1934 spring models in women's dresses have streamlines and wind-blown effects, says Miss Iris S. Davenport, extension specialist in clothing for the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

A gust of wind has struck Paris and clothes are blown backward or forward, according to the time of day, forward for day and backward for evening.

Dresses are built with smooth streamline bodies. Shoulders are not emphasized. The slogan is "conceal shoulders and reveal curves." Raglan, lagoon and dolman sleeves re-appear. In many dresses the waistline is dropped to the hips, though the conservative woman keeps hers at the normal waistline for some time.

Necklines are more open and lower. Jabots are seen everywhere, and what they can do for dresses is amazing! Ruchings and high collars in the back that jut out in front as though held by stiff breeze blowing from the back are quite smart. Neckwear is fluffy or tailored according to the occasion; some cover the whole front of dress and tie in back, and some are square cut front and back.

Skirts are more narrow and any fullness in the skirt appears in front. Sports and tailored skirts are often unbuttoned or slit near the hem for ease in walking, because they are so narrow. The length of dress depends on the occasion. Sports skirts are a trifle shorter and those for street wear are about the same as last season, 11 to 12 inches from the floor.

Suits of either mannishly tailored or soft, feminine dressmaker type are being shown. A suit and several blouses give a wardrobe that will fit many occasions. Jacket costumes for spring show contrasting blouses and capes.

The smartest costume just now is a navy or black one with white trimmings. Mexico's influence is being felt, and so the colors will be clear, fresh and frank to replace the grayed and duller ones that led the winter mode. The new prints are multi-colored, neat, small conventional ones for sports and street wear, moderate sized floral ones for afternoon, and very large ones for evening.

EAT MORE VEGETABLES

Taught by home demonstration work to eat more fresh vegetables members of a homemakers' club in Bell county arranged with a mine commissary to order stated amounts of vegetables. The women see that the entire supply is purchased, through cooperation of homemakers and 4-H club members. As a result, balanced meals are being served, to the improvement of the health of both adults and children.

RALPH G. EDWARDS DONATES 50 MEDICAL VOLUMES TO UNIVERSITY

A gift of more than 50 rare medical volumes, mainly on lung and skin diseases, has been donated to the University of Kentucky library by Ralph G. Edwards, Walton, a senior student in the University of Kentucky. The books were formerly the property of his father, Dr. R. A. Edwards.

The publication dates of the volumes range from 1820 to 1840, and the collection will be of importance in filling a gap in the University's medical library during this period. At the present time the medical library contains approximately 2,500 volumes.

Included in the gift is a volume by Dr. J. G. Norwood, entitled "The Family Medical Library" and published by J. A. and U. P. James, Cincinnati. Doctor Norwood was the father of Chas. J. Norwood, for many years dean of the College of Mines, University of Kentucky, and state geologist.

One of the first books on the use of hypodermics, entitled "Manual of Hypodermic Medication," was published in 1869 under the authorship of Dr. Roberts Bartholow, professor in the Medical College of Ohio, and is in the collection donated by Mr. Edwards. Another valuable volume, published in 1836, is "Human Physiology" by Dr. Robley Dunglison, who was a professor at the Universities of Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland. The publication, which is copiously illustrated with steel engravings, is dedicated to James Madison, ex-president of the United States.

The library of the University of Kentucky, in keeping with its policy of providing fireproof facilities for the preservation of all Kentucky documents, has inaugurated efforts to secure and keep complete, files of all Kentucky newspapers.

THE GARDEN

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

HOTBEDS AND COLDFRAMES

Because so great a part of the satisfactory behavior of a garden depends on the crops that are raised from "slips" and plants raised beforehand, hotbeds and coldframes can be made valuable accessories to satisfactory gardens. While it is true that almost any ordinary variety of cabbage plants, for example, can be procured from growers whose business it is to produce such plants, it is true, however, that gardeners whose land is infested with the "yellows" disease have difficulty in getting plants of varieties that are resistant. This point is really more important than it may seem, perhaps, for every year more and more gardeners complain of their inability to raise cabbage, because of the spread of this trouble. Equipped with a hotbed, a gardener may grow plants of the resistant varieties.

Another point favoring the home production of the plants a gardener uses is that by growing his own plants he can assure himself that they will be free of disease. Such diseases as clubroot and black rot of cabbage are often introduced into gardens through purchased plants.

Tomatoes present difficulties much similar to those met in the case of cabbage. To begin with, there is the problem of the wilt disease. In old gardens, especially, where proper rotation has not been observed, tomato wilt creeps in and multiplies sometimes to such an extent that no tomatoes can be grown. In such gardens, the only recourse is to use wilt-resistant varieties, and though these can be furnished by plantgrowers, it is a lamentable fact that mis-naming is frequently done, to the sorrow of the gardener who finds out much too late that his "wilt-resistant" plants were in fact ordinary sorts. A gardener who grows his own plants can make certain of having truly wilt-resistant plants. Another disappointment purchasing of tomato plants suffer is that of not getting even the ordinary varieties they order, or that their purchase consists of a mixture of varieties. In either case, the tomatoes cannot perform according to plan.

Still speaking of tomato plants, and peppers and eggplants as well, every gardener knows that unless such "slips" have not been grown without interruption as to water and as to temperature, their behavior is likely to be disappointing. Open-field grown plants sometimes come to us so gnarled and woody from exposure to weather too cool or to lack of moisture, that they "grow out" slowly and in some cases never bear satisfactory crops.

Hotbeds and coldframes accordingly have many uses, even in ordinary home gardens, and investment in such equipment can be made to return handsome returns. It is not feasible here to launch into a complete discussion of the making and the maintenance of frames for the gardener nor is it necessary, because bulletins and circulars may be had by requesting them of county farm or home agents or from the Kentucky Experiment Station at Lexington. Such publications are Extension Circular 120 dealing with manure hotbeds and with coldframes, and a leaflet entitled "Fermenting Cornstalks as a Substitute for manure in Hotbeds."

HEALTH COURSE FOR WOMEN

A five-day course in homemaking and health was given at the Pikeville high school, through the cooperation of Mrs. B. W. Fortenberry, home demonstration agent, and Prof. T. W. Oliver, school superintendent. Improved methods of cooking, child care, diet, homemaking, refinishing furniture, etc., were discussed.

CHEESE MAKING POPULAR

The Union county dairy development creating interest in cheese making program includes creating interest in making and consumption. Women meet in groups at homes to study and its place in the diet. As a result cheese is being used in many homes to the benefit of the dairy industry.

SEEK INFORMATION FROM ALL FARMERS

All farmers raising two litters or more of hogs or growing 10 acres or more of corn will be asked to furnish the Agricultural Adjustment Administration with information about their production in the past two years, it is announced from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

This information will be asked of all farmers whether they sign a reduction contract or not. Before the corn-hog adjustment program can be completed and payments made to cooperating farmers, the county allotment committee must obtain a work sheet of every farm producing hogs or corn.

Information to be obtained includes the production of corn in 1932 and 1933, the hog production and sale during the two-year base period, and a report of the utilization of the corn crop during that period.

It is important, therefore, says the statement, that every farmer producing corn or hogs attend the educational meetings in his community. Work sheets will be explained and distributed at these meetings.

King Albert of Belgium, Killed by Fall While Mountain Climbing, Succeeded by Leopold—Three Great Powers Protect Austria.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONE of the best and most beloved of the few remaining kings, Albert I of Belgium, met a tragic death while practicing for his favorite sport, mountain climbing. He was attempting, alone, to scale a 90-foot pinnacle near Namur and fell, being probably instantly killed. Hours later his body was found and carried to Brussels. Queen Elizabeth was ill and was not told of the king's death for some hours. The Belgian nation was plunged in genuine mourning, and all the world sympathized, for Albert had won high esteem by his heroism during the World war and his just government of his people.

Albert is succeeded by Crown Prince Leopold, duke of Brabant, his eldest son. Leopold is thirty-two years old and was married in 1926 to Princess Astrid of Sweden. They have a daughter and a son. The new ruler was probably one of the youngest soldiers in the World war, enlisting as a private when he was thirteen years old. He was treated as an ordinary soldier, seeing active service in the trenches, and was a sergeant when the armistice was signed.

The dead king's funeral was of course a state affair. The procession from the Brussels palace to the cathedral of St. Gudule was led by mounted gendarmes who were followed by British, Italian and French troops. They carried the Belgian troops with crepe-draped flags. Albert's personal colors were carried, just ahead of the gun carriage that bore the casket, and his favorite charger followed, the saddle empty and field boots reversed in the stirrups. Next walked Crown Prince Leopold, his brother, Charles, and their brother-in-law, Crown Prince Umberto of Italy, the latter carefully guarded by police because of the attempt to assassinate him in Brussels in 1929.

In the throng of notable persons in the processions were representatives of all nations. Ambassador Morris was there for the United States; President Lebrun and Premier Doumergue headed the large French delegation; from England were the prince of Wales, Field Marshal Lord Allenby and Admiral Sir Roger Keyes; Germany was represented by Dr. Friedrich von Koller, and Poland by Ignatz Paderewski.

Next day Leopold was crowned, with Astrid on the throne beside him. The parliamentary reply to the new ruler's speech from the throne thanked the new queen for having given birth to two children, insuring the permanence of the dynasty.

King Albert was the third of his line. He was born in 1875 and ascended the throne in 1909. Throughout the war he was one of the most active members of the Belgian army, continually at the front to help his troops and often in imminent danger of death. After the armistice he got the task of reconstruction well under way and then, with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leopold, took journeys to the United States, England, France, Spain, Brazil and other countries to study trade conditions and find new outlets for Belgian products.

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN is moving from capital to capital in Europe on the rather hopeless mission of reviving the disarmament negotiations. In Paris he was told by the seven big men of the French cabinet that France was unwilling to reduce her military power while the Nazi menace continues, and the French government had already coldly refused to discuss the matter with Hitler.

Anthony Eden

Discouraged but persistent, Captain Eden went on to Berlin and Rome for further conversations based on the British plan for reduction of armaments.

FOR the time being the danger of a European war arising from the Austrian Socialist rebellion is over. Great Britain, France and Italy have united to safeguard Austria's independence, and while that holds no other nation dare attack. Long conversations were held in Paris by British Ambassador Lord Tyrrell, Premier Doumergue, Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, and representatives of Italy, and the outcome was this statement to the world:

"The Austrian government has inquired of the governments of France, Great Britain and Italy as to their attitude with regard to a dossier which it prepared with a view of establishing German interference in the internal affairs of Austria and communicated to them. The conversations which have taken place between the three governments on this subject have shown they take a common view as to the necessity of maintaining Austria's independence and integrity in accordance with the relevant treaties."

This pronouncement was proposed by Premier Mussolini, who seeks to keep Austria intact as a buffer state between Nazism and Fascism. It is, of course, directed to Hitler, who hopes that the government of Chancellor Dollfuss may be overthrown, if not by force, then in elections.

TREASURY reports reveal that all sources of internal revenue showed large increases during the first seven months of the present fiscal year as compared with the same period of 1933, with the exception of corporate income taxes.

Total receipts for the seven months' period ended January 31 amounted to $1,397,950,474, a gain of $568,708,061 as compared with the year before. For the seven months the government's collection of taxes on distilled spirits, wines, and beers amounted to $120,547,399, as compared with $4,379,586 in the same 1932 period.

SENTIMENT in favor of the immediate payment of the veterans' bonus is so strong among the Democrats in the house that the promise of a veto by the President did not deter 145 representatives from signing a petition to take the Patman bill from the committee and bring it up for a vote on March 12.

Speaker Rainey had been to the White House and returned with this message: "I am authorized by Wright Patman to the President to say that this is not the time to pay the bonus and that he cannot approve any legislation to that effect."

But the members went right on signing. Mr. Rainey was visibly disturbed, but said, in reply to inquiries, "We're going to let the house do just as it pleases."

Wright Patman of Texas, Democrat, author of the bill, told the house the measure would provide the administration with the mechanism for carrying out the inflationary program it already has embraced, and that it would save the government billions of dollars in interest. It seemed most likely that the bill would be passed by the house, and it may also get through the senate, for the sentiment for it has been steadily growing in that body.

ONLY seven members of the house voted in the negative when the $258,000,000 tax revision bill came up for passage. It is expected the senate will make many alterations in the measure for the purpose of further fortifying the statutes against evasion.

Of principal interest to the average taxpayer is the bill's readjustment of the income tax rate structure to provide a new normal rate of 4 per cent and surtaxes starting at 4 per cent on net income above $4,000 and ranging in graduated brackets to 59 per cent on incomes of $1,000,000 or more. The new tax rates, however, will not be effective on 1933 incomes.

Generally the bill is designed to prevent such tax evasion methods as were disclosed during the recent investigations of the senate banking and currency committee into stock market practices.

JUSTICE finally has caught up with Roger Touhy of Chicago and two members of his notorious gang. Their second trial for the kidnapping of John Factor ended in a verdict of guilty, the jury fixing the penalty at 99 years in the penitentiary.

One Charles W. Mayo of Alabama, with an accomplice, devised a fantastic plot for the kidnapping of E. F. Adler, banker and publisher of Davenport, Iowa, from a Chicago hotel. Both were caught and confessed, and then Mayo hanged himself in his cell. The "snatching" game appears to be about played out.

FRANCE was stirred by a mystery murder that is connected with the $300,000 Stavisky scandal. Albert Prince, counselor of the Court of Appeals and the key witness in the Stavisky case, was lured from Paris and slain and his body was tied to a railroad track near Dijon and mangled by a train.

In the same connection, the Paris police announced they had discovered evidence that Stavisky was an international spy as well as a swindler; that he was aided by a number of women, and probably had sold valuable information to the German government.

ACCORDING to the farm administration, 400,000 farmers had signed contracts to reduce their production of hogs and corn this year. Most of these contracts were executed by Middle West farmers. In other states the campaign is just getting well started. Iowa leads with a total of 150,000 contracts, representing more than 80 per cent of corn and hog producers in that state. Figures for other states are: Illinois, 47,000; Missouri, 42,000; Nebraska, 22,000; Kansas, 19,000; Minnesota, 50,000; Indiana, 30,000; Ohio, 25,000; Wisconsin, 15,000; and South Dakota, 13,000.

OFFICIALS of St. Paul and Minneapolis were considerably angered by a statement made by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings in which he said the Twin cities were "breeding grounds of crime." Mayor Mahoney of St. Paul telegraphed to Mr. Cummings demanding that he amplify his charges, but the attorney general's only reply was to say that he meant what he said. Thereupon the mayor gave the Ramsey county attorney a list of twelve persons, including Mr. Cummings, whom he wished asked to appear before the grand jury, which is now in session. It was said legal complications probably would prevent the subpoenaing of the attorney general and other national officials.

AS THE fighting planes of the American army, with their guns removed, began carrying the air mail over routes formerly covered by private air line companies, the senate committee investigating air mail contracts resumed its inquiry.

The main witness was Walter F. Brown, postmaster general under President Hoover, who has been accused by his successor of collusion and favoritism in the letting of the contract.

Mr. Brown has denied the charges in a long statement and in appearing before the committee he waived the immunity which generally shields a congressional witness from subsequent prosecution.

At the hearing Mr. Brown again denied the accusations in detail, but made admissions that were unfavorable to the defense.

Colonel Lindbergh, more or less involved in the air mail affair, gave to the senate investigators a statement of his aviation profits, as follows:

1. From sale of warrants to purchase stock in the Pan-America Airways, $150,884.80.
2. Salary from Pan-America, $10,000 a year.
3. Salaries of $7,194.45 in 1931 and $9,000 in 1932 and 1933 from Transcontinental and Western Air.
4. From Transcontinental Air Transport (predecessor to Transcontinental and Western Air), $250,000 in cash, reinvested in that company's stock and later sold at a $195,633.75 profit.
5. A $10,000 a year salary as technical adviser to the Pennsylvania railroad for three years and a $1 a year salary since 1931.

Losses: $554.75 from investments in other aviation companies prior to 1930.

GEN. AUGUSTO SANDINO, for years the leader of rebels in Nicaragua until a year ago when he made peace with President Sacasa, was murdered by members of the national guard at Managua. His brother, and two of his aides also were killed. The crime was denounced by Sacasa and an investigation was ordered, for the government had guaranteed the lives of Sandino and his followers while in the capital.

EVEN in a republic the people like to read about the doings of royalty, so there has been much interest in the romance of Prince Sigvard, twenty-six-year-old son of Crown Prince Gustav Adolf of Sweden. Sigvard fell in love with Erika Patzek, a German film actress who is little known and comes from a middle class family. The prince was determined to marry Erika but his grandfather, King Gustav, refused his consent and told Sigvard he would be disinherited if he persisted in his plan. Nevertheless the young man, unable to get the necessary papers in Berlin, went to London with Erika and it was reported the wedding would take place there on March 8.

The prince is well aware that if he marries the German girl he will forfeit his royal rights and thenceforth will be just "Mr. Bernadotte," but he apparently is ready to give up everything for love. In 1932 his cousin, Prince Lennert, married the daughter of a Stockholm industrialist and is now known as Mr. Lennert Bernadotte.

IF JAPAN and Russia do not get into a war, it will be the fault of neither. The latest development in their growing hostility is a row over fishing rights in the north Pacific. The Japanese government is enraged because Moscow has doubled the ruble rate of exchange with the yen and has rejected Japanese bids on the Kamchatka fishing grounds based on the old rate. This, the Tokyo foreign office says, is a flagrant violation of a solemn agreement between Baron Shide, a former foreign minister, and Alexander Troyanovsky, former Soviet ambassador to Japan.

PROPER BUILDING OF CHECK DAMS WHERE NEEDED

To get the best results from check dams in gullies, tops of dams should be low enough in the middle and high enough at the ends to carry the runoff water after heavy rains without overflowing gully banks or washing soil around ends of dams, say engineers of the United States Department of Agriculture.

If dams are too high, the carrying capacities of gullies are reduced and water overflows their banks and washes around the ends of the dams, and can form new gullies down the slopes parallel to the old ones. Where dams are watertight the ends should extend far enough into the gully banks to prevent water seeping around the dams and washing away the sides of gullies.

Foundations of dams should extend far enough below the bottoms of the gullies so that hydraulic pressure will not force the water under the dams, to undermine and destroy them. The floors of gullies should be paved at the lower sides of the dams for sufficient length and width to prevent any erosion or undermining of the dams by water dropping over the crests.

Dams are built in gullies to cause their filling with sediment carried by runoff water and to check soil erosion. When gullies in cultivated fields are filled, farmers save much time and labor in cultivating and harvesting crops. Filled gullies in pasture lands eliminate danger of accidents to grazing animals.

Temporary dams usually are made of materials found on farms, such as stakes, brush, straw, logs and loose rock. Woven wire is also used. Most temporary dams are porous when first built, but the spaces gradually fill with trash and soil brought down by the water. Permanent dams are built of earth, masonry and concrete. The bureau of agricultural engineering at Washington can supply suggestions for constructing dams in gullies.

Large American Bridge

What is said to be the seventh largest bridge in the world spans Mount Hope bay, between Bristol and Providence, R. I. The bridge, which was completed two years ago at a cost of more than $4,000,000, replaces a ferry which had been in operation nearly 70 years. It is a suspension bridge, being of the same design as the famous Brooklyn bridge.

Mysterious Cosmic Ray Still in Controversy

At Atlantic City recently Dr. Robert A. Millikan, of the California Institute of Technology and Dr. Arthur H. Compton, of the University of Chicago, two of the country's outstanding "authorities" on cosmic rays, debated on the subject for about three hours and still cosmic rays are as much of a mystery as they ever were.

Doctor Millikan argues that cosmic rays are photons or "bullets" of light. Doctor Compton says they are electrons, highly charged particles of electricity. Each backs up his theories with photographs, charts and detailed arguments. But the debate was a draw; there was no decision, in fact. So we are left to make our own choice or decision as to what these mysterious rays are until some scientist proves definitely just what they are and where they come from. —Pathfinder Magazine.

Whose Fault?

When Little Girls Show Temper

A quarrelsome child is a sick child, mother! A bad bowel condition means bad behavior. And it doesn't help matters to give bilious boys and girls some powerful cathartic that upsets them for days. When you see a coated tongue, dull or yellowed eyes, or other signs of sluggishness, there's always a way to cleanse and sweeten that little system—without violence; next day you have a happy, contented child. This common-sense treatment is explained on the right:

Good health and good behavior go hand in hand. With inner health, come smiling faces and sunny dispositions. And it's really so simple a matter to keep children's bowels regular. The only "medicine" most youngsters ever need to promote thorough bowel action is pure California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fine, fruity laxative never weakens them, or takes away their appetite. But get real California Syrup of Figs; you can get it anywhere; it isn't expensive.

CORA ESTELLA UNDERHILL

Cora Estella Underhill, the daughter of Jephthah P. and Missouri Ann Tanner, born October 24, 1885, on the Burlington and Union road in the old homestead built by her parents. She spent her younger life in this home, married Winfield Scott Underhill in 1885. To this union were born three sons, Elmer, Lloyd and Hobart. Moving to Walton in 1902 and to Covington in 1905 where she passed away, having been sick for nearly nine weeks at her home 1616 Woodburn avenue.

Mrs. Underhill, passed away on the same day, the same month and only a few minutes difference in time as did her dear father in 1916. She had the constant attention of Miss Edna Houston, her nurse and Dr. Schwertman.

The Daylight Chapter O. E. S. and Jefferson Council D. of A. held impressive services at the home. The funeral was conducted by the Rev. H. C. Runyan and undertaker J. L. Hamilton of Verona. She was laid to rest in the Odd Fellows Cemetery, Burlington, on Friday, February 9th, beside her brother, Kirby, who passed away on August 19, 1932.

Mrs. Underhill leaves her mother, three sons and eight grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Dear Sir:

Having heard that some of your new customers hesitate to use Farm Bureau kerosene in their incubators, I am writing this to say that I have used it exclusively for the last two years in all my incubators and brooders. I have hatched approximately five thousand chicks each year and hope to do about the same this year.

Before the Farm Bureau Oil Co. started operations I used kerosene from at least five of the leading oil companies and found none superior to Farm Bureau kerosene.

Therefore, as I am a farmer as well as a Rhode Island Red breeder and hatcheryman, I see no reason for buying petroleum products from an oil corporation so long as a farmer-owned company is in the field.

Respectfully yours,
GRANT MADDOX.

KITE FLYING NEAR ELECTRIC WIRES IS DANGEROUS

Next month is the time when the children devote most of their time to the sport of kite flying. It is not our intention to criticize the children for participating in this sport, but to call attention to the extreme danger of flying kites in communities and areas where there are electric wires. The flying of kites near electric wires is extremely dangerous especially if the kite string is wet, and more so, if a fine wire is used as a kite string.

We also wish to caution the children about climbing poles to untangle a kite, or poking sticks at the wires.

We solicit the cooperation of everyone in the community to assist us in this matter and to encourage the children to fly their kites in sections where there are no electric wires.

LADIES AID SOCIETY NOTES

The Ladies Aid of the Florence M. E. church will meet at the home of Mrs. John Fossett of Goodrich Drive, March 7, 1934 at 10 o'clock.

Meeting will open by singing a hymn, followed by scripture reading.

Prayer.
Business Session.
Old and new business.
Description of Mrs. Geo. Miller's trip.

Lunch hour.
The Women's Missionary Society of Florence M. E. church will meet at the home of Mrs. John Fossett of Goodrich Drive, March 7, 1934 at 2 o'clock.

Program follows:
Hymn "Throw out the Life Line"
Prayer.
Business session.
Bulletin, Lucille Taylor.
Revela Missionary to the World—Mrs. Bauer and Mrs. Geo. Miller.
Hymn—"Christ for the World," Miss Beard.

Stewardship—Mrs. Blaine Lalle.
We would like all members to be present and all new members or visitors are welcome.

The Ladies Aid and Woman's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Bauer Thursday, Feb. 22, for our Diminishing party. We had 24 members present. Our afternoon was spent in a good recreation way. We had a spelling bee, told Washington stories and poems; Mrs. Schmidt gave a wonderful description of Mt. Vernon, Washington's home; she has been there and seen the things; we then drew pictures and each one was to guess what it was we had drawn. After we had finished we were served delicious refreshments. We then left for our homes.

Lucille Taylor, Pub. Supt.

MT. ZION ROAD

Most everyone is needing rain very badly.

Our heartiest welcome is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Ringo also Mr. and Mrs. Emerald, who recently moved into our community.

Several cases of measles and whooping cough are reported in this community.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Stephens are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a son at their home since Feb. 3rd.

The many friends regret to hear of Ben Northcutt being quite ill the past week.

Tom Summers spent an enjoyable week-end on Gunpowder with his brother, John Summers.

Ray Shrlley, Monroe county farmer, reports that Experiment Station No. 5 tobacco brought $43 more per acre than other varieties grown on the same kind of land.

THE FARM AND HOME

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

Give the chickens plenty of feed, fresh warm water and oyster shell or ground limestone. If lice are found on the birds dust them with sodium fluoride or apply nicotine sulphate to the roosts in the evening. Hens or pullets not laying should be sold.

Commercial potato projects will require the most careful attention to improved methods so as to get maximum yield of good quality potatoes, if profit is to be made. A thorough study of marketing opportunities should be made in advance.

Many homemakers and 4-H club members are using the new leisure to repair and refinish furniture, make rooms over, etc. In varnishing, be sure to use only the best varnish, and apply it in a room that is dry and about 70 degrees in temperature. Forty-eight hours should elapse between coats, applied to a dust-free surface.

Washing clothes as soon as they need it is one of the best clothes-economics. Waiting too long means harsh rubbing, injuring and wearing out fabrics, and perspiration or oil rots the cloth. Lukewarm water with plenty of suds, and clear lukewarm water for rinsing, should be used. Do not use direct heat in drying.

Family and community singing is playing a large part in getting together plans. Both early and modern American music may be learned with profit, paying special attention to folk songs, Negro spirituals, religious music, and patriotic songs. The community singing at the Farm and Home Convention makes a good study background.

Prune grapes as early as possible after severe cold weather is past. Most growers prefer to prune before they bleed excessively, but there is no evidence that bleeding is harmful. A dormant spray should be applied, if there is grape scale or San Jose scale.

JUST AS EASY TO ## KEEP GOOD POULTRY

Discussing profits in poultry raising, E. A. Baute of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, points out that 97 demonstration flocks containing 14,394 birds averaged almost 11 eggs and a profit of $1,622 in December. Ten of the flock owners, with 2,071 hens, gathered an average of over 16 eggs per hen and made above the average profits. "Whether the flock is large or small, one might as well make the chickens pay," says Baute. "Prepare now to have eggs to sell next fall and winter, when eggs are the highest. The first step, is to get chicks started early."

2,410 STUDENTS ENROLLED IN UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

A final enrollment of 2,410 students has been recorded at the University of Kentucky for the second semester of the school year 1933-34. In spite of the fact that the enrollment figures for the second semester almost always show a decrease from the first semester, the loss this year was only 48 students, the lowest in several years.

Classes for the new semester officially closed February 12, and work is now under way in all departments of the University, with several new courses having been inaugurated.

Those students registered from Boone county are:

John Demolsey, Walton.
Ralph Gaines Edwards, Walton.
Robert Linton Graves, Burlington.
Robert B. Hensley, Burlington.
James Maurice Huey, Union.
Marvin S. Mooze, Burlington.
Joseph Harmon Jones, Beaver Lick.

J. G. Ramson, Verona.
Roberta Randall, Burlington.
Paul Ellis Tanner, Florence.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

A "land use" committee was appointed at a mass meeting of Kentucky farmers, to launch a program of "bringing about better use of good land, and reforestation of poorer lands. All sections of the county will participate.

The Dairy Herd Association of Marion county will be continued, cooperating with other counties on a bi-monthly basis. Pay rate for 1934 is $20 for each member. "Paying for dairy improvement brings big returns," says County Agent J. E. Summers.

Approximately 41,000 pounds of tobacco was sold by Kenton county 4-H club members at the district tobacco show, and $294 in premiums were received by winners from the entire district. E. E. Fish, of the Kentucky Experiment Station conducted the show.

A. C. Burnette, agent in charge of Negro work in Kentucky, reports that in Christian county 1,200 purebred eggs have been ordered. Three hundred chickens brought poultrymen $184, at 10 cents per pound. Six poultry raisers are keeping only purebred stock to breed with.

Powell county orchard growers will graft 1,000 apple trees this spring, as part of an orchard improvement campaign. One farmer transplanted 300 trees during the fall, that he had grafted two years ago. Golden and Starks Delicious, and Starking varieties lead.

The Taylor County Strawberry Association has been re-organized, and will sell produce locally until a large-scale commercial project can be started.

7,135,135 POUNDS OF BURLEY
SOLD ON LEXINGTON FLOORS

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 24—Lexington's burley tobacco market closed its eighth week of the current season yesterday, with sales for the five-day selling period of 7,135,135 pounds, for which growers from virtually every burley producing section were paid $909,498.66, an average of $12.74.

This week's average was 24 cents higher than that for the previous week, when sales totaled 8,353,450 pounds which brought an average of $12.50, or a total of $1,043,872.05.

Season's sales to date are 73,146,360 pounds which have been sold for $9,178,683.10 an average of $12.54.

More lime will be used on Boyd county farms than in any year since 1929, County Agent Joe Hurt reports. Trucks are being used to haul the lime from a local plant.

FLORENCE

Don't forget the J. F. Baxter sale Saturday afternoon, March 3.

The many friends regret to hear of James Gallstine being quite ill, suffering with an attack of tonsillitis.

Mrs. Guy Aylor and two daughters were quite ill with measles.

Wm. Tryling, Jr., Chas. Beall, Jr., and Miss Minnie Baxter attended a party at the home of Ernest Baxter and family, of Hebron Friday evening.

Mrs. Mollie Laubisch and Mrs. Arthur Bonar spent Sunday at Richmond, Ky., and visited Miss Mary Laubisch, who attends college there.

Mrs. Lizzie Hollie and son, of Latonia, were dinner guests last Wednesday of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Marksberry.

John Haley, of Covington, spent Friday in Florence, and called on his old friend, J. O. Carpenter.

James Schram and wife had the misfortune of having an accident Saturday evening, while in Covington. The car was badly damaged but no one was injured seriously.

About fifty relatives and friends surprised Emmett Baxter and family Friday evening when they all gathered for a farewell party. The evening was spent in music and games and a lovely lunch was served. All left wishing for many such occasions.

Ben Northcutt who was taken to Bethesda hospital, in Cincinnati, and who underwent an operation, is doing nicely. We wish for him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Stella Tryling, and son Wm. Robert Aylor and Charles Beall were dinner guests Sunday of Miss Minnie Baxter.

Mrs. Freddie Kleemire spent Monday with Mrs. Guy Aylor and daughters, who are quite ill.

HAMILTON SCHOOL NOTES

Petersburg came to Hamilton Friday night and clashed with the Purple Ramblers in the Rambler's last game of the season. The game was close at all times, first the Bulldogs and then Ramblers being in the lead. The Petersburg boys rallied in the last half and were leading by 4 points when the whistle blew. The score was 26-22. The Hamilton Independents defeated those from Petersburg by a margin of 1 point, the score being 15-14. The Hamilton girls won over Petersburg in a rather one-sided contest. At the tournament at Walton Thursday night the Ramblers will meet the Verona quintet and the girls will be introduced to the Hebron girls. Be there Hamilton rooters!

A play of the 6th, 7th and 8th grades under the direction of Garland Huff was given Thursday night at the school. Everyone admitted that the play was wonderful and even more so, because of the difficulties under which Mr. Huff labored. Professor Asbury and Huey presented a "Bedtime Story" which almost paralyzed the audience, who considered themselves privileged to see such master acting by those mentioned above. The "Happy Band Club" of the 3rd, 4th and 5th grades had their monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, Feb. 22, 1934. After a short business meeting an interesting program was given in honor of the patron of all American boys, Geo. Washington. Music was presented by the "Happy Band Orchestra" under the direction of J. Bender Jones and Wilfred Hodges.

Buying and selling on such a large scale has compelled the Hamilton Grocery Co., to completely remodel and enlarge their establishment. Come and take advantage of the wonderful bargains they are featuring for March 1st and 2nd.

Go to Walton Thursday night and support your home teams!

LOWER GUNPOWDER

Bob Smith took supper with Garland Huff and family Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Asbury spent the week-end with their home folks at Mount Olivet.

Mrs. Ivaree Huff and daughter, Barbara, spent Saturday with F. H. Seebree and family.

One of the best basket ball games of the season was played Friday night between Petersburg and Hamilton. The girls' game was in favor of Hamilton. The other two games were close, Petersburg boys won by four points. The Hamilton Independent team won by one point.

There will be a fat and lean basket ball game at Hamilton, March 9th. The team must consist of men who never played on a regular team. Other entertainment and lunch will be served. Admission 10 cents to all. Come and enjoy the evening.

The entertainment staged by Garland Huff's room was well attended and seemed to be enjoyed by all and especially the bedtime story, told to Mr. Huey by Prof. Asbury.

We will take our hats off to Hasher for economy as he gets one sandwich and he takes one bite, and the next bite he gives to his girl. This writer would have loaned you a nickel, rather than had that girl embarrassed.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Walston and family visited Sam Walston and wife Friday and attended the basket ball game.

Mode Hodges is on the sick list. F. H. Seebree was in Burlington Friday.

Jimmie McCubbins moved to J. L. Jones' farm this week.

Mr. Sullivan moved to Rob Aylor's hill farm.

SOW PRODUCES 4,500 POUNDS PORK IN YEAR

A sow owned by Julian Atkinson, a Nicholas county 4-H club boy, produced 4,500 pounds of pork in a year. She farrowed eight pigs on Jan. 1, 1933, that weighed 3,000 lbs. when sold. A second litter of 10 pigs farrowed in August weighed 1,500 pounds when sold on Jan. 1, 1934. At an average of 4 cents a pound, the sow produced $180.00 worth of pork in a year.

Julian was president of the Kentucky Association of 4-H Clubs in 1932, and is now a freshman in the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

CENTERVIEW

Mrs. John Wilson spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Jim Rogers of upper Bellevue.

Rev. J. A. Johnson spent Sunday night with K. W. Aylor and family. Jack Baker, of Cincinnati, was a pleasant caller of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Garrisons Saturday night and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilson returned home Friday night after a few weeks' visit with his brother, Ed Wilson and family, of Martinsville, Ind.

Mrs. Alice Gadd is not much improved at this writing.

There were no services at Big Bone Baptist church Sunday night, owing to the inclement weather.

Sue Allen spent Thursday night with Mr. and Mrs. Sam Walston, of Lower Gunpowder.

Several from here attended the basket ball game at Hamilton Friday night.

MARINES WILL ACCEPT 30 HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES

Macon Ga., Feb. 24—Lieut. Col. H. W. Stone, officer in charge of the U. S. Marine Corps District Recruiting Headquarters, located in the Municipal Auditorium, today received authority to accept thirty men during March.

Applicants must be high school graduates between 18 and 25 years of age, and not less than 5 feet 6 inches in height, and should first communicate with District Headquarters at Macon, Ga., and be prepared to present their high school diploma or certificate on the regular printed form, signed by the Principal, giving date of graduation; together with parents consent if under 21 years of age, and two letters of reference from prominent citizens of their community.

GARRISON SCHOOL AND COMMUNITY NEWS

We are sorry to report we have measles in our school.

We have lost two scholars from our school, Leonard and Eliza Bradley.

There was quite a crowd journeyed to the theatre Saturday night with the Pettit brothers, who easily won the $25.00. And as they have to play the tie with five more bands Saturday night, March 3rd, they hope the schools in Boone county will give us a hand as we certainly appreciate all kindness and hope to do as much in the future toward helping other schools.

We only have one girl left in school and that is Belva Ann Engle.

We have had almost perfect attendance in school for the past two weeks, except Monday, the weather being so bad.

Thomas Campbell's family have the measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Engle had as Sunday guests, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Roberts and son Samuel, of Devon, Mrs. Sam Patrick and son, Charles, and little Mary Elizabeth Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. James Pettit and sons and Earl Bowman.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Rice spent Sunday afternoon with Charles Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Sedler and daughter Alma, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Pettit and sons, attended the dance given at Sam Patrick's Saturday night. All enjoyed the evening very much.

Wilbur Rice lost a valuable cow last week.

News is scare in our neighborhood, and most too cold to investigate. So you will hear from us next week.

Pike county farmers are working for better dairy results. Ted Besh of the Experiment Station demonstrated weighing feed and milk, and testing for butterfat content. Use of balanced ration was shown.

Mrs. John Burns had a very severe attack of indigestion one night last week.

Mrs. Edith Christy spent Wednesday with her daughter, Mrs. Ira McGuire.

Someone entered Mary Wetham's house one night recently and completely upset the interior, but only a few small articles reported missing. Canby Klopp is on the sick list. His friends wish for him a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bonta entertained with a very delightful dinner on Friday night, Mr. and Al Stephens and Mrs. Justin Dolph. Mr. Groundhog is certainly giving us a good sample of winter.

We certainly hope the entire six weeks is not like the sample.

The sale of the late Wm. Snelling was very well attended and as at all sales, some things brought good prices, while others did not.

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. Years before, at the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for ranching and cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley.

CHAPTER I—Continued

On the crest of the spur they halted. Directly below them lay another valley even larger than Eden Valley, but save on its eastern side it was not timbered. Nor was it, even remotely, as verdant as Eden Valley.

"There," cried Robin Kershaw triumphantly, "is the land that needs the water old Mother Nature is wasteful off yonder. Some day when we're gone, our children will build that dam I spoke of, back the floor waters up to the crest of this spur, cut a canal across or drive a tunnel and lead the water off down yonder. Good farmin' valley there, Lorry."

He continued: "No, the Lord ain't treated yonder valley jest right. I reckon it gets enough rainfall to make it fair dry-farmin' land, but come a dry year or a succession o' dry years 'at that valley'll sure raise a crop o' broken hearts. Lorry, I sort o' figger we'd ought to call that country yonder Forlorn Valley."

"I christen thee Forlorn Valley," the girl answered, and blew a kiss into the solitude. Then, together, they rode down into it.

CHAPTER II

They spent that first summer in tents, while Kershaw and his men felled trees, peeled the bark from the logs and dragged them out into the sunshine to season. They dug a well, cut off fence posts, and enclosed horse pasture with a stake-and-rider fence; and when the logs had been seasoned by late fall, they built a spacious and comfortable log house with a wide veranda around it.

The following spring Kershaw brought in fifteen thousand head of cattle. They were scrubs—old Spanish-California stock; but they were the only cattle he could buy and, since his feed cost him nothing, he was content with them and the profit he knew he would make after growing them out. Deer, elk, and antelope were plentiful, so he never slaughtered a steer for meat. He prospered.

For the succeeding eight years he was not disturbed. A few nesters came into the valley and set up small herds, but there was plenty of grass for everybody. After 1862, when the homestead law was enacted by congress, men began to come in and file on homesteads. Robin Kershaw and his wife immediately fled homestead grazing claims on the two sections immediately surrounding their ranch headquarters; thus, to a considerable extent, availing themselves of the first riparian rights on Eden Valley creek.

With the proclamation of the war between the states fully half the settlers in Eden Valley volunteered for service in both armies. One of the first recruits to the Union army from California was Robin Kershaw, despite the fact that he was now the father of six children.

He returned with a permanent limp in his left leg and the title of major, to find that his business had prospered. With the farms of the Middle West denuded of their cattle to a large extent by the war, beef prices were up, so Kershaw sold every head of stock he possessed and shipped them to Chicago and Kansas City via the newly built Central Pacific railroad. Then, with his checkbook, he commenced the elimination of his neighbors in Eden Valley.

By 1870 he owned in fee fifty thousand acres of Eden Valley—and then Joel Hensley, late of the Confederate army, came. Hensley had some capital and he, too, yearned for Eden Valley. He outbid Robin Kershaw for the lower half of the valley, and Kershaw let him have it, for, after all, Eden Valley was large enough for two, and Kershaw knew he had the cream of it.

Almost before he realized it was impending he had a bitter quarrel with Joel Hensley. Like Kershaw, Hensley was a Texan—a fierce, belligerent man of the breed that was responsible for the most heroic and dramatic epitaph in history:

"The Thermopylae Had Its Messenger of Defeat—The Alamo Had None!"

Kershaw had fenced off his portion of the valley, and in common justice, he asked Joel Hensley to pay for half this fencing. Hensley, glancing sardonically over the fence at the luxuriant meadows of his neighbor, access to which this fence denied his cattle, replied coldly that he couldn't spare the money. Thereupon Kershaw patiently informed him that he would loan him the money, with cattle as security. Hensley replied that he preferred not to be in debt.

"Well, I see you intend to be unneighborly," Kershaw answered, "so we'll not argue the matter further. However, there is another matter that must be adjusted, whether you have the money or not. I am turning loose on the summer range this year five hundred pure-bred beef-type bulls. Your herd bulls are scrubs, and your cattle and mine roam the public domain together. Hence, you are bound to reap an equal benefit with me from the use of my expensive pure-bred sires. That wouldn't be fair."

"Can't help that," Hensley retorted. "I have no money to buy pure-bred range bulls and compete with you."

"I'll loan you the money, Hensley, and it will be money well invested. And you will not be doing your neighbor a gross injustice."

Greed and envy incited him to strange decisions. Joel Hensley retorted: "You're too patronizing. 'Very well.' And Robin Kershaw rode away."

In May the Hensley and Kershaw riders drove the cattle of their respective employers up into the summer range in the mountains. But when the Hensley riders returned to the valley the Kershaw riders remained, scoured the range and shot every scrub bull they found wearing "Bar H," the Hensley brand. Also they maintained a patrol all summer and rather effectually succeeded in keeping the Hensley cattle on a sequestered portion of the range. The result was that the Bar H had a 10 per cent calf crop that year while the Circle K (the Kershaw outfit) had 80 per cent.

Joel Hensley was torn between a desire to kill Kershaw or permit him to live, in order that he might borrow from him sufficient money to purchase pure-bred beef-type bulls. Final he decided on the latter course.

Robin Kershaw saw him coming, so he buckled on a six-shooter and went to meet him. "Well?" he demanded coldly.

"Guess I'll have to buy them pure-bred range bulls, neighbor," Joel

"Lorry, I Sort o' Figger We'd Ought to Call That Country Yonder Forlorn Valley."

Hensley forced a sheepish grin. "If you're still of a mind to let me ride the money—"

"The situation has changed a mite since I made you that fair offer, Hensley," Kershaw's voice was very cold. "Your scrub bulls don't worry me now, so I'm not interested in helping you out. I wanted to be a good neighbor, but you wouldn't have it, so now we're enemies, and if you expect to wage yourself off the Circle K under your own power, I reckon you'd better be starting now."

Without a word Hensley wheeled his horse and departed. He had earned his humiliation and he realized it; yet the realization did not allay the fury that possessed him. Nor would he consider so seriously thereafter the advisability of killing Kershaw; he knew now that Kershaw was suspicious of him, else why had the latter appeared with a pistol at his hip? Evidently Kershaw would kill eagerly enough if driven to it; that he would back up for no man Hensley felt assured.

And there was Robin Kershaw II to be reckoned with, also. So he realized the danger of clashing with a prideful clan that was still fond of tracing its "kin folk" back a few centuries to a coat-of-arms!

So he nursed his hatred, borrowed money from a distant bank and bought pure-bred beef-type bulls. Indeed, he had to, or get out of the cattle business.

But Robin Kershaw was not yet through with him. Followed three years of subnormal snowfall in the mountains; hence, when the spring freshet came, Eden Valley creek overflowed but a tithe of the territory that was flooded in years of normal snowfall. But Robin Kershaw had put in a concrete diversion dam at the upper end of his ranch, backed the water up over the low banks and led it in irrigation ditches all over his meadow. He could have permitted the water from these ditches to run under the line fence between his ranch and Hensley's, thus insuring Hensley the customary hay crop and pasture. But Kershaw turned the water, when he was through with it, back into the channel of Eden Valley creek.

Of course there was nothing Hensley could do about this. Kershaw had the first use of the water and when he turned it back into the channel at the boundary line he was quite within the law.

Kershaw put up his customary tonnage of hay that year and wintered his cattle well. Hensley had but a quarter of the hay he required and wintered his cattle poorly; and thin, undernourished calves and a lessened quantity of them.

Following the second year of subnormal snowfall in the mountains he suffered even greater losses. The third year he could stand it no longer. Again he called on Robin Kershaw. He rode up to the latter's house and before the gate held up his hand, palm outward, in the old Indian sign of peace. Nevertheless, Robin Kershaw came out with a pistol on his hip; on the front veranda Robin II fondled a repeating rifle and watched Hensley as a cat watches a gopher hole.

"Kershaw," Hensley began, "you're ruining me."

"That's a lie. You've ruined yourself."

"I've got to have more water this year," Hensley shrilled. "When you're through with the water I want you to run it under the fence to my ditches. If you don't, by G—d, we'll argue this in the smoke. It's plain dirty of you to run it back into the creek again."

"Well, I suppose I could run it into your ditches," Kershaw mused.

"See that you do," Hensley reminded him, and rode off, little realizing that he had made an error of judgment. He thought he had bluffed Robin Kershaw.

When Kershaw was finished with his irrigation that summer, Hensley connected his lower irrigation ditches with Kershaw's and the water started running merrily down over the Hensley meadows. But almost immediately the flow ceased. Kershaw had opened the water gate on his diversion dam and turned the water back into the channel of the creek at the upper end of his ranch instead of the lower!

Hensley was now in a most unpleasant predicament. In the presence of witnesses (Robin II and two of the Kershaw cowboys) he had threatened, if denied the water, to argue the issue with Robin I in the smoke. "He'll make good," Robin Kershaw I decided. And he and his sons and his riders all rode armed with pistols and rifles.

But again Joel Hensley visited the Circle K. "Kershaw," he called from the front gate, "I'll pay for my share of that fence. With interest," he added.

"I don't need the money," Kershaw taunted him. "And I doubt if you'd maintain your share of the upkeep of that fence. How would you like to sell out to me? That's the best and easiest way to shed your water troubles. I'll meet you in a liberal spirit for the sake of peace. Eden Valley," he added, "ain't big enough for us both."

Two weeks later, as he rode in alone from the nearest settlement, Joel Hensley rode out on Kershaw from a clump of pines. Neither man hesitated; it did not occur to either to ask questions; simultaneously they drew and fired.

Mark, now the perversity of Fate. Had each killed the other the feud which, for the next forty years, was to make of Eden Valley a dark and bloody ground, would have ended then. But Joel Hensley's first cartridge had a defective primer—and Robin Kershaw's did not. Whereupon, a coroner's jury at Gold Run, the county seat, returned a verdict of justifiable homicide and restored Robin Kershaw to the bosom of his family. But Joel Hensley left a son—several.

Science at Last Has Overcome Bar to Progress of Skin Transplanting.

Surgeons for years have been able to transplant skin from one part of a person's body to another, says the Literary Digest, but tissue transplanted from one person to another almost invariably dies within a few weeks, probably because of slight differences in the composition of the blood, which hinder the transplanted cells in establishing themselves at the new site.

A method by which this difficulty may be met was announced recently by Dr. Harvey B. Stone, associate professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Baltimore. In collaboration with Dr. J. C. Owings and George O. Gey, Doctor Stone has been able successfully to transplant thyroid and parathyroid gland tissue from one person to another by growing it for a time outside the body in a culture medium made from the blood serum of the prospective recipient.

In this way, he explained, the tissue becomes adapted to its future sons in fact—and these inherited the casus belli.

CHAPTER III

No relatives, outside the immediate descendants of the Kershaw and Hensley clans, ever participated in the feud started by that defective primer, for it was a point of honor with both clans to "kill their own snakes." During three generations eleven Kershaws and four hired gunmen died with their boots on and two went to state's prison for varying terms. Of the Hensleys thirteen were killed, with five gunmen.

Neither side ever complained to the authorities; as they often said they preferred the good old six-shells law! Only very inquisitive sheriffs invaded Eden Valley seeking redress for the outraged law; and of the half-dozen who did, two, who knew too much, never returned.

At that, the feud surely must have died of inanition at times when the count on each side was even, but for the perennial casus belli of water. Years of lean snowfall in the mountains were years of lean profit for the Hensleys. Despite this disadvantage, the Hensleys prospered in the cattle business to the point where, in the year 1900, they were enabled to put in a diversion dam of their own in Eden Valley creek.

In 1917 there remained of the clan Kershaw its chief, Ranceford Kershaw, a widower of fifty, permanently crippled by reason of a soft-nosed bullet through his hip; his son, Owen, aged twenty, and a daughter, Lorraine, aged sixteen. Of the clan Hensley there remained three women, Angie Tichenor, a widow, and Hattie and Beulah Hensley, both old maids.

It was assumed, locally, that in the fullness of time Nathan Tichenor and Owen Kershaw would shoot it out together; hence, with one or both of the young men out of the way there should be peace, at last, in Eden Valley.

But the World War intervened. Neither Owen Kershaw nor Nathan Tichenor waited to be drafted.

War with Germany, it will be remembered, was declared on April 6, 1917. In March a furious freshet had washed out the Hensley diversion dam in Eden Valley creek. On the morning of April 7 Nathan Tichenor rode up to the gate in the white paling fence before the old log ranch-house of the clan Kershaw, and, like his freighting grandfather, help up his hand, palm outward, in the old frontier sign of peace. From the veranda crippled Rance Kershaw glared down at him.

"Our diversion dam went out last month," said young Nate.

"Pleased to hear it, young man. Well?"

"I'm going down to San Francisco tomorrow to enlist."

"That's to your credit, if I do say so." Old Rance appeared to thaw perceptibly. "Still, you're a mite slow down' your duty. My boy, Owen, left this morning."

"I wish him luck, Mr. Kershaw. What I came for was to ask you if you'd consider favorably the suggestion that one war at a time is enough for our people to be engaged in. Our dam's out, and I ask you, as a favor, to let us have the water after it's done its work for you."

"Why should you ask me a favor? And why should I grant it, young man?"

"Because my mother and my aunts have got to run our outfit while I'm in the army. I didn't figure you'd make war on women."

"How about the old fence bill, young man?"

Young Nate laid a check on the gate post. "My grandfather should have paid that, Mr. Kershaw. It was right low and ornery of him not to. There's a check for it, with interest for forty years at 6 per cent added."

TO BE CONTINUED.

VULGAR WEALTH

Too much money was for the classic Greek mind a form of excess, and excess was the thing he would not tolerate. To have too much money was to show a lack of decent restraint and was on a par with too much drink or any other vulgar exhibition of lack of self control.—Kansas City Times.

HERE ARE THE USUAL SIGNS OF ACID STOMACH

Neuralgia Feeling of Weakness
Headaches Mouth Acidity
Nausea Loss of Appetite Indigestion Sour Stomach Nervousness Sleeplessness
Auto-intoxication

WHAT TO DO FOR IT:

TAKE—3 teaspoonsful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful 30 minutes after breakfast. And another before you go to bed.

OR—Take the new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets—one tablet for each teaspoonful as directed above.

If you have Acid Stomach, don't worry about it. Follow the simple directions given above. This small dosage of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia acts at once to neutralize the acids that cause headache, stomach pains and other distress. Try it. You'll feel like a new person.

But—be careful you get REAL milk of magnesia when you buy—genuine PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia. See that the name "PHILLIPS" is on the label.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM
Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

JESUS' TESTIMONY CONCERNING HIMSELF

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 11:2-12:50.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matt. 11:28.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Shows He Is God's Son.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Shows He Is God's Son.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Jesus Was.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Tells Who He Is.

1. How the Kingdom Was Received (ch. 11).

In showing the attitude of the people toward the king and his kingdom four classes of hearers are described.

1. The perplexed hearers, like John the Baptist (vv. 2-11).

John believed that Jesus was the Christ (v. 2) but was somewhat perplexed as to the manner of the establishment of the kingdom. In the Old Testament predictions two lines in the Messianic prophecies are presented. The one sets him forth as the suffering one (Isa. 53); the other as the invincible conqueror (Isa. 63:3). Indeed, in Isaiah 60:1, 2 we have the two advents in one view (Luke 4:17-21). The Baptist had in his preaching mainly emphasized the prophecies which made the king to be a mighty conqueror (Matt. 3:10-12). He said the axe is laid unto the root of the tree; that the chaff was to be separated from the wheat and the chaff burned. John saw Christ as the one who would remove the sins of his people by the shedding of his blood (John 1:27), but he failed to see the interval between the time of his suffering and the time of his triumph. John's faith was not failing him, neither did he send this deputation to Jesus for the sake of his disciples. He was a true prophet and a faithful man but was perplexed.

2. The violent hearers (vv. 12-19). These were willing to receive the kingdom according to their own way but were not willing to conform to its laws. They were ready to seize it with violent hands. Christ had told them before the coming of John the Baptist, the prophets and the law were the source of ascertaining the divine will and that if they would receive John, he would be the Elijah to lead them into the kingdom age. Their ears were closed to everything but their own selfish desires. They would not repent when called upon to do so by John, nor rejoice when called upon to do so by Christ (vv. 17-19).

3. The stout-hearted unbelievers (vv. 20-24). In Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum Christ had done most of his mighty works but the people deliberately set their hearts against him and his message. It was not for lack of knowledge and opportunity that they were unsaved, but because of their purposeful rejection of Christ. Tyr and Sidon, Sodom and Gomorrah were filled with immoral profligates and idolaters, but they will be more tolerably dealt with in the day of judgment than those who willfully reject Jesus Christ.

4. Hearers who are babes in spirit (vv. 25-30). There were some among the people who heard Jesus with childlike faith. Christ invites these to come to him and receive rest.

11. The Antagonism to the King and the Kingdom (ch. 12).

The immediate occasion for their wicked determination was what Christ did on the Sabbath day.

1. Jesus' relation to the Sabbath (v. 21). The hungry disciples were plucking corn on the Sabbath. With this the Pharisees found fault. To their cavils Jesus replied and showed that God's purpose in instituting the Sabbath was to serve man's highest interests.

2. The Pharisees hold a council to destroy him (v. 14).

3. Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, the unpardonable sin (vv. 22-32). The occasion of their blasphemy was the casting out of the demon. The effect of this work was twofold.

a. Upon the multitude (vv. 22, 23). They were amazed and cried out: "Is not this the son of David?" implying that his mighty works indicated him to be the Messiah.

b. Upon the Pharisees (vv. 24-32). When they heard what the people were saying their anger and satanic malice were aroused. They did not deny the miracle but sought to account for it without acknowledging him as the Messiah. Therefore they affirmed that he was in league with the devil. Christ exposes their folly and charges them with awful guilt. They attributed the work of the Holy Spirit to the devil. This Christ calls blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, for which there is no pardon.

The Highest Power

Everyone likes to be powerful. Religion wields the greatest power in the universe, the power of God. We are not praying at all unless we expect things to happen because of our prayers that would not happen otherwise.

Do Your Part

You deceive none but yourself if you think to shirk the part assigned to you in the business of the universe. You can not be what you are not. Therefore, know your limitations.

MEETS DEMANDS FOR HIGH SPEED

Streamline Principle Has Proved Effective.

The virtue of streamlining automobile bodies for the specific purpose of enabling human beings to drive faster than their nerve reflexes would seem to permit them to operate in safety may be seriously questioned. The incapacity of the average individual to accommodate himself to the exigencies of high speed is in fact notorious. But as to the other virtues of streamlining—fuel efficiency and economy—there is no longer any dispute.

The streamlining principle is being applied not only in the manufacture of automobiles, but in the design of ships and railroad trains, with an intensity of purpose never before known. Its application in aircraft design is of course imperative, and has there reached its greatest refinement.

The great Atlantic liners Europa and Bremen are the best-known examples of effective streamlining in ship construction. Their bows of bulbous shape below the waterline and their streamlined superstructures and funnels have helped to make them the speed queens of the sea they traverse. Incidentally it is of interest to note that this is the one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of the sailing of the Savannah, the pioneer Atlantic steamship, from Savannah for Liverpool. She was a sailing vessel equipped with auxiliary steam power, and crossed the ocean in 27 days, during which her paddle wheels were in operation 80 hours. Both the Europa and Bremen have sailed from Cherbourg break water to Ambrose Channel lightship in slightly more than 4 days and 17 hours.

Now, seemingly, railroad rolling stock is to be made the subject of streamlining experimentation. And well it may, in view of the keen competition of planes and motor vehicles. A German train which looks like nothing orthodox has been developed for operation at extremely high average speed, the famous Royal Scot showed evidence of some effort to lessen wind resistance through the design, and a cross-continent railroad has announced that it is studying designs for passenger trains which will be operated at 100 miles per hour.

Most of us, however, need to bear in mind that there is a sharp distinction to be made between the operation of a streamlined airplane or railroad train at very high speed by one who has been specially trained and subjected to a rigorous physical examination, and the driving of automobiles at fast rates by Tom, Dick and Harry. The latter trio will do well, both now and in the future, to make their pace conform to the limitations of their individual capacities to keep on the road and out of trouble.—Providence Journal.

Modern Hunter "Makes Good" With "The Arrow"

After waiting years for the opportunity, J. S. Farmer, a Texas shot and killed a 7-point buck deer, using a bow and arrow. Indian fashion, he stalked his game expertly and shot from a distance of only 45 yards. That is excellent work or a modern hunter using primitive methods far antedating the discovery of America when redskin natives slew their tribal enemies and obtained food by means of archery.

Archaeologists say flint arrows date back 25,000 years and arrows without stone points were used ages earlier. It is generally believed that our Indians were the world's greatest archery adepts, but such is not the fact. The bow of some African tribes has a draw of 80 pounds and the arrow is cast 250 yards. White Americans frequently have excelled Indians in archery contests and have record kills of grizzly bears in this country and lions in Africa with the arrow. They draw a good bow—as good or better than an barbarians. As Robert Louis Stevenson wrote in "Black Arrow": "Who shoot me a good shot? It's there the eye comes in and the head between the shoulders."—Toledo Blade.

Progressive Parties

Why not re-introduce the fad of the progressive party, to eliminate excessive cost to any one family for entertainment everybody desires? This can be done comfortably if all your friends live nearby. At the first house hors d'oeuvres may be served, at the next soup, at the third the main course, at the fourth dessert and coffee and at the fifth bridge may be played with light refreshments afterward. In this way all have done their part and all have had a party.—Exchange.

Expect New Time Lock to Foil Bank Robbers

With the original time lock the bank vault opened at an agreed hour in the morning and stayed open until the end of the business day. Opening and closing hours could be varied at will, but only once a day, says the Saturday Evening Post.

With the delayed control the vault remains closed and locked by day as by night, except when it is desirable to open it. It can be unlocked as will, but only after a predetermined delay of from five minutes to half an hour after the combination is turned.

The combination is dialed as normally, but the doors will not swing back until the timer has ticked off the interval for which it has been set. The makers say that banks easily can adjust their routine to such brief delays.

What happens in case of a stick-up? The robbers find the vault locked. An employee is forced at the point of a gun to dial the combination. A click tells the robbers that the combination has been completed correctly, but they see for themselves that the door handles will not turn. If they suspect that they are being tricked they can put ears to the door and hear the timer working.

The bandits do not know whether the delay will be five minutes or thirty. This is the essence of bank robbery, and even five minutes' loss will be critical.

HOW PEGGY GOT TO THE PARTY ON MONDAY NIGHT

(AN ACTUAL EXPERIENCE FROM REAL LIFE)

Discovers Oxydol; Ends Hard Rubbing

Gets big wash and ironing done same day now!

"When I washed the old way, I was so tired I could not do my ironing for several days. A few weeks ago I discovered I could get my clothes spotless by soaking them in Oxydol suds! Now I get my washing and ironing done the same day, am not tired, and have a whiter, sweeter bunch of clothes."

THE amazing new discovery of the world's most famous soap experts, the makers of Ivory—this new and improved OXYDOL does these things no other soap can do or has ever done:

- (1) Soaks clothes clean in 15 minutes. Without boiling, without back-breaking rubbing. Hence—cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine, saving hours of labor.
- (2) Gets clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter, by scientific Tintometer test, than other soap. Whiter in one washing than ANY other soap can get them in TWO to FOUR washings!

(3) Yet, due to the special mild protective elements it contains, it neither fades nor injures color or fabric. Even cotton prints and children's dainty frocks are safe. And—it's so kind to hands that you're amazed at its power to clean clothes!

Thick 3-inch Suds in Any Water

OXYDOL is specially fitted to water conditions in each district where it's sold. The Oxydol you get here already contains just the right amount of water-softener to fit the water you use. You'll see the result in the suds. Oxydol multiplies 500 times in suds! Makes rich 3-inch suds in any water, hard or soft! And Oxydol is economical. By actual test, a regular 25c package will do the work of 8 to 10 cakes of bar soap or 2 to 3 times as much flakes!

Miss Helen White and Malcolm Hutsell, of Williamstown, were Wednesday night guests of friends here.

Mrs. Mary Stott and Mrs. B. E. Aylor were shopping in Cincinnati, O., Friday.

Mrs. B. E. Aylor spent Saturday and Sunday in Dayton, O., with her daughter, Miss Velma Phillips.

Haynes Bruce of near Bullittsville was a business visitor to Burlington last Friday.

Leon Aylor, whose hand was severely injured in a saw a few weeks since, is healing nicely.

Thirty or more members of the Burlington B. Y. P. U. enjoyed a social last Wednesday night at their club house on the Smith farm near town.

Charles Vest and son, William, of Verona, were in Burlington on business Monday morning. The Vest family formerly were citizens of the Burlington neighborhood.

To mention all of those in town on business this week would be well nigh impossible, so we necessarily must miss most of them. All we can say is come to town again.

Guests at the home of T. C. Adams and family last Sunday were Elmer Simpson, wife, son and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Rector.

Miss Ann Warner, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Warner, and Mr. Emory Phillips of Norwood, Ohio, were married Feb. 24th. Their many friends wish to congratulate them.

B. W. Southgate, of Covington, and a former resident of this county was a business visitor here Monday. While in town he called at the Recorder and renewed his subscription.

Frank Seabee, of Lower Gunpowder, was a business caller at this office last Friday. Mr. Seabee's visit to the county seat are few and far between, in fact, never unless business calls.

Miss Ruth Kelly left Tuesday night for Knoxville, Tennessee, where she has accepted a fine position at the University of Tennessee. She wired Wednesday morning that she had arrived safely and that the mercury stood at ten above zero.

C. T. Easton and son, Clarence Earl, of near Bullittsville, were callers at this office Wednesday afternoon. These gentlemen are seldom seen at the county seat, and usually it is business that brings them out.

Eldridge Carpenter, of the Frog-town pike, was a business visitor to Burlington last Saturday and while here called at this office and advertised a public sale to be held at his place on March 3. Read his ad. in other columns of this issue.

BARKMAN DISCUSSES GOOD BUTTER MAKING

The best butter can be made only from good, clean-flavored cream, with a 30 percent butterfat content, says J. O. Barkman of the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

While sweet cream is preferable for butter making, it should be churned at 2 degrees lower temperature than sour cream, when other conditions are equal. Whole milk should never be churned.

Use of a thermometer is advised, and the temperature kept at 52 to 56 degrees in summer, 56 to 60 degrees in winter. Churning will require from 30 to 40 minutes. All equipment should be cleaned scalded and cooled before use.

The churn should be stopped when the butter granules are the size of grains of wheat, and the butter should be washed twice with water. Buttermilk should be washed out, not worked out. Cold and very firm butter requires more working than when it is comparatively soft.

About three-fourths of an ounce of salt should be added to a pound of butter, or it should be salted to taste. Usually a gallon of cream will yield about 3 pounds of butter.

Butter should be waxy, bright in appearance, and when cut, have a grain like broken steel. When it is made for market, it should be in prints, wrapped in parchment paper and put in paraffined cartons.

Knox county farmers are planning gardens, etc., so as to have more garden and truck crops for home food supply. Increased use of poultry and dairy products at home is planned.

RECORD BOOKS FOR ADJUSTMENT SIGNERS

Farmers who sign crop reduction contracts are to be furnished with record books for keeping information required by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The book provides for complete records of acreages of various crops planted, yields per acre, total amounts produced, amounts sold and prices, amounts used on the farm, use of contracted or rented acreages, net income, and a map of the farm showing the various fields.

The book is not intended to take the place of any system of accounting now in use by farmers, but rather to record information required in carrying out the provisions of a reduction contract.

CROP LOANS FOR AAA COOPERATORS

Farmers seeing government emergency crop or seed loans this spring must furnish proof that they are not planning to increase production, says a statement from Governor Wm. L. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration.

Applicants for loans must obtain clearance through or furnish a certificate of cooperation from the county production control committee of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Production control associations will have lists of farmers who have signed crop reduction contracts. Those who have not signed contracts must furnish, through the control committee, proof that they will not increase production.

Farmers desiring to obtain emergency loans this spring should apply first to their local production credit association.

Tennessee Farm Bureau President Endorses Plea For Graduated Tax On Cigarettes As Help To Farmers

By J. F. PORTER

President of the Tennessee Farm Bureau Federation As Told to Frank Wilder

Mr. Porter has joined Mr. Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and Mr. Ben Kilgore, executive secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation, in endorsing the plea of southern tobacco farmers and cigarette manufacturers to Congress to substitute for the present flat-rate tax of 6 cents a package on cigarettes a graduated tax based on the retail price of the package.

The matter has been under consideration in Washington for several weeks, and the House Ways and Means Committee has conducted a preliminary hearing. Additional evidence in support of the plea soon will be heard by a special sub-committee of which Representative Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky is chairman.—EDITOR.

"My attention was first directed to the appeal of the 10-cent cigarette manufacturers for a graduated tax through articles and cartoons in the newspapers," Mr. Porter said.

"My first impression was that it had about the same appeal as the claim of post taxpayers, that is, that our taxes are too high; but there was left in my mind the thought that they made a good case for themselves, so much so that I read the next article which I saw on the subject with increasing interest.

There's No Denial

"The facts as presented by the manufacturers of 10-cent cigarettes—and I haven't seen any attempt to deny their statements—is that all cigarettes regardless of price are taxed the same. That is, cigarettes selling to the consumer for 10-cents, 15-cents, 20-cents or more, are each taxed 6 cents per package of twenty by the federal government."

This tax, passed as a war revenue measure in 1919, is $3 a thousand cigarettes. It was established fifteen years before the 10-cent cigarette made its appearance, and for that reason, there was no cause for adjustment of the tax until recently. Until the 10-cent cigarette was placed on the market in 1932, 15-cent class was the lowest price on cigarettes on the market.

"This tax, non-proportional to the selling price of cigarettes," Mr. Porter continued, "is manifestly unfair if we have in mind the declaration of the principles of the American Farm Bureau and the Tennessee Farm Bureau Federation, that taxes should be based on ability or capacity to pay."

The tax on cigars is graduated in proportion to their selling price. Practically all other taxes are proportionate to values. Yet such is not the case in the levy on cigarettes, perhaps the heaviest-taxed commodity in general use in America.

The 6-cent tax represents 232.1 per cent of the manufacturer's net selling price (before tax) on 10-cent cigarettes and only 126 per cent of the price of 15-cent cigarettes.

Where the Profits Are

"I make no claim to being familiar with the manufacturing processes of cigarettes, but the probabilities are that there is more profit to the manufacturer of high-priced cigarettes than the lower-priced, therefore, the justice of the claims of the producers of the lower-priced article," Mr. Porter continued.

called on Miss Hallie See Sunday.

A. T. Smith, of near Warsaw, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Davis and family Sunday.

Mrs. Minnie Wheeler of Warsaw, visited her son J. J. Wheeler, of Warsaw several days last week.

Messrs. Robt. Gilbert, Clyde Davis and Dan Furnish were callers in Covington, one day last week.

Miss Katherine Ray spent several days the past week at Warsaw, the guest of Mrs. Wm. Hill and family.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Devore entertained over the week-end Miss Mable Devore, Mr. and Mrs. Ethelbert Devore and children, Kenneth, Charles and Dorothy of Cincinnati.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Seventy-eight Rockcastle and Madison county lespedeza growers sowed 3,000 acres during the past season. From 6,000 to 10,000 acres will be grown this year, says County Agent R. F. Spence.

Harrison county 4-H club members sold 51,570 pounds of tobacco at an average of $10.24. Champion basket brought $40, while several other baskets brought $22.

Seventy Perry county farmers have formed a cooperative commercial potato project, and are offering a carload of certified seed potatoes.

While the gross receipt of tobacco growers for all tobacco in the United States decreased from $174,000,000 in 1923 to $66,000,000 in 1931, the tobacco manufacturers' profits were increasing from $76,000,000 in 1923 to $147,000,000 in 1931. This means that of the total of these two figures the farmers in 1923 got 70 per cent and the manufacturers got 30 per cent, while in 1931 the manufacturers got 68 per cent and the farmers only got 31 per cent. Since 1931 the 10-cent cigarette, manufactured by independents, has been brought on the market and this has gone a long way to correct this unfair division of the smoker's dollar for tobacco, as between the grower and the manufacturer.

The 10-cent cigarette was introduced on the market by certain independent manufacturers who were content to make a minimum profit on their product.

A typical cost sheet of 10-cent cigarette makers allows approximately 1 1/10 cents for the cost of leaf; 84/100 of a cent for the processing tax and other costs; 24/100 of a cent for freight and distributor; 162/100 cents for jobber's and retailer's profit; 6 cents for the federal tax and only 2/10 of a cent for profit.

Out of this two mills must be paid state, county, city and income taxes and various other costs.

Increased Expenses

"The plea of the manufacturers of the 10-cent package is that the NRA has made it practically impossible to continue to pay the present unfair 6-cent tax and to sell cigarettes at 10 cents a package," Mr. Porter explained.

The NRA not only has increased the costs of labor but also the cost of materials and distribution. The processing tax, which eventually is received by the farmer, has narrowed the bare margin of profit also.

"But why should farmers bother themselves with an issue involving manufacturers when they have troubles of their own more than they can look after?" Mr. Porter asked.

"There is ample reason for farmers to be concerned about the cigarette tax. The closer the retail price is to the price received by the farmer for his crop, the greater the consumption. The greater the consumption the more the farmer will receive for his tobacco.

"Last year it was a well-known fact that the buyers for the 10-cent smoke put new life and competition on the burley tobacco loose leaf sales in Tennessee and Kentucky. The haphazard auction system of marketing on the floors is bad enough at best.

"Certainly it is to the interest of growers of cigarette tobacco that there be as much competition on the market as possible."

Relief The Farmers

The influence of the 10-cent cigarette on the market, was exhibited as early as 1932. In 1931 the price of burley had dropped from 15.59 cents to 3.63 cents.

When the 10-cent cigarette leaf buyers entered the market the next year, the price of burley rose to 12.60. Previous to that time, four manufacturers of 15-cent cigarettes—"The Big Four"—had enjoyed practically 97 per cent of the cigarette business.

There is no important difference between the leaf costs of "Ten centers" and "Fifteen centers," it was pointed out. The average leaf costs for 10-cent cigarettes is estimated at 49.1 cents per thousand and for 15-cent cigarettes, at 55.3 cents per thousand.

This difference is accounted for largely by the fact that the 15-cent cigarette contains from three to four times as much foreign-grown tobacco, costing about $1.00 a pound, as does the less expensive cigarette.

American tobacco growers receive no benefits from this foreign-grown tobacco, though it raises the cost to the consumer. More of the burley grower's tobacco is consumed in the 10-cent cigarette than in the 15-cent cigarette and he receives substantially the same price for it from both manufacturing divisions.

Proposal For Tax Rate

"The proposal in Congress, as I understand it," Mr. Porter said, "is to continue the 6-cent rate of tax on the 15-cent package, make a slight increase on the higher-priced package and an equal decrease on the lower priced."

"Sound reasoning and fairness to all parties concerned would indicate that Congress should revise the tax rate on a graduated basis. This type of revision should not materially affect the income of a hole Sam."

The exact proposal is that the tax be reduced from $3 a thousand to $2.70 on 10-cent cigarettes, that it remain at the present figure of $3 on 15-cent cigarettes and that it be raised to $3.30 or more expensive types.

This would be equivalent to a reduction of three-fifths of a cent on the low-priced cigarettes and an increase of three-fifths of a cent on expensive cigarettes.

Rather than be increased, revenues of the United States will be increased under the new tax schedule, it has been assured.

Before the 10-cent cigarette was introduced, cigarette consumption had been falling. Many smokers were turning to the cheaper, "roll-your-own" tobacco, which yielded a tax of only 18 cents a pound.

Government Profited

After the 10-cent cigarette was introduced, however, consumption of cigarettes began to increase again, with the government receiving $1 a pound on cigarette tobacco taxes. That this trend will continue if the 10-cent cigarette remains on the market has been predicted by experts.

Thus the government will reap the benefits not only of the higher tax but also of increased consumption.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that the presence of the 10-cent cigarette has saved smokers vast sums of money. Not only have smokers taken advantage of the low price on this type of cigarette but also on the cut prices which the 15-cent cigarette manufacturers have been forced to offer to meet competition of the new comer. Savings to consumers in one have been estimated at $150,000,000.

Price cutting on 15-cent cigarettes has been the rule since the 10-cent cigarette offered competition and the farmer has been benefited as a consumer buying cigarettes and as the producer, growing the indispensable part of the cigarette.

"In my judgment it would be against the best interest of both the producer and the consumer to have the lower priced cigarettes taxed out of existence," concluded Mr. Porter.

BIG BONE

Miss Ruth Perry and Delbert Hubbard called on Misses Mary C. Maude and Guy Atha Thursday.

Clifford K. Readnour called on his friend Charles Allphin Saturday and had a card game.

The play given at the Hamilton school Thursday was a success and was enjoyed by all. Esther Jones, Lucy Rich, Alma Schwenke, were all dressed in old fashion clothes and sure were beauties. Mr. Huff was an old grandpa; Mr. Asbury told the little boy a bedtime story, the little boy being Mr. Huey and had to nurse the bottle (just like a baby).

Clifford Readnour and Charles Allphin were business visitors in Big Bone Friday afternoon.

Walter James is in Cincinnati, visiting relatives.

Mrs. Etta Mae Jones and son were calling on Everett Jones and wife.

U. S. Action Against Pirates

In the early part of the last century, the United States government took prompt and energetic steps to average any outrages against American shipping. A case in point was the Malaysian ports, infested with pirates. American warships made frequent visits there and the American political agent visited the native states to arrange for trade.

No Belgian Race

Actually, there is no Belgian race, the people of Belgium being composed of two distinct racial families. The northern Belgians belong to the Walloons of French extraction with the characteristics of the French, while the southern Belgians are Flemish with the characteristics of the Dutch or Low Germans.

Rare Orchid Species

Most popular and beautiful of the orchid's prolific botanical family, which records more than 5,000 different original species, is the Cattleya species, named after William Cattley, English sea captain, who, early in the Eighteenth century, brought back to London some of these rare Cattleya species from Colombia, thereby tapping one of the richest wild orchid gardens in the world.

GOOD SIGN-UP

EXPECTED IN CORN-HOG PRODUCTION CONTRACTS FOR BOONE COUNTY—KEEN INTEREST SHOWN IN ALL SECTIONS.

The Boone county AAA Corn-Hog sign-up up started in Boone county last Thursday with the first meeting of the Boone county Corn-Hog campaign committee. Eight of the ten county committees and twenty community committees were present at this meeting and considerable interest was shown in the program.

Keen interest is being shown throughout the county as the growers secure a better understanding of the program. Growers cooperating in the program will reduce the number of hogs produced for the market by 25 percent and the number of acres of corn produced in 1934 from 20 percent to 30 percent. They will receive $5.00 per head for the 75 percent of the hogs they are allotted to raise and 30 cents per bushel for the corn they take out of production.

Meeting notices are being supplied Corn-Hog raisers for the educational campaign meetings to be held in the county. Growers are also being supplied thru the mail work sheet and map forms for filling in to bring to the meetings and to have their committees or County Agent's office to use when they sign their contracts.

The list of meetings to explain the Corn-Hog program will be held as follows:

Florence, Friday, March 9, 1:30 p. m., fast time, Odd Fellows Hall.

Burlington, Saturday, March 10, 1:00 p. m., Burlington court house.

Grant Monday, March 12, 7:00 p. m., school.

Hamilton, Tuesday, March 13, at 7:00 p. m., school.

Hebron, Wednesday, March 14, 7:00 p. m., Odd Fellows Hall.

Petersburg, Thursday, March 15, school.

Union, Friday, March 16, 1:00 p. m., Masonic Hall.

Beaver, Saturday, March 17, 1:00 p. m., Sleet's store.

Verona, March 15th, at 1 p. m., at Bank building.

A community sign-up day will be held at Walton Equitable Bank Tuesday, March 20th.

The County Agent will be present at each of the above meetings to assist in explaining the program. All interested in the above program are urged to attend.

SARAH ELIZABETH CARPENTER

Sarah Elizabeth Carpenter daughter of John Nelson and Amanda Shotwell Green was born January 21, 1846 at Petersburg, Ky. She was the oldest of a family of nine children, only three of whom remain.

She united with the Petersburg Christian church early in life where she was a faithful member until her death, although she was not able to attend in later years.

She was united in marriage with Nicholas Carpenter in the year 1871. He preceded her to the grave 23 years ago in August 1911. To this union one child was born, a daughter, who died Feb. 4, 1906, leaving an infant.

Surviving relatives are one grand daughter, Mrs. Charles Maxwell, three great grandchildren, two brothers, Gamaliel Green, of Ross-moyne, Ohio, Edgar Green, of Milton, Ky., one sister Mrs. A. B. Sullivan of Willards, Maryland, and several nieces and nephews. She departed this life February 18, 1934, being 88 years and 26 days of age.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY NOTES

The East Bend W. M. S. met with Mrs. Thad Ryle on Feb. 15 with about 20 persons, including visitors.

A missionary program from Royal Service, presented in the afternoon, was very interesting and inspiring.

Chicken soup, pie, and in-between's were served at noon. Next meeting with Mrs. Carrie Ogden, March 15th.

Publicity Chm'n.

Ralph Maurer and Harold Kelly Clore, who are attending college at Richmond, Ky., spent the week-end at home for the purpose of attending the annual district basketball tournament. Naturally both were keenly disappointed at the result as Harold Kelly was the manager of last year's team and Ralph was the captain. Better luck next year boys,—maybe.

PRODUCTION CREDIT LOAN

Federal Production Credit Association loans are being looked upon with considerable interest by a number of Boone county farmers.

Loans from the association can be made for almost any purpose for crop and livestock production. Borrowers however, who can, made loans thru their local banks will find it more convenient to secure their loans locally.

All applications for the Production Credit loans should be made thru Mr. C. L. Hempfling, Constance, R. 1, phone number Hebron 162. Mr. Hempfling is director of the association from Boone county.

All farmers making seed loan applications must first make application thru the Production Credit Association and be turned down before their seed loan applications will be accepted.

A WORD OF PRAISE

The old time Fiddler's contest held every Saturday night over station WCKY, Covington, Ky., has created quite an interest in parts of the county, especially in the Garrison community folk, when the sons of Mr. and Mrs. James Pettit of this vicinity tried their luck in the contest and successfully won two $25.00 prizes and a gold medal. This media entitles them to play over the air at least once a week.

On Feb. 17 the four boys, Calvert, Bradford, Holman and Charles, the elder seventeen, and the younger ten, won $25, for the best music rendered at the theater. Then Saturday night, March 3, they had to compete with the leading bands of the last four weeks. However, the elder brother was sick and the three younger ones met the competing bands to play off the tie. The decision was unanimously in favor of the Pettit brothers.

We feel that these boys should have a word of praise for their splendid efforts and we wish them much success in their musical journey.

MRS. CARRIE B. SLATER

Mrs. Carrie B. Slater, aged 73 years, passed away Tuesday morning at her home on Erlanger Road, Erlanger, after having been in ill health for some time. The remains were immediately removed to the Tallaferro Funeral Home for preparation.

Mrs. Slater is survived by two sons Harry B. and Robert Slater, one sister, Mrs. Leona Stephens and two grandchildren, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

She was a Past Worthy Matron of Bristow Chapter Eastern Star, and the members of this organization held their impressive services at the Funeral Home Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock.

The pallbearers were P. J. Carter, A. B. Rouse, M. J. Mitchell, A. A. Shearer, John McCollum and L. A. Bentler.

Funeral services were conducted at the Tallaferro Funeral Home Thursday at 2:30 o'clock by the Rev. Hampton Adams, of Frankfort, Ky., assisted by Rev. R. D. Martin and Rev. F. C. King, after which she was laid to rest in Highland cemetery.

LUCIAN B. DICKERSON

Lucian B. Dickerson passed away at his home in Union, Ky., last Tuesday night, Feb. 17, after suffering a week from a paralytic stroke.

On the 15th of the month Mr. Dickerson reached the age of 90 years. Until this time he had been a very active farmer. He has been a member of the Masonic Order for over 65 years and was the oldest member of the Union Baptist church.

He was united in marriage to M. S. Mary Stanifer, who preceded him to the grave eighteen years ago.

He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Janie Chambers, of Walton and Mrs. Nannie Norman, of Frankfort, six children and 7 grandchildren, besides a host of other relatives.

C. Scott Chambers was in charge of funeral arrangements. He was buried last Thursday in the Union cemetery.

Ivan Clements, of Covington, R. D. 5, and formerly of the Union community, was numbered among our very pleasant visitors Wednesday of this week. Although having lost considerable poundage Ivan still looks the soul of health.

We would like to see him back in Boone county "for keeps."

We call the attention of our readers to the sale ad. of F. M. Ash in other columns of this issue.

MISTAKE SOMEWHERE

Two weeks ago on Wednesday W. H. (Bill) Ward and his son, Pat, left Burlington with the announced intention of going to Louisville. Mr. Ward said at the time that he would be back to Burlington and ready to re-assume his duties here as an employee at this office sometime the succeeding Friday. For several days we did not hear from Mr. Ward. He has worked here for several years and quite naturally we were anxious to know just where he was and what had become of him. He suggested at the time of his departure that it might become necessary for his son, Pat, to undergo an operation at Louisville. However we received a marked copy of a newspaper from Butler, Georgia, about the time we received a post card from Mr. Ward stating that he and his son were in St. Augustine, Fla. The Georgia paper carried the following very interesting item:

"The Herald office was very much refreshed Friday by a visit from Messrs W. H. Ward and son, Ed, and Publishers of the Boone County Recorder, Burlington, Ky., who were enroute to points of interest and a short vacation in Florida. Both were interesting conversationalists and we obtained from them much valuable information about their great state. Coming over Route Three from Atlanta they expressed themselves as being most agreeably surprised with both, developments and natural scenery along the route and were anticipating a most delightful trip the remainder of their journey."

Of course all newspapers make mistakes and this is just another time, but, nevertheless, the editor and publisher of the Herald at Butler certainly did not get his information "first hand" as to just who edited and published the Boone County Recorder, at Burlington, Ky.

WANT WASTE PAPER

The Epworth league of the E. church in order to raise some surplus funds is requesting that any friends that they may have in the community should save their waste paper and magazines for which they will give you a hear "thank you" when they come your home to collect some day soon. Just any old papers that you may have about the house will be acceptable, especially old magazines.

Boone county friends of Frank Maxwell, of Covington, will be pleased at the news that he is improving rapidly after a successful operation at the Christ hospital, Cincinnati.

Elbert (Doc) Rouse, who is enlisted in the CCC service and who is stationed at Ft. Thomas, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. Geo. A. Porter and family, Saturday afternoon.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner County Agent

TWO FRUIT MEETINGS

Mr. W. W. Magill, fruit specialist from the College of Agriculture will meet with Boone county growers in two meetings on next Tuesday, March 13th, according to county agent H. R. Forkner.

The first meeting will be held at 9:15 a. m. at the home of Mr. J. W. Goodridge, 1-4 mile west of Burlington. The second meeting will be held at 1:00 p. m., slow time at the farm of Mr. Hubert Conner of near Hebron.

The meetings are important to the fruit growers of Boone county in that they come together to discuss the results of the past year's work and the 1934 spray schedules and fruit management problems they are going to follow.

The meetings are held under the supervision of the county agent and the Boone County Extension Association. All who are interested in fruit problems are invited and urged to attend.

SEWING-TOBACCO LEADS

4-H PROJECTS IN 1934

Sewing and tobacco received the greatest number of projects selections among Boone county 4-H Club members this year according to county agent H. R. Forkner. Poultry, dairy, garden, sheep, corn and hogs follow with many of the girls planning on canning projects at later dates.

Keen spirit and interest is being displayed among the ten community organizations in many respects are superior to those of last year. The second meetings were held the past week and the first of this

NOTICE CORRESPONDENTS

Due to the late arrival of correspondence from some sections of the county, we are asking that all correspondence be mailed so as to reach the Recorder office not later than Monday afternoon. If news items are mailed later than this time it delays the usual time of going to press.

We are of the opinion that all correspondents will comply with this request, which will make things much easier for the editor and his employees.

HOLLY HITS A MONKEY

It is reliably reported that County Agent H. R. Forkner is given to dreams of late. One informant reports that the farm agent dreamed one night recently that he ran over a monkey on the Florence pike and later ran thru a drove of some twenty skunks. Of course, every well informed inhabitant of Burlington and vicinity knows that there is a mysterious monkey lurking in this community and others, perhaps not so well informed, have alleged that the community is alive with skunks (of course no reference is made to the two-legged variety). Now it always has been our idea that the Burlington monkey was a myth and we never have been given to the opinion that there were that many skunks even close to the town. But we do not take the story seriously for the simple reason that Holly, like some of the rest of us, might be in error sometimes. As a matter of fact you know it was said that at one time he was prone to address letters to folks who never even existed, for which we respectfully refer you to Mr. L. C. Weaver, for more detailed information.

F. T. A. TO HOLD MEETING FEBRUARY 9
The next regular meeting of the Hebron P. T. A. will be held at the Hebron school auditorium Feb. 9th. We would like to have our 85 members and friends present, as Dr. L. C. Hafer, of Ludlow will be with us to speak in the interest of the 12,000 cripples of Kentucky. Dr. Hafer is another one of Hebron's beloved sons, who has gone far in his chosen profession, so let us show our appreciation for his valuable time by having a good attendance at this meeting, and Wednesday of this week.

Rev. H. M. Hutter, Pastor Sunday School at 10:00 o'clock. Mr. John Surface, Supt.

Morning Worship at 11:00 o'clock. Subject of the sermon, "The Wisdom of the Cross."

HEBRON LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hutter, Pastor Sunday School at 10:00 o'clock. Mr. Edwin Walton, Supt.

Luther League Devotional Service Sunday evening at 7:00, followed by Catechetical Class at 8:00 o'clock. Mr. Edwin Walton will lead the Luther League topic.

Rev. Harold Beamon of Newcastle Ind., and who makes his home still in Boone county, was in Burlington on business Tuesday. Mr. Beamon is the full time pastor of Newcastle, but has been given leave of absence from his pastorate for as many days a week as he chooses. Rev. Beamon says that industrial conditions have been such in Newcastle that his congregation has not been able to meet the full time salary and have given him free lance to pursue outside occupations until such time as they shall be able to meet his needs. However, he states that conditions there are on the mend in a high degree and he is assured that it will not be long until his pastorate again will demand his entire time. Rev. Beamon as everyone knows in this section, is a fine minister and he has a host of friends and admirers in this part of the county who are proud of his achievements.

W. L. Kirkpatrick, local butcher, and one of the best judges of pork and beef on the hoof in this section of the county, purchased last Thursday a truck load of hogs from B. H. Belkshire, of Petersburg. Mr. Kirkpatrick has killed more hogs this winter than ever before and he has built up an exclusive trade especially among those who like choice pork chops and hams. He says that the porkers he brought from Petersburg are fully up to his standard.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Botts were Monday and Tuesday night guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Botts here. Mr. and Mrs. Botts returned to Newport with her for a few days visit.

Walton and New Haven Capture First Places In District Tournament

Sportsmanship Trophy Goes To Burlington Tomcats, Who Are Complimented Upon Their Clean Play--Craddock and Laws Named All-Stars

The thirty-seventh annual district basketball tournament closed at Walton last Saturday evening with the highest honors going to the Walton Bearcats and New Haven Tigerettes.

The former had a really tough road to travel to the championship, as they had three teams on the schedule each of which gave them a real argument. They opened with Burlington on Friday night and the Tomcats pushed them hard to win by a 20-17 score.

The next game for the Bearcats was with New Haven and the Tigerettes, although their coach was absent, gave them about as game a scrap as any witness could wish. The score was tied frequently, and the Tigerettes were in the van only a minute before the final gun. However two foul shots by Laws were good for the victory. The score was 17-15.

In the finals the Florence Knights also would not submit to defeat without a fearful fight. Although the score might not indicate such a tight game, nevertheless it was a beautiful exhibition of air-tight basketball that saw Florence bow to the fast stepping Bearcats in the tourney nightcap. This score was 25-19.

In the girls division the tradition of last year also followed suit as the New Haven girls again were the victors, however, only after another very tough battle. The Hebron girls, who had been favored to win the tournament rather handily, stumbled before the attack of the Burlington Kittens and lost 11-8, but in the finals the New Haven lassies managed to outlast the Kittens in a game that proved to be more or less an Alphonse and Gaston affair. Both teams appeared nervous. The final score was 12-11.

The Burlington Tomcats, although beaten, were very proud of their award of the sportsmanship trophy. There was no argument whatsoever, either from coaches or spectators, as to the Cats meriting this award. They played thru what was generally considered the championship battle with only three fouls called upon them, while their opponents suffered nine. None of the three were intentional and all fans were wholehearted in their praise of the clean play of these boys led by Captain "Dud" Rouse and so clearly coached by C. G. Lamb.

The general handling of the tournament was heartily commended by all who saw it. The management, supervised by Coach Raymond Beavary, is to be complimented upon the very efficient manner in which they handled the large crowds that attended and also for the courteous manner with which the teams and coaches were treated.

The two all-tournament teams picked by the referees, while coming in for no little criticism as always is the custom, are as follows:

Girls: Lucille Craddock, Captain, of New Haven; Lina Mae Arnold, Hebron; Thelma Simpson, Walton; Anna Lea Burton, Burlington; Betty Crigler, Hebron; Lucille Ryle, Burlington; Helen Taylor, Florence.

Boys: Laws, Walton, Captain, DeMoisey, Walton; Scott, Florence; Ferguson, Florence; Ryan New Haven; Ransom, Verona; Snow, Burlington; Stansifer, Walton.

PT. PLEASANT CHURCH NOTES

In spite of the inclement weather during the months of January and February, attendance at the Point Pleasant Sunday School and church services has been highly satisfactory. With the coming of spring an increasing interest is expected in these services.

The men of the church held a wood-sawing early in February at which time a sufficient supply of fuel was cut to last a long time.

The regular monthly preaching services will be held Saturday and Sunday, March 10-11. On Saturday evening the subject for discussion will be "Effective Christian Witnessing." "The Drudge" will be the subject for consideration at the Sunday morning service, while "The Claims of the Church" will be the subject of the Sunday evening message.

We invite all to unite with us in these services of worship.

Wilbur Wallace, Pastor.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hickman, of Cynthiana, spent a few hours in Burlington Monday.

SOME IDEAS FOR BREAD STUFFING

Expert Gives Various Methods of Preparation.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THIS column will be devoted to bread stuffings, for use for poultry or meat or for vegetables. The method of preparation is the same but the quantities are smaller. In summer time when fish are so good and so cheap, there is nothing better for occasional use than a stuffed baked fish. A rich stuffing with plenty of butter and with an additional seasoning of lemon juice is especially good with fish.

There are two types of stuffings—or perhaps you call them fillings or dressings—the moist and the dry. Dry stuffing isn't really dry, but it is just moist enough to hold together. If your bread is soft you will perhaps need no liquid except the melted fat.

My favorite method for making stuffing is to melt the fat and to add to it the seasoned crumbs and to stir the mixture over a low flame until all the fat has been absorbed. I like to cook a little minced onion in the fat just until it is yellow, before I add the crumbs. Another method is to add softened butter to the crumbs and to work it in with the hands. That was the way stuffing for turkey was always made at home. Seasoning for stuffing may be any herb such as sage or thyme or poultry seasoning, plain salt and pepper and onion. For fish some people like a little Worcestershire sauce or one of the many other delicious liquid seasonings which the cook who likes to give her dishes that special touch keeps on the pantry shelf. Another very good stuffing for fish or for a rolled beef steak is moistened with ketchup. This also makes a good filling for peppers and for egg plant.

For vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers, egg plant and onions the addition of finely minced meat gives a touch of flavor—leftover cooked ham or chicken or any other roast, a slice or two of freshly cooked or leftover bacon—if there is such a thing—as an addition. Anchovy paste or minced sardines are other suggestions.

By the way, a mixture of very fine dry crumbs with lightly browned butter with a seasoning of Worcestershire sauce and anchovy paste adds a special touch to broiled ham. The ham is cooked on one side, browned on the other side, then it is spread with the mixture and set back under the broiler for a moment.

I wonder if you have ever served a bread dressing with broilers. This is made by cutting dry bread into dice and cooking it in butter. A tiny bit of garlic may be cooked in the butter and removed before the bread is added. A tablespoon of minced onion may be used instead of the garlic.

Cracker crumbs may be used in place of the bread crumbs in stuffing vegetables, if you like. With cracker stuffing I use more liquid for moistening. Boiled rice combined with vegetable pulp and minced meat or fish is a favorite filling for vegetables. Grated cheese sprinkled on the top of the stuffed tomatoes or peppers gives a new touch of flavor. Any leftover vegetables may be added to a stuffing. In fact, as you have gathered, you can combine almost anything leftover in the refrigerator with crumbs or rice, and season it with almost any savory herb or sauce until you get a flavor which just suits your taste.

Stuffed Egg Plant.

Cook the egg plant in boiling water to cover. Cut a slice from the top and with a spoon remove the pulp, taking care not to work too close to the skin. Chop the pulp and add one cup of soft stale bread crumbs. Melt two tablespoons butter, add one-half tablespoon of finely chopped onion and cook five minutes, or try out three slices of bacon, using the bacon fat in place of butter. Add to the chopped pulp and bread, season with salt and pepper and if necessary moisten with a little stock or water. Cook five minutes, cool slightly. Refill the egg plant, cover with buttered crumbs and bake 25 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit).

Stuffing for Fish.
2 cups soft bread crumbs.
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper
2 teaspoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons fat, melted
Mix all ingredients.

Bread Stuffing.
4 cups soft bread crumbs
Salt
Pepper
1 chopped onion
Sage or other herb
¾ cup melted fat
Water

Add seasoning, onion and fat to crumbs. Mix well and add enough water to make the mixture stick together.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

The Word "Suspicion"

AN INTERESTING word is "suspicion" and one which embodies in its make-up the roots indicating exactly how it happens to come by its sense, past and present.

The origin of the word "suspicion" lies in the Latin "sub" meaning "underneath" and "spicio" meaning "to look."

"Suspicion," in other words, as indicated by its derivation implies examining under the surface of things rather than assuming them to be as they appear.

This is slightly different from the sense in which it is frequently used today. For, today, a suspicious person or circumstance is one inviting further examination or study because either one is not on the surface what it should be. However, the two meanings are so closely inter-related that it is easy to understand how the word logically acquired both connotations.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Ran into Billy Hill, author of "The Last Round Up," the returns from which have made him quite comfortable and caused the matter of the next meal to be much less complicated than it was in the not remote past. The composer of the ditty which took the country by storm and which is still being sung here and there, though he strolled violin at the New England Conservatory of Music and was to become a member of the Boston Symphony orchestra, chose to roam instead. So over and thus is playing mother to her own daughter and that's held to be a precedent by those well informed in theater circles.

An inquiry has reached this desk asking what has become of the speak-easies now that repeal has been in effect for weeks and weeks. All I can say on that matter is that some have obtained licenses and are doing business as usual, others haven't obtained licenses and are doing business as usual except for a closer scrutiny of customers and some have fallen by the wayside and are now only memories.

For quite obvious reasons, names must be omitted in this yarn. It has to do with an artist of considerable reputation and his wife who is extremely fond of birds. Like so many of his craft, the artist has been suffering from a greatly reduced income—in fact the reduction reached a point where it could be reduced no farther. Then came a commission that brought return enough to pay all the bills. After the settlement had been made with much rejoicing, the artist found a $2 surplus. He turned that over to his wife because she insisted that she had to have a pair of silk stockings. But instead of coming back with stockings, she returned with—a pair of love birds!

Though the family already had one pair of love birds, the husband offered no objection. But the male of the original pair of love birds fell for the new female in such a big way that his old mate was ready to die. So the artist had to give away the new love birds—and his wife is now staying home until there's another commission so she may buy silk hose.

NEVER starch linens that are to be stored away for a long time. They are apt to crack. Rinse free from starch, dry and fold away, if possible, in blue paper. The blue paper prevents them turning yellow.

If a cold pudding sauce is desired, it should be chilled and served when needed. It should not be allowed to stand in the hot kitchen, where it would soften and lose flavor.

LEXINGTON BURLEY MARKET CLOSING NINTH WEEK OF SALES

Lexington, Ky., March 3—Lexington's burley tobacco market closed its ninth week of the current sales season yesterday with total sales thus far this year of 77,502,620 lbs., for which growers from throughout the burley belt have been paid $9,611,596.58, an average of $12.41 per hundred pounds.

The volume of sales declined abruptly this week, the totals for the five-day selling period being 4,356,260 pounds which brought $432,958.48, an average of $9.93, the lowest weekly figure of the current season.

Last week's sales totaled 7,135 pounds which brought an average of $12.74, or a total of $909,496.66.

While this week's average was not as high as that of last week, the market itself was virtually as strong, with a week's price range of from $1.75 to $3.4 per hundred.

A new season's high crop average was recorded during the week when a consignment averaged $30.97 per hundred pounds.

This week's offerings were of very inferior quality of leaf, few baskets being good enough to bring more than $20 per hundred. The market was active, however, on everything offered.

Receipts throughout the week were negligible, but with favorable handling weather during the last two days are expected to be slightly heavier during the early part of next week. Only 377,000 pounds were sold here Friday.

However, 16 of the city's 24 warehouses still are open for sales, and Ben Bosworth, sales supervisor, has announced that the full four sets of buyers will continue to operate on the market here next week.

Union county homemakers caned 1,760 quarts of meat and 176 quarts of pumpkin during the past month. Food shelves for emergency meals are being made in many cases.

GARRISON SCHOOL AND COMMUNITY NEWS

We have had a very good attendance at school the past two weeks despite the inclement weather.

Wilbur Rice, one of our trustees has just completed a jacket around our heating stove. This solves our problem of heating the house evenly. The teacher and children are very grateful to him for his good work and to Mr. Norris for the material for the jacket.

The school again thanks each and everyone who helped the Pettit brothers win the $50.00 cash prize, also the gold medal from the Liberty Theater in Covington.

Several of the school children are out of school this week on account of measles.

On entering the school house Monday morning, the Pettit brothers, namely, Bradford, Holman and Charles received many congratulations from their schoolmates and teacher for their success and splendid music rendered Saturday night over station WCKY. We are very proud of them.

Students receiving highest grades for month follow:

Eighth Grade—Bradford Pettit. Sixth Grade—Charles Pettit, Holman Pettit, Walter Durham.

Third Grade—Manley Kittle. Second Grade—Vernon Kittle. First Grade—Belva Ann Engle, Charles Patrick and Lester Ramey.

Those who have measles in our neighborhood are Calvert Pettit, Earl Bowman, George Bowman and son.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Rice called on Mrs. Rice's father Sunday, Charles Moore, of Petersburg.

Miss Grace Bowman called on Mrs. James Pettit Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. James Pettit and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Engle, and daughter Ray Hill and Howard Ledford spent quite an enjoyable evening at Mr. and Mrs. Burnham Roberts Wednesday.

Edd Bernard and Wilbur Rice journeyed to the Liberty Theater Saturday night, where they won $25 more, also a gold medal.

Charles Sedler has been on the sick list for the past few days.

Ed Black has moved to Geo. Pfalzgraf's farm.

Charlie Kippier has moved to Lawrenceburg, Ind.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, it has been the divine will of an all-wise Father to call from us our Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. Elihu Alden, who peacefully and quietly entered into rest February 5, 1934. She was an honorary member and was faithful as long as her physical strength permitted.

Resolved, first, that in her death our society and church lose a devoted member; the children and grandchildren a fond mother and grandmother; the companion a faithful wife; the community a friend. Second, that our society extend to the bereaved ones our deepest sympathy and pray the Divine Healer, may comfort their hearts.

Henry Jergens and daughter, Mary Katherine entertained Mr. and Mrs. Adam Dolwick and daughter Carolyn Jean Sunday.

HAMILTON HI NOTES

Hamilton did not fare so well in the tournament, losing to Hebron and Verona by the respective scores of 36-15 and 33-29. Basketball is over until next fall and base ball which is always a popular sport here comes next on the schedule.

There are enough boys to make a good team and it is possible that we may organize one.

Mr. Asbury was ill at his home at Mt. Olivet the earlier part of this week and was unable to teach until Wednesday morning. Mr. Huey took control of all classes in Mr. Asbury's absence.

Some of the sixth week tests were given Thursday and Friday but due to the tournament they were not all given which necessitate the resuming of them this week.

Work has been started on the senior play which is entitled "Short Thirty-Six" which is a three-act comedy.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Craddock and family moved last week to the Bert Rouse farm near Burlington. They formerly lived near the Harvest Home grounds.

FORTY YEARS AGO

BURLINGTON

The weather king ought to permit a good crop of apples this year.

Judge Baker made quite a number of settlements with road overseers Monday.

There is a proposition on foot to organize a stock company for building a good hotel in Burlington.

The farmers have been taking advantage of the favorable weather this winter and have their work farther advanced than it was this time last year.

Mr. Jacob Tanner, superintendent of the Hebron Sunday School, has received from the Lutheran Publication Society, of Philadelphia 150 volumes for Hebron Sunday School Library.

A large number of hands were engaged Saturday morning, repairing the street crossing between the postoffice and the Mercantile Co.'s store. James Hogan and son, Edward did the work.

Dr. F. R. McClanahan will be in Petersburg the first and third Saturdays in each month at the Light-foot Hotel.

While hauling logs one day last week, Hubert, son of T. C. S. Ryle, of East Bend, had one of his legs badly mangled below the knee by a log rolling over him. Strange to say he received no other injuries. The doctor reports him doing very well under the circumstances.

The baby of Mrs. Maggie Wilson, at the Boone Hotel, swallowed a safety pin Saturday evening. The mother was terribly frightened, supposing the pin to be open, owing to the screams and gagging of the child. It was not long however, until the baby was suffering no inconvenience on account of the indigestible morsel and now appears to be all right.

PERSONAL MENTION

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. Years before, at the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for ranching and cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christened Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side.

CHAPTER III—Continued

Rance Kershaw's not too stable heart leaped in triumph. "Keep your check," he ordered harshly, "and I'll keep my water."

Lorraine Kershaw came out of the house. Straight down the little gravel walk she came to the gate. Nate Tichenor noticed how straight she walked; noticed, too, that she had been weeping recently. She was a strikingly pretty girl; her hair was jet-black and shiny; her eyes large and dark and lustrous; her skin a pale ivory with a faint rose radiance seeping up through it.

"The Hensley apology is accepted," she cried in a clear ringing voice. "And you may keep your check. That fence was charged off to depreciation before you and I were born. Please give our compliments to your mother and your aunts and say that the Kershaws will be very pleased to see that hereafter the Bar H ranch gets all the water the Circle K can give it."

"They won't, either," old Rance shouted.

"Pay no attention to father," the girl admonished, in a tone meant for young Tichenor's ears alone. "He can't help holding his ancient grudge. But the Bar H shall have the water. I give you my word of honor it shall. This morning at eleven o'clock I became the foreman of the Circle K, and I'll keep them the floodgates closed at our diversion dam and turn the water into our irrigation ditches when we're done with it. Instead of diverting it back into Eden Valley creek. Run along now, Nate Tichenor, and may God bless you and protect you and bring you safe back to your mother in Eden Valley."

He stared at her. And then he blinked because the tears of emotion were in his boy's eyes. He held out his hand across the gate. "Good-by, Lorry Kershaw," he said with difficulty. "I thank you with all my heart. You're mighty sweet."

She accepted his hand, to the great scandal of her father; she stood at the gate and watched him jog away down the valley, sitting very straight in his carved and silver-mounted stock saddle.

"Come, come, old settler," she said. "It's time to cease hurling maledictions and start praying. And I promised him the water."

He was silent at that. Then: "Well, I suppose it won't hurt us to let 'em have it." He must have thought then of his own gallant stripping son. "Just as well to take things easy now, Lorry. Even if they both come back they'll never shoot each other. If that Tichenor pup's a fair sample, the Hensley clan ain't run to seed in this generation."

Nate Tichenor's farewell sentence came back to her. She patted her father's cheek. "You're mighty sweet," she said.

Nathan Tichenor had come back to Eden Valley. He arrived in a glittering limousine, driven by a liveried chauffeur, beside whom sat a dignified middle-aged individual any Forlorn Valleyite would have accepted as a banker or railroad president but who was in reality Nathan Tichenor's English valet.

Arrived in the grassy farmyard of the deserted Bar H headquarters, Tichenor alighted.

"Well, kids, this is where I was born and raised," Nate Tichenor spoke finally.

The house reeked of that indescribable odor inseparable from closed and deserted houses, but a cursory inventory satisfied Tichenor that the contents had not been molested.

"Bring in the meats and groceries I purchased in Gold Run, Darby," he ordered the chauffeur. "There should be firewood in the woodshed. Start a fire in that fireplace. Joseph (to the valet), get busy and organize our housekeeping, while I take a run up the valley to call on a neighbor."

When Nate returned from his visit up the valley, Joseph had the house swept and aired, beds made, and a luncheon in preparation. Tichenor was prowling around the venerable home of his ancestors, reviving old memories, when upon his ears impinged the steady, insistent tooting of an automobile siren. "Somebody up on the valley road wants something," he decided.

Tichenor glanced out the window and saw an automobile with two persons in it halted on the main road just outside the entrance to the Bar H headquarters.

"They must want me," he decided. "Now, how do they know I'm here?" He pondered. "Ah, yes. Smoke is rising from my chimney. Kershaws, I wonder? Must be the Kershaws or they'd drive in."

He took a heavy pistol from his bag, fitted it into a shoulder holster, put on his coat to conceal the weapon, went to the garage, backed his car out and whirled away up the ranch road to the gate, where he alighted and lifted his hat to Lorry Kershaw.

"I'm Lorraine Kershaw, Mr. Tichenor, and I am in trouble. My father has just died."

"Where?"

"Here, beside me—against my shoulder. He's so heavy and limp—I can't handle him—can't manage to drive."

Nate Tichenor opened the gate, came around to the side of her car warily, for he suspected a trap, stepped up in the running board and looked into Ranceford Kershaw's face, over which the sickly pallor of death was already spreading. He reached for the old man's pulse.

"Yes, he's dead, Miss Kershaw," he announced. "What do you want to do? Take him back into Valley Center or home?"

"Home," she replied brokenly. He stepped into the tonneau, lifted the dead man back over the seat and laid him gently down on the tonneau seat. "Drive slowly and I'll follow in my car," he said.

He alighted and stood beside her. "I'm very sorry," he said. "I regret that he has passed away before I had an opportunity to talk with him. I was up at your ranch-house this morning, but there was nobody home."

"You—you called—on us! Why?"

"To tell you and your father I was coming back to Eden Valley—to stay—and to suggest that we become neighbors—at last. I'm tired being an enemy. It's a job I never relished."

"Is that why you didn't demand additional security when father renewed his note to you, even though you knew the value of the cattle originally mortgaged had shrunk more than half?"

He nodded.

"I wish—I wish—we'd known. He thought—when he saw the smoke coming from your chimney—he thought—"

"He thought I'd turned up at last to smash him! Poor man! I've been dilatory. But is that any reason why we shouldn't shake hands, Miss Lorraine?"

She took his proffered hand in both of hers and now she was no longer brave. "Oh, Nate Tichenor," she sobbed, "I'm alone—alone—alone!"

"No, you're not," he reminded her. "But have your little crying spell all out, just the same."

He stepped upon the running board, put his arm around her shoulder and drew her head over to him. "Weep on the breast of a friend," he urged. "Probably it's a privilege you've never enjoyed before."

While she sobbed against him he cautiously unbuckled the shoulder holster with the pistol in it, slipped it down under the tail of his coat and tossed it across the road into the grass.

CHAPTER IV

While Fate was busy staging a long-drawn tragedy in Eden Valley, Forlorn Valley had not been overlooked by the land-hungry. By 1890 practically every acre had been homesteaded; the district developed into a dry farming section and later into "mixed" farming.

Gold Run was the county seat, and in the heart of Forlorn Valley a settlement known as Valley Center had gradually developed into a village of about five hundred inhabitants. The entire valley was stagnant and a drab until a large hydroelectric company erected its steel pyramids across the valley. Thereupon an enterprising farmer had a deep well drilled on his ranch and developed a surprising flow of water which rose almost to the surface; with a cheap centrifugal pump driven by a ten-horse power electric motor he was enabled to irrigate his quarter-section farm, seemingly without appreciable effect on the water level.

Almost at once Forlorn Valley was the victim of a boom. Gradually the brown lands became checkerboarded with vivid green patches, as the planting of alfalfa developed. Orchards were planted; the raising of hogs and cattle for beef and dairying increased; an adventurer from nowhere appeared and laid out a subdivision of the "thriving city" of Valley Center.

A former Middle West bank clerk, Silas Babson, who had inherited an Iowa farm from his parents and sold it for seventy-five thousand dollars, came to Valley Center and started a state bank. The Bank of Valley Center was successful from the start.

Babson was a son of the soil; thrifty, shrewd, rapacious, competent. From banking he reached out and interested himself in such local enterprises as creameries, a lumber yard, the largest local garage with the agency for a popular cheap automobile and pumps; he sold insurance of all kinds.

Only once had Babson lost his perspective on values and that was during the World war, and for this it would seem he was not to be blamed, since all his fellow countrymen lost their simultaneously. The rapid advance in the price of farm commodities had brought the usual boom of prosperity to Forlorn Valley. The bank sharing in the general and unusual prosperity, presently had a glut of money on deposit and, since banks exist by loaning the funds deposited with them, Babson, with so much money on hand, and faced with the problem of making that money pay dividends, let down his guard, so to speak, and loaned money on farm mortgages.

The post-war deflation period arrived and the values of farms and farm products dropped almost overnight below the pre-war marks. He contemplated the bank's unsecured notes and frozen assets in the shape of mortgages on farms for 80 per cent of their present value and that value, exceedingly doubtful one, Babson had a very clear vision of hard times in the immediate offing.

If he foreclosed his mortgages he would have the farms on his hands—likewise their taxes and the loss of interest.

For the succeeding four years Mr. Babson's commercial progress was tinged with caution. Then the pendulum commenced to swing the other way very slowly, and one day a brilliant thought leaped into his harried brain.

He decided to transfer his financial burdens to the capable hands of the rightful receiver of all gold bricks, to wit, the government. From the joint land stock banks established by the government to aid the stricken farmers and stock raisers he would induce his debtors to borrow on mortgage, at 5 1/2 per cent, sufficient funds to pay off the existing mortgages at 8 per cent held by the Bank of Valley Center. In order to sweeten the deal Mr. Babson even considered waiving the accumulated and unpaid interest for a couple of years. All he wanted back was the principal of his foolish loans, for with that in his vaults he knew his bank would be quite safe.

Promptly he bulldozed a farmer into making application for such a loan, and with commendable celerity a government farm appraiser came up from San Francisco to inspect the proffered collateral. It required something less than thirty seconds for this individual to make his appraisal and decision.

"The government," he said, "will not consider loaning money on California farms which are listed as dry-farming lands."

"But these lands are irrigated," Mr. Babson reminded him.

"Yes, so I observe, but from deep wells. But as more and more wells are bored and the farming in this valley tends more and more toward intensive cropping, thus requiring more and more water for irrigation, the water levels will recede and the cost of pumping the water to the surface will increase proportionately with the lift until a point will be reached where the water will be tainted with red ink. Hence, such lands as these are listed as dry-farming lands and constitute a loan risk the government is unwilling to assume. It will loan only on lands that are surface irrigated and with an assured and continuous source of water supply."

"So I've loaned money on dry farms because I was jackass enough to consider them irrigated farms," Babson almost moaned.

He made a survey of the water situation and discovered to his horror that the water levels were indeed receding.

"Creeping paralysis! That's what it is," he soliloquized. "And the Bank of Valley Center is the richest patient and will have to pay the heaviest bill for medical attention."

But the old ability to scheme his way out of a tight hole did not desert him. He reduced his situation to its lowest common divisor. If surface irrigation, from a never-failing and ample source of water supply, could be brought to the lands of Forlorn Valley, then Forlorn Valley lands would be classed by the government as irrigated lands, whose value would immediately return to the old wartime figure. And the federal farm loan banks would then have no hesitancy in loaning up to 80 per cent of the appraised value.

Therefore, the thing to do was to secure surface irrigation for Forlorn Valley.

"Eden Valley creek," Babson cried aloud. "A dam in that gorge in the lower end of Eden Valley, kept perennially at a high level by the flood waters of Eden Valley creek and led through a tunnel or a canal cut through the low hills on the northern rim and down into Forlorn Valley, will do the trick."

The next problem was that of acquiring the water, but this Babson did not regard as a difficult one. He had but to acquire the dam site from young Nathan Tichenor, sole owner of the Bar H Land and Cattle company. The land which would be inundated by the lake which would be formed when the dam should be built was next to worthless; Babson decided the Bar H Land and Cattle company would be delighted to get rid of it at a price not exceeding ten dollars an acre, although as grazing land it was not worth that. There were hydro electric possibilities inherent in the enterprise that would be worth millions alone. He must approach this delicate matter cautiously.

Tichenor had been an absentee landlord ever since leasing the Bar H ranch to Rance Kershaw. That argued he would scarcely be interested in returning to Eden Valley again and engaging in the cattle business.

Rance Kershaw was a financial wreck and could not possibly continue his lease of the Bar H, and it would be several years, doubtless, before a new tenant could be found for it. Yes, Nate Tichenor would sell the Bar H at a fair price—exorbitant, considering the present status of the cattle industry—rather than hang on to a frozen asset and pay taxes on it.

Mr. Babson decided instantly to buy the Bar H, if he had to pawn his wife's piano to aid in raising the money for the enterprise. With the title to the ranch vested in him—no, a dummy, for Babson must not appear in the deal—it would be a simple matter to sell the dam and lake sites to the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district for a cash consideration that would leave him the remainder of the ranch without cost!

He considered the Kershaw ranch and decided he would not bother to acquire that, even if he had the money to buy it cheap. It was worth not a penny less than a million dollars, but the Savings Bank of San Francisco held a two hundred and fifty thousand dollar first mortgage on it, the mortgage was due, Rance Kershaw (Babson knew) could not meet it, Babson doubted if he could refund it in these trying times, and hence, it would be precluded. Well, he might pick it up for the amount of the mortgage at the sheriff's sale. He did not require the Kershaw ranch for the sake of its water rights, but in order to control the water it was an absolute necessity for him to acquire the Bar H. Once the water had flowed down through the Kershaw ranch the Kershaws had no further interest in it; but it had to be impounded on the Bar H before it escaped off into the bad lands to the east and was lost.

Bows Made Features of Season's Purse and Muff

Bows and muffs are both featured this season in unusual models and styles. For example, hand bags have bows for ornaments, purses are combined with muffs, or muffs have bows as trimming. Occasionally, all three features are found in a single accessory, the muff purse or the purse muff, whichever you prefer to call it. In the previous vogue of muffs, some years ago, purses were not infrequently let into muffs in a convenient way. No fumbling about in a bag or pocket was necessary to produce the purse, for it was on the outside of the muff, generally so well hidden in the fur that it was scarcely discernible. In the present combination the purse is sometimes the chief item, with finger-tip muff portions intriguingly introduced. The convenience is as satisfying as formerly.

Favorite materials for purses with bows, and muffs, are satin, silk, velvet, soft suede, or its imitation in fabric-suede. It is easy to see why these are chosen, since the materials are so soft and flexible that they lend themselves admirably to gathers and folds of bows. It is of interest to the home worker to know of these materials, since she can fashion her own purse in one of these latest models if she so chooses.

A length of one of these textiles six inches in width or more can be interlined, and then lined with satin, and have little inside pockets made of gathered or flat satin sewed to lining. The strip is then folded twice. The outside fold is shorter than the other two parts, and forms the flap. The sides of the folded edges beneath are sewed together for the bag portion of the envelope purse. It is advisable to fit the outside flap with snap fasteners for security.

It is the trimming of the bag which supplies the novel feature. On the flap is sewed as smart a bow of the material as the worker can fashion. Or she can make the color of the bag in heavy ribbon and get the sales person at the ribbon counter to make the bow, which the woman can herself, sew to the flap.

A bag that is minus a bow can be made in latest style by sewing a bow on the outside. It is not always that by such a slight addition a last year's bag can be brought up to the latest vogue.

Money and Time Needed to Duplicate Pyramid

An interesting study by New York architects has developed the fact that it would cost $150,000,000 and require five years to build a facsimile of the great Egyptian pyramid of Gizeh at this time in Central park, New York. The estimate is based upon erecting the structure of stone and using all modern equipment now available. The estimate continues to state that 2,500,000 man hours of labor would be involved in completing the task with modern machinery. It is estimated that 100,000 workers toiled twenty years in building the original. One of the architects, who studied the pyramid problem quite seriously, has made a perspective drawing showing such a pyramid in Central park. His drawing, made to scale, shows the tip of the pyramid on the same elevation as the forty-second floor of the R. C. A. building.

MEDICAL ADVICE

If you want to
... relieve constipation gently and safely
... take the exact dose suited to your need
... avoid danger of bowel strain
—use a liquid laxative

Can constipation be safely relieved? "Yes," say medical men. "Yes!" declare thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not apt to cure your constipation with salts, pills and tablets, or any habit-forming cathartic. But you can safely relieve this condition just by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

Why Hospitals use a liquid laxative

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit your individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will it irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The unwise use of strong cathartics may often do more harm than good. In buying any laxative, read the label. If it contains a doubtful drug, don't take it. If you don't know what is in it, don't chance it. The contents of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin state plainly on the label: fresh herbs, pure pepsin, active senna.

Its very taste tells you Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. Drug stores have it, ready for use, in big bottles.

THE TEST:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels," but strong cathartics!

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used.

Ice Skating Possible on Small Lake in Africa, Ten Miles From Equator

There's a little lake in Africa, ten miles south of the equator, which a representative of the American Museum of Natural History always thinks of as "the Skating Pond" because, strange as it may seem, men have actually skated upon its frozen surface.

In his search for African birds to add to the museum's collections he climbed Mount Kenya on the slopes of which the "Skating Pond" lies.

At the end of our third day's climb, the scientist writes in Natural History Magazine of the American Museum of Natural History, our camp was a miserable one. Dead tree trunks were the only fuel, and they were as full of water as sponges. Our cook worked an hour and a half, and used two gallons of kerosene to get a fire started. The temperature that night dropped to 42.5 degrees.

The next morning we climbed about 1,000 feet up a steep slope of earth and small boulders known as the Scree. The word is from the Icelandic—an appropriate derivation, it seems to me. Finally we reached the second shelter hut close to the "Skating Pond" at the margin of the Lewis glacier. Inside lay ice axes and ropes, suggestive of the repeated attempts to scale the highest peak, Batian, which had only once been conquered. The Lewis glacier, its rounding surface now separating us from the base of the two peaks, Batian and Nelon, is the largest ice field on Kenya, and is two miles long. We were able to look across the dark base of the peaks, and sometimes could make out the snow-filled couloir that had served as a way upward, but nothing more. Since nine that morning the rest had been completely hidden in fog. The temperature at one o'clock was 41 degrees. Water boiled at 183.8 degrees.

THE PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 13:31-32.

GOLDEN TEXT—Of the increase of his government and peace, there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The seal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.—Isaiah 9:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Story Jesus Told.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Story Picture of the Kingdom's Success.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Our Religion Means to Us.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Pictures of the Kingdom.

In this chapter of Matthew the "mysteries" of the kingdom are unfolded (v. 11). By "mystery" in the Scriptures is meant truth undecipherable by human reason, made known by revelation. The teaching set forth in these parables sets forth the admixture of moral and spiritual interests which characterize the period between Christ's rejection and his triumphant kingdom.

1. The Mustard Seed (vv. 31, 32).
1. Its unimportant beginning (v. 31). It begins as the least of all seeds. Not only was Christ, the king, of humble parentage, but his disciples were unlettered fishermen.
2. Its vigorous growth (v. 32). Though small at its inception, the work inaugurated by Christ, has become wide in extent and mighty in power.
3. Its lodging capacity (v. 32). The birds which find lodgment in the tree represent predatory individuals who have found shelter in the church but are not part of it. The birds which lodge in the branches are the "fowls" which devoured the seed that fell by the wayside (v. 4).

II. The Leavened Meal (v. 33).
1. The meal. Meal in the Scriptures means something nutritious and wholesome. Examples of its character and use are found in Gen. 18:6; Kings 4:22; II Kings 4:41. Also it was used in one of the sweetest offerings which typified Jesus Christ (Lev. 2:13 R. V.).

2. The woman. The woman is the administrator of the meal. Her responsibility is to take the bread provided by the head of the home and prepare and distribute it to the children. Observe:

a. Her act. She hid the leaven in the meal.
b. Its issue. It leavened the meal. The meal was not turned into leaven but was affected by the leaven.
3. The leaven. In the Scripture leaven is invariably a type of evil (Exod. 12:15; Matt. 16:6; 1 Cor. 5:6-8; Gal. 5:9). The teaching of this parable, therefore, is that in this age the truth of God and the wholesome institutions established by God would be corrupted by error, worldliness, and unbelief. The woman representing the administrator of affairs in the world would introduce false doctrine and thus corrupt the children's bread.

III. The Hidden Treasure (v. 44).

1. The field (v. 38). Christ's own interpretation makes this to be the world.

2. The treasure. This doubtless means Israel, the chosen people (Ps. 135:4; Deut. 7:6-8).

3. The purchaser. This represents Jesus Christ (John 3:16).

4. The purchase price (1 Pet. 1:18, 19). This was the precious blood of Jesus Christ, God's beloved Son.

IV. The Merchantman Seeking Goodly Pearls (vv. 45, 46).

1. The merchantman is Christ (Luke 19:10). The Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost.

2. The purchase price (Phil. 2:6-8). Christ impoverished himself in order to purchase the pearl of great price.

3. The pearl of great price (Col. 1:18). This is not Jesus Christ but the Church purchased by his blood.

4. The Dragnet (v. 47-50).

1. The sea. Sea in the Scripture denotes people and multitudes (Dan. 7:3; Rev. 17:15).

2. The dragnet cast into the sea (v. 47). This means the sowing of the Word by the Son of Man (v. 37).

3. The dragnet drawn to shore when full (v. 48). When God's purpose is made full concerning the present age, an account will be made.

4. The separation (vv. 48, 49). This separation is made by the angels, and will take place at the end of the age.

5. The destiny (vv. 49-50). The angels, God's ministers, shall separate the wicked from among the just and shall cast them into the furnace of fire where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. The good shall be not aside for the pleasure and service of the Lord.

Love One Another

St. John says: "Brethren, let us love one another, for love is of God." Matthew Arnold says a beautiful thing on the same matter, but from a different angle. "Brethren," he says, in effect, "let us love one another, for we have each other for such a short time."

Liberty

The sweetest word in the language, next to love, is liberty. God and his angels respect the perfect freedom of man.

Fried Cakes of Many Kinds

Appellations Differ in Various Parts of the Country, but All Are Delicious and Healthful if Prepared With Due Care.

Crullers, doughnuts, fried cakes! Which? There is a great difference in opinion. The last time I wrote an article on this subject a New Yorker of an old Knickerbocker family took issue with me upon my tentative definitions. If you have been in various parts of this country you know that no consistent term is used to describe these crisp brown cakes which are alike in at least this one particular—they have all been fried in deep fat. One authoritative cook book says that the word "cruller" comes from a Dutch word meaning that which curls or twists. "Doughnut" is an English word used to describe a nut or a ball. We all know that crullers may be balls, rings or twists, and that doughnuts may be any of these pulled off in long thin strips, fried quickly, sprinkled with sugar and served hot. This used to be the custom in many households when bread was commonly made at home. These doughnuts must, of course, be eaten at once and will not keep fresh long. It is possible to reheat raised doughnuts in a paper bag in the oven. They should be turned out on soft paper so that the extra fat may be absorbed. Remember that all doughnuts should be turned out on soft paper as soon as they are taken from the hot fat. Remember also that the fat must be hot, but not too hot, about 375 degrees Fahrenheit. A piece of bread will brown in 30 seconds in fat at this temperature. After frying each "batch" let the fat heat a moment before starting another. If the fat is too cool it will be absorbed during the cooking.

In my own experience the various terms were applied as follows: The doughnuts which were made regularly to fill the crock in the pantry were rings. The crullers, which were made on special occasions from a richer and more expensive mixture, were finger shaped and sometimes tiny balls. The raised doughnuts which were made occasionally were twists and balls. We all preferred the twists, which we call d birds.

A recent letter from a correspondent asks for a recipe for "greaseless doughnuts" such as are turned out by the modern doughnut machines. I am afraid that I cannot guarantee a recipe to produce greaseless doughnuts. The machines in use now are equipped with instruments for carefully regulating temperatures in cooking. The ingredients for the mixture are actually weighed. Even the most careful cook, measuring as accurately as possible, cannot get the consistent quantities which weighing insures. There is one point about which I can advise you, however, and that is, scant your shortening. Do not add just a little extra fat with the idea that your doughnuts will be improved. A doughnut containing too much fat will crack and allow hot grease to be absorbed during the frying.

Raised doughnuts are made from a yeast dough which is quite like Danish pastry.

Crullers.

¾ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
Yolks 2 eggs
Whites 2 eggs
4 cups flour
2 teaspoons grated nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup milk
4 teaspoons baking powder.

Cream the shortening, add sugar gradually, yolks of eggs well beaten and whites beaten stiff. Mix flour, nutmeg, cinnamon and baking powder; add alternately with milk to first mixture, roll thin and cut in pieces three inches long by two inches wide; make three or four cuts crosswise. Fry in deep fat, 375 degrees Fahrenheit, and drain on brown paper.

Cigarette Tax Change Would Help Farmers, Workers, Retailers and Government, An Expert Explains

By W. R. KELLEY
As told to Frank Wilder

More than fifty years ago, when tobacco growing in central Kentucky was in the experimental stage, Ben L. Kelley of Garrard County, began its culture with a view to producing a finer smoking tobacco.

To this work he gave his full attention and after years of patient labor and study succeeded—by applying the principles of cross breeding successfully used by the famed Luther Burbank—in producing what is known everywhere among burly men as "Kelley Tobacco."

Today, W. R. Kelley is now the head of the firm of B. L. Kelley & Sons, Ltd., grown up in the business, knows its many angles intimately, and has shared with burly growers their fat and lean years for decades.

Mr. Kelley has joined officials of the American Tobacco Company, the Tennessee Farm Bureau Federation and the Kentucky Farm Bureau in endorsing the plea of southern tobacco farmers to Congress to reduce the present federal tax on cigarettes to a graduated rate based on the retail price of the package.

In this statement Mr. Kelley tells why he favors this change which is held so important to the prosperity of the tobacco growing and cigarette making industries.

EDITOR.

Stating the Case

Why do I favor a federal graduated tax on cigarettes, proportioned to the price of the package, in place of the present flat-rate of 6 cents a package regardless of the price of the package?

Because it will do much to stabilize the market for the cigarette tobacco grower and assure him a much better average price for his crop than he has been able to get for a number of years past.

Because it will help much to maintain or increase the government's revenues derived from cigarette taxes at a time when the government must have the greatest tax revenues with the least possible hardship on the mass of the people.

Because it will enable the manufacturers of the so-called 10-cent cigarettes to continue making this quality of product on an increasing scale, thus providing steady employment for additional thousands of tobacco factory workers at fair wages.

Because it will provide a healthy competition among the various manufacturers, with benefits to all concerned—manufacturer, retail dealer, farmer, government, smoker and worker—and harm to nobody.

Let us look at the proposition in detail.

Our company has been in business more than fifty years, and growing up with it I have had an unusual opportunity to study the tobacco industry from all viewpoints.

Effect of Taxes

I have long since learned that there are very few—if any—taxes which do not affect the farmer in some way, for he is both a primary producer and a consumer. So at this time of agricultural distress, the proposed adjustment of the cigarette tax is of great importance to him.

The manufacturers of 10-cent cigarettes are having their worries, too. They never have made much profit because there isn't much room for profit when you sell a cigarette at 10 cents. But their costs have been increasing and they say the margin of profit is so small it may be impossible for them to continue to make 10-cent cigarettes unless one thing happens.

That one thing is this—tax adjustment. As you know the federal tax on all kinds of cigarettes amounts to 6 cents a package. It doesn't matter how much cigarettes sell for, the tax is the same.

So the manufacturers of 10-cent cigarettes have asked Congress to reduce the tax on that price smoke by three-fifths of a cent; to leave the tax on 15-cent cigarettes at 6 cents and to raise the tax on more expensive cigarettes by three-fifths of a cent.

The Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives has studied the proposal for several weeks and a special hearing will soon be given by a sub-committee, of which Representative Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky is chairman.

Importance To Growers

It would be hard to over-estimate the importance of the 10-cent cigarette to the tobacco grower. It is the mainstay of the grower's income. It is the only product of the grower that is sold in large quantities. It is the only product of the grower that is sold in large quantities. It is the only product of the grower that is sold in large quantities.

"It was in 1931 that the price of burley dropped from 15.50 cents to 8.60 cents. Cigarette consumption had been decreasing and the farmer was getting the worst of the deal. To make matters worse, there was no competition between the buyers of the tobacco market.

The next year the 10-cent cigarette came along. It was just what the poor man needed and cigarette consumption began to increase again.

But for these independent makers of low-price cigarettes put some competition in to the loose leaf market. Of course farmers are 'getting what they should for their tobacco now, but it is hard to tell what might have happened if the 10-cent cigarette hadn't been put on the market.

As I understand it, the makers of this sort of cigarette, have been able to sell the cigarette at such a low price because they don't go in for extravagant, ballyhoo advertising, because they don't use so much expensive foreign tobacco as is used in the more expensive cigarettes and because they are satisfied with a modest profit.

Before the big manufacturers had to cut prices to meet competition of the ten-centers, it is estimated they were making 100 per cent gross profit on the cost of their products before tax.

Invisible Profits

The increased costs of labor under the N. R. A., increased costs of materials and equipment and the processing tax have cut profits on 10-cent cigarettes down to less than two mills a package.

In business survival depends entirely on profits, and the manufacturers of 10-cent cigarettes say that the graduated tax is absolutely necessary to their continued operation on the present basis.

The thing they are asking Congress to do seems reasonable enough. The tax on cigars is in proportion to the selling price. Practically all taxes are graduated in this way.

The reason there has not been a graduated tax on cigarettes is that there never was any need for one until the 10-cent cigarettes were put on the market. Practically all cigarettes sold at 15 cents a package, or higher.

Before the World War, the cigarette tax was only $1.25 a thousand. In 1917 it was raised to $2.05 and in 1919 to $3.00, or 6 cents a package. It never has been changed since then.

Probably there is no commodity in general use that is taxed so heavily. The smoker pays about $21 a year in cigarette taxes to the government.

But Congress hasn't been asked to make a reduction in the revenues from cigarette tax. The proposal is only for an adjustment to do away with the present unfair and discriminating tax on these low-priced cigarettes.

Disappearance of the 10-cent cigarette would permit the big manufacturers to discontinue their price cutting. Smokers would start using a tobacco which is taxed only 19 cents a pound in comparison with the 10-cent cigarette which is taxed 19 cents a pound.

The farmers of our part of the 10-cent cigarette on the market in suspension undoubtedly will be able to increase as much as the previous years. This move would be a great help for the government and for the farmers.

An interesting element which is ordinarily considered, is that one who spends the manufacturers of 10-cent cigarettes can sell their cigarettes at such a low price that they use much less Turkish and other costly imported tobaccos than are used in more expensive cigarettes.

This imported tobacco doesn't yield any profit to the American farmer. It is the wide use of American tobacco that helps agriculture and, incidentally, the 10-cent cigarette manufacturers, so far as I know, have been paying just about as much to the farmer for his tobacco as anyone else and they will continue to. They say the farmer receives substantially the same amount of the consumer's dollar through the 10-cent cigarette as he does through the 15-cent cigarette.

Approximately 40,000 farmers and hundreds of thousands of laborers in the United States are engaged in growing tobacco. Their interests are of primary importance.

The problem of the 10-cent cigarette is the poor man's problem. The poor man produces the tobacco and the poor man smokes the 10-cent cigarette.

Huge Saving to Smokers

By providing a low-priced high quality cigarette and by forcing the big manufacturers to keep their prices down, it is estimated that the independent manufacturers have saved smokers as much as $150,000,000 a year.

Labor has benefited from the 10-cent cigarette also. The biggest factories in which these cigarettes are produced are union plants. That is more than can be said for certain of the larger factories.

E. Lewis Evans, president of the Tobacco Workers International Union, recently said that unless the cigarette tax is graduated thousands of factory workers will lose their jobs and that farmers will lose the market for a large proportion of their tobacco crop.

When you consider it from the standpoint of the farmer, the worker, the smoker and the manufacturer, the request for revision of the tax is fair.

This proposal for an equitable graduated tax has received the approval of the American Farm Bureau Federation and the Kentucky and Tennessee federations without reservations.

When this question comes before our representatives in Congress for a final decision they must be aware of the fact that revision of the cigarette tax is a matter of great public interest and national importance.

No farmer will make a mistake in writing to his Congressman and urging a favorable vote on the tax revision plea. Will you do it—and do it now?

RABBIT HASHINGS

BY NOEL WALTON

Poor Hasher's Almanac:

Observations cute and arcane, about the beautiful month of March 'A. D. 1934:

1. Thursday—Sunrise 6:38; weather forecast for Friday, fair, cloudy, rain, snow and warmer. Continued cold.

2. Friday—Sun out last night (did not rise) weather forecast: Weather.

3. Saturday—Laws passed on liquor stills in 1791, causing Whiskey rebellion; whiskey and the lack of it having made many more rebellious ever since.

4. Sunday—Anniv. of inauguration day. Prosperity enters roundhouse 1933.

5. Monday—Wash day. Mr. H. Hoover has happy day 1933. Weather: Rainy if it ain't fair.

6. Tuesday—Sunrise 6:30; Sunset (all day). Weather forecast for Wednesday, fair and cloudy.

7. Wednesday—March sheds its sheep's clothing 1933; Boone County Recorder goes to press 1934 and a score of its Recorders wait to see what Hasher says about 'em.

More next week—now for the news.

First a little "go'n' over," for that kind copyists and cull of correspondents, Mrs. S. of L. G. Strike up the band. He remarks last week that he saw us feeding our girl friend half of a sandwich to save buying two. Well, he's all wet. It was his girl friend and she looked so sad and hungry when I passed here I couldn't refuse her the bite she asked for. She said she had been hungry all evening and could get him to even smell the mustard without him claimin' he was sick.

You never meet Lady Luck when you're courtin' trouble.

The lots of people S. O. S. the doctor, if any other part of 'em goes haywire. They don't seem to worry at all when their brains are missin' on all six.

Love is responsible for some queer marriages and some perfectly awful songs.

To proceed, we have a word or two for our friend and pal (if you know what I mean) that sterling wit and untarnished memory that prodigy of plus fours, J. W. (Oswald) Barefax. Time marches on.

As a survey of the past week's effort shows, Esq. Barefax is at last approaching his mental level. We were concerned for a while, but things seem to be settling themselves, so take it away!

And the big long boy from over on Civet Canyon is beyond all shadow of doubt enamored of the very pleasant little gal they call Dit, (she of the dusky mien) leaving another little gal of way over, all alone with her hydrogen peroxide.

We wish to publicly call that Hamiltonian would be Winchell.

Just as we go to press (our pants) we receive word of the wedding of Miss Marie Kirtley of E. Bend and Mr. Orville Hensley, of Warsaw. Rumors are that the happy couple will take up residence in East Bend shortly. Our congratulations and we're lookin' for cigars.

And that my friends is that.

The telephone business seems to have attained its end. Yowsah!

Well now Ann, while you were breakin' out with measles your heart's honey is just simply breakin' out with gill friends.

We didn't know it, but Waterloo Walter is a heavy correspondent and caller down past the sharp turn below Lick Creek and Cille is in it too somewhere.

They tell me that Orville has marryin' ideas over the hill.

Well, time cuts us short so we'll hafta pass on. Keep your heads down and we'll say—Bottoms up. Yours you Winous Winchells.

—Hasher.

CARD OF THANKS

Through the columns of the Recorder we wish to extend our sincere thanks to all neighbors and friends who were so considerate during the illness and death of our beloved grandmother, Mrs. Sarah E. Carpenter. We wish especially to thank the undertaker, Mr. C. Scott Chambers and Grubbs and the minister Rev. Don Walker, of Petersburg and Rev. E. E. Walker of Burlington, all of whom officiated so capably and so considerately.

Mrs. Charles Maxwell and Family

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

We feel that our school should be extremely proud of the Tomcats and the Kittens for their splendid showing in the 37th district basketball tournament held at Walton last Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The Kittens won the trophy given to runners-up for girls, and the Tomcats won the Sportsmanship trophy of which they are equally as proud. Although the Tomcats didn't go as far as the Kittens they played ideal basketball and we repeat our deep appreciation of our teams' work.

C. G. Kelly, teacher of the 7th and 8th grades, was absent Monday due to illness. Mr. Kelly states that this was the first day he has missed during his long teaching experience. We express our regrets at his illness and were very glad to see him back Tuesday.

Since basket ball season has closed and the hearts of students crave some form of athletics, teams have been selected so that everyone who wants to participate may have an opportunity to do so. We are looking forward to some interesting basket ball games in future play periods.

The Girl Reserves are planning to have a Mother and Daughter banquet on Friday night of this week. We hope that all the members and mothers can be present as this is one of our most enjoyable activities of the year.

The fifth grade welcomes Lorain Meyer from Park Hills and Bill Craddock from Hebron is welcomed to the sixth grade. The fifth grade also regrets the loss of Jeanetta Rouse, who has moved to another community.

The fifth and sixth grades will conduct chapel exercises Friday afternoon.

Miss Margaret Walton, daughter of deputy sheriff Frank M. Walton and wife, was the attractive week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Conrad, at Walton.

The regular monthly meeting of the Boone County Mutual Insurance Company was held Monday of this week.

State Deputy Game Warden Edwin M. Johnson and Chief of Police Roy Dickerson, of Walton, were in town on business Tuesday morning.

Elmer Goodridge, of Erlanger, was a Burlington visitor Tuesday morning.

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY THURSDAY, MARCH 15, 1934

NUMBER 7

EIGHT FARMERS

COMPOSE FIRST TO SIGN AAA CORN-HOG PRODUCTION CONTRACTS IN BOONE COUNTY—RATE OF SIGN-UP TO BE COMPLETED SATURDAY, MARCH 17

The Boone county AAA Corn-Hog sign-up campaign started the past week. The first eight farmers to sign contracts were H. M. Holladay, L. C. Acra, Karl Rouse, Wilford Rouse, J. W. Sebre, M. M. Lucas, Owen Allen, and G. D. Hoffman. The rate of the sign-up will be completed on Saturday, March 17th.

Community sign-up days will immediately follow the educational meetings. Farmers who have not already signed up may come into these local sign-up days. It is important to fill in the preliminary work sheet on the number of hogs raised and acres of crop land on their farm before the sign-up days as this will be of great assistance at the time of the signing of the contract. All corn hog raisers should fill out this preliminary work sheet and turn into the County Agent's office or campaign committeeman whether they expect to sign a contract or not as, will it be necessary to make this survey of all non-signers as same as signers.

Good attendance and much interest is being shown by farmers in the educational meetings. First estimates were that there would likely be only around 100 signers in the county but this has been raised to from 300 to 400 who will cooperate and benefit from this program.

Farmers are more anxious to sign-up when they know the benefits they are to receive. One farmer in a meeting at Burlington on last Saturday who had been raising an average the past two years of 40 acres of corn and 33 hogs for market will receive $120.00 in hog payments from $96.00 to $144.00 in corn payments making a total of $264. The benefit payments in many cases will more than pay the taxes and leave money in the bank not counting what the farmer has gained thru more time for producing better crops of what he does raise and most important of all, cooperating with his fellow farmer in helping to bring the prices of ceiving application blanks from farmers may receive a more fair and equal price for their crops and livestock.

The Corn-Hog raisers of Boone county must put over the sign-up. Any growers who holds back and waits to be solicited in the program is only putting an added burden on his fellow farmer and on himself. All are interested in seeing the agricultural situation improve and all should do their part in attending the educational meetings in their community when possible and if they expect to sign, a contract should take advantage of the first opportunity to do so. Any campaign committeeman may assist farmers in signing or contracts may be signed in the County Agent's office or any week day. It's your program fellows, let's do our best.

LOCAL CITIZENS

WILL HAVE OPPORTUNITY TO AID IN WORTHY CAUSE—AT SAME TIME SEE AN ENTERTAINMENT THAT IS WELL WORTHWHILE.

Boone county people will have an opportunity to aid a most worthy cause and at the same time see an entertainment that is at the one time enlightening and enjoyable on Friday night, March 23.

Covington's very popular and distinguished Police Judge, Joseph P. Goodnough, will stage for the benefit of the Crippled Children on that night one of his new famous 'mock trials' the scene of which will be the Boone Circuit Court room.

The price of admission to the trial will be 10 and 20 cents and many other entertainment features will grace the program. William Waters and son, of Limaburg, and a few of their talented friends will occupy a place on the program, while William Farrell and his famous accordion and George McCabe, a well-known singer, will

BEFORE TREATMENT

Attend the "Mock Trial" at the Court House March 23 for the benefit of these unfortunates.

further add to the variety of the entertainment.

The program, while being sponsored by the local P. T. A. will be shared in only slightly by them. The major portion of the receipts will be donated to the Crippled Children Fund. In other columns of this issue will be found just one illustration of the marvelous changes that are being wrought by the great surgeons and physicians of the country under the auspices of the Crippled Children Society.

A great deal of favorable comment has been heard throughout Northern Kentucky upon the humorous and entertainment manner in which Judge Goodnough conducts his mock trials and folks hereabouts are anticipating a very enjoyable evening's program.

Judge Goodnough possesses a very attractive personality and injects it full force into each trial that he stages. No one who sees this evening's program will regret it—First, because he will be amply repaid, and second, because a worthy cause will be aided.

Thousands of unfortunate, invalid children, throughout the state already have been materially aided in the campaign that is now in progress and with wholehearted assistance from the public that has been received in the past and seems assured for this entertainment, more work of this humanitarian and constructive nature will be done.

MORE MUSICIANS

The "Kentucky Pioneers," a fiddling band of Hebron, consisting of Allen Goodridge, Robert Hodges, Stoney Campbell, J. H. Marvin, and Dorsey Anderson played at the Liberty Theater last Saturday night, where they captured the $25 cash prize. This entitles them to play on April 7th with the winning bands of the next three Saturday nights.

INDEPENDENT

TOURNAMENT WILL GET UNDER WAY THURSDAY NIGHT—HEBRON BOYS WILL MEET THE WALTON BOYS IN FIRST GAME.

The Independent Tournament which will be held at Florence will begin Thursday night, with Hebron boys meeting the Walton boys in the first game. The second game will be played between the Hamilton boys and the Verona boy third game, the Florence boys will play the Union boys. The final game on Thursday night will be played between Petersburg and Burlington. On Friday night the boys will play in the semi-finals. Then the Burlington girls will meet the Florence girls and the Hebron girls will meet the Union girls.

There will be four games Thursday night, four games Friday night and two games Saturday night. This will be a very close tournament, due to the fact that senior athletes will be permitted to play. A number of the outstanding athletes in the county this year are seniors. The tournament will start promptly at 7:30, due to the fact that there are four games Thursday night. The admission will be 25 and 15 cents. You will find the entire program on another page of this issue.

We are planning to send a hand bill containing the entire program of the tournament to every home in the county. The members of the winning teams will receive gold basketballs. A donation from the proceeds of this tournament will be made to the Crippled Children fund.

G. A. MEET

The G. A. meeting of the Big Bone Baptist church was held Sunday, March 11, with nine members present. The program was opened by devotional reading by our leader, Miss Mae Huey. We had a nice program on the subject of "Missionaries."

There will be an all-day meeting Saturday, March 17, at the church. All members are requested to be present.

Frances Horton, Asst. Reporter.

The many friends of Frank Maxwell, formerly of Burlington, will be very much pleased to hear that he is recovering rapidly following an operation recently. A number from here have visited him.

PROPERTY CHANGES HANDS

The exchange of the Herbert Snyder property in Burlington for the George Blythe property on the Bellevue pike near town was announced Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Snyder's property is the remodeled residence he purchased from Elmer Kelly several years ago, while Mr. Blythe's place consists of a residence and approximately 30 acres of land. The exact terms of the transfer were not announced.

LEAGUE MEETING HELD

The regular monthly meeting of the Rose Union Epworth League of Boone county was held in the school auditorium at Florence on Monday night of this week. About two hundred members from the various church societies attended the meeting and all enjoyed the very enlightening program. The next meeting will be held at Walton on April 2.

CLARA LEE COLSTON

Clara Lee Colston, aged 19 years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Colston, passed away Wednesday at 6 p. m. in her home two miles East of Bracht Station, Kenton county. She had been in ill health for some time. However, her death, which came suddenly while seated in a chair was unexpected. The cause of her death was Myocarditis.

She leaves a father, mother, one brother, three sisters to mourn her passing.

Funeral services were conducted from the Walton Baptist church on Friday at 2 p. m. by Bro. Miller, of Aspers in the presence of a host of relatives and friends, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Walton cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of Chambers & Grubbs.

SILVER LEADERS 4-H CLUB

The Silver Leaders 4-H club, of Hamilton had their regular business meeting on March 5th. We had a fine meeting, Mr. Fish and Mr. Forkner being with us, and both gave a talk. We had a good report from the Captain of each project. One of our boys in tobacco projects has his plant bed sowed. We had a program and some special music, after which we adjourned to meet April 4th.

Lloyd K. Jones, Club Reporter.

Joseph Schuch, of Ludlow, R. D. 2, was a business visitor in Burlington Tuesday morning.

Guests of Mrs. Susie Stephens and family of the Burlington and Florence pike on last Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Garner, of Norwood, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hall.

AFTER TREATMENT

Help a good cause and see a good show Friday March 23 at the Court House.

ESTEEMED LADY

PASSES AWAY

In the death of Mrs. Lucy Williams, Walton and Boone county lost one of its admirable ladies. Of a quiet and gentle disposition, to know her was to love her. Never complaining, looking optimistically on her fellow beings, her's was a lovely Christian life. She was born in Grant county, Ky., in 1853, being at the time of her death 80 years old, and was the daughter of Rev. Price Fields and Elizabeth Henderson Fields.

She was a devout member of the Richmond Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Williams made her home with her sister, Mrs. W. H. Metcalfe on High School Court, and, although she had been in declining health her condition did not become grave until last Thursday. Dr. F. E. Bedinger was called and advised that she be taken to a hospital and she was removed to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, Ky. In the ambulance of Chambers & Grubbs. She lingered until Saturday morning at 2 o'clock, when she gently passed to the Great Beyond. She is survived by a sister, Mrs. W. H. Metcalfe of Walton; three nieces and two nephews.

Her remains were taken to the home of her niece, Mrs. Ernest DeMoisey in Ludlow, Ky., from which place her funeral took place Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. C. C. Carson, her pastor, preaching a very appropriate funeral discourse to a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. Rev. Hartman of the Ludlow Presbyterian church, assisted in the services by prayer. The remains were laid to rest in Highland cemetery. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. A lovely woman has passed away.

The pallbearers were: James Metcalf, Shelly Rouse, Robert Fields, Otis Acra, Ernest DeMoisey and Robert Fields, Jr.

Funeral Directors Chambers & Grubbs, of Walton had charge of the arrangements.

CHAS. W. FISK

Chas. W. Fisk, a farmer, living near Fiskburg, Kenton county, was found dead in bed on Wednesday morning. He was 78 years of age and leaves 2 sons, 2 daughters, 13 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren and 6 brothers to mourn his passing.

His funeral was conducted from the Wellington church Saturday morning at 11 a. m. by Rev. Runyan in the presence of a host of relatives and friends, after which his remains were laid to rest in the Wellington cemetery, by the side of his wife, who preceded him several years ago.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

The many friends of Albert Pettit were delighted to see him out for a short time Tuesday afternoon. It seems that Mr. Pettit's very game fight against the ravages of rheumatism for the past several months may be fruitful after all. He seems to be very much improved at this time.

PROMINENT

THOMAS ROBERTS

Thomas Roberts, age 83, died at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, Ky., Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock from bronchial pneumonia. He had been sick but four days when he was taken to the hospital in Chambers & Grubbs' ambulance. Mr. Roberts was born in Boone county where he lived all his life. He was a bachelor and in his younger days was a farmer. He was a man who had many friends and when old age came upon him he retired to private life. He was a member of the Salem Baptist church. He is survived by many relatives.

His remains were brought to the chambers funeral home and his funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. D. E. Bedinger preaching an appropriate funeral discourse to an assemblage of relatives and friends, after which the remains were taken to the Old Salem church cemetery for burial.

The pallbearers were: Charles H. Fritchell, Tom Bennie Roberts, Geo. Laker, W. B. Johnson, Warren Stephenson and Evan Hume.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of the arrangements.

G. E. Clifton, of East Bend, was a business visitor to Burlington Tuesday morning. Mr. Clifton seldom visits the county seat.

Fred Heli, of near Pleasant, was a business visitor to the Hub Tuesday Morning. Mr. Heli is one of Boone's hustling farmers and one of the Recorder's staunch supporters.

BOONE TEAMS

PLAY IN COVINGTON Y. M. C. A. BASKET BALL TOURNAMENT—NEW HAVEN GIRLS LOSE A TOUGH BATTLE BY SCORE OF 3-10

Boone county is represented by three teams in the Covington Y. M. C. A. basket ball tournament which is being played by girls teams from Northern Kentucky. Last Tuesday night the Union girls, who formerly were stars with the New Haven high quintets, lost a tough game to the Snyder-Stephens Insurance team, of Ludlow, by the close count of 13-10.

Hebron played the Covington Y. girls, the tourney winner, for the last three years, and also went down to defeat by the close score of 13-10.

Florence, the third team from Boone county, did not play on the first night of the tourney due to the fact that they drew a bye. Two games and out are the elimination rules.

Miss Helen White, of Williams-town was a visitor here. Friday afternoon.

TOBACCO SIGN-UP EXTENSION

Those tobacco growers who have not signed AAA tobacco contracts and would like to do so should sign-up and leave their contract with their director or at the County Agent's office. It is not known that the Secretary of Agriculture will accept these contracts or not.

There seems to be a strong possibility that a heavy tax will be placed on the tobacco grown that is not signed under government contract. If this should happen it would in most cases prove a distinct advantage to be a cooperator in the government program.

UTOPIANS TO MEET

The March meeting of the Boone County Utopia Club No. 2 will meet at Burlington courthouse on next Thursday, March 23rd at 7:00 p. m.

A special program is being prepared by the members of Petersburg group for the occasion. All who are interested in Utopia Club work are invited to attend.

NEW MEMBERS 4-H CLUB

New members may enroll in Boone county 4-H Clubs during the next three weeks or thru the next meetings of the community 4-H clubs according to county agent, H. R. Forkner. Every boy or girl between the ages of 10 and 18 years inclusive who with the consent of his or her parents agrees to carry on during 1934 one or more approved agricultural or home economics projects is eligible for membership.

Four-H club work standing for the four fold development of the R. 1.

Head, Heart, Health and Hand is the largest organization of boys and girls in the world enrolling each year around 1,000,000 members in every state in the Union. Every mother and father wants his or her child to receive the best in training. 4-H Club work offers an opportunity for the boy or girl to conduct one or more economic approved projects under the supervision of parents, local adult leaders and the extension services of the College of Agriculture and to keep a business record on the same. Most important is the organization itself run by and governed by the members themselves under the supervision of their adult leaders.

There is no cost for membership but the community clubs set a high standard for their members. Project circulars and records books are supplied by the College of Agriculture. Those wishing to enroll in 4-H club work should notify their community club secretary, local adult leader or the County Agent's office.

LOANS DELAYED

The Northern Kentucky Production Credit Corporation has been delayed in making loans to Boone county farmers due to delay in refilling will receive application Louisville.

Farmers who have applied for these loans thru Mr. C. L. Hempling will receive application blanks and notices as soon as pro-forms are received. All applications for loans should be made to M. Hempling, Constance, Ky.

RIGHT ROAD

The young couple were making their first long motor trip. They were driving to Chicago. They had blown out two tires, ruined their clothes in a sudden rainstorm, paid $10 to be pulled out of the mud and then had lost their way. The husband got out with a flashlight to inspect a sign-board.

Wife (calling to him)—Are you on the right road, dear?

Hubby (grimly)—We sure are, but we didn't know it.

The sign read: "To the poorhouse."

Poor Animal

An S. P. C. A. Agent—Little boy, is that your mother over there with the beautiful set of furs?

Agent—Yes, sir.

Ad—Do you know what poor animal it is that has to suffer in order that your mother might have the furs with which she adorns herself?

Ad—Yes, sir. My daddy.—Chelsea Record.

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christened Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

Having decided upon his course of action, Babson fell into a refreshing slumber; the next morning he was down at the bank at eight o'clock, looking quite his old self and wearing a white rose in his lapel. Emblematic of hope, doubtless.

Shortly after the bank had opened crippled Rance Kershaw limped in to borrow a thousand dollars to meet his monthly payroll. Babson demurred to loaning it, but finally compromised with a warning that such indiscriminate borrowing would have to cease very soon.

"By the way," he said, as he initiated his approval on the note, "are you going to retain your lease of the Bar H ranch?"

"I think not," Kershaw replied. "It expires next month, but I'll be hanged if I know where I can get the money to pay for a year in advance."

"Better retrench," Babson advised. "Let the Bar H ranch go, sell off half your cattle, even at the present low prices, get out of debt, quit paying interest and be happy. Where does Nate Tichenor reside now?"

"I don't know. I only know his lawyer's address. Why you ask?"

"There was a man from San Francisco in here some time back. He'd been looking at the Bar H ranch and had a notion he'd like to buy it. I thought perhaps I might get in touch with Tichenor, negotiate a sale of his ranch for him and clean up a few dollars in commission. And yet, if you renew the lease it may militate against a sale."

"Go ahead," Rance Kershaw replied. "I'm not going to renew the lease. You've been pretty good to me, Silas, and I won't stand in the way of your turnin' a profit."

"Thanks," Babson murmured. "And this lawyer's address?"

Kershaw gave it to him, and a week later an attorney in San Francisco wrote Nate Tichenor, in care of the latter's attorney, requesting a price on the Bar H ranch in behalf of a client of his.

Ten days later Babson knew that the Bar H ranch was not for sale; whereat the banker had an immediate return of his former nervousness and depression and went home at noon. The situation was thoroughly beyond his comprehension; he had decided Nate Tichenor would sell the Bar H ranch and Nate Tichenor had disappointed him.

Of course, in a larger sense, Nate Tichenor's decision not to sell could not affect the interests of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district (Mr. Babson had decided to call it that), since the district could acquire the property via the condemnation suit route.

Immediately after church the following Sunday he motored up to Eden Valley, ostensibly to fish but with the intention of spending several hours inspecting the dam-site and lake-site. To his signal perturbation he discovered in the gorge a camp of three tents, a motor chuck-wagon, and five shirt-sleeved young men playing a modest game of poker under the shade of a cottonwood tree. Under an adjacent tree a field drafting table stood; it had a sheet of tracing paper tacked to it and hard by this table a surveying instrument was set up.

"Hello," Babson hailed them cheerfully, confident that his rod and reel would excuse him of undue inquisitiveness in penetrating to the camp.

"What are you boys doing here?"

"Playing poker, sir. How about taking a hand? Twenty-five cent ante and a dollar limit."

Mr. Babson, not being accustomed to such genteel rebukes, flushed and passed on down the creek, leaving the engineering crew to their non-sabbatical pleasure.

Evidently Tichenor had sold, or was about to sell, his dam-site and lake-site to a power company, which had sent an engineering crew to make a preliminary survey and report before deciding to close the deal. His curiosity aroused, Babson crossed the creek, climbed the side of the hill, and was rewarded by finding the stakes of the engineering party. He followed them readily; they led him over the approximate route which any man with a fair eye for contours would have selected for the ditch to lead the water to the penstocks.

As a country banker Silas Babson had a far better knowledge of the law than most laymen; hence he realized now that if Nate Tichenor's dam-site and lake-site had been acquired by a power company, which is a public service corporation, no other public service corporation could condemn its property! Hence once more the Babson soul was steeped in despair.

The following morning Mr. Healy Rooby, his cashier-paying-teller, receiving-teller and confidential man, came to Babson's desk and laid upon it a copy of the latest edition of the Gold Run Nugget. Mr. Rooby had marked, in blue crayon, an item under the head of Real-Estate Transfers.

The item recorded the transfer deed of gift, of four thousand acres, more or less, of certain lands, from Ranceford Kershaw to Lorraine Kershaw.

"Can't be a portion of the Circle ranch," Babson decided, and drew down from its case a map of the county.

Mr. Babson made a most surprising discovery. He had always assumed that Rance Kershaw owned no land east of the fence that divided the Circle K from the Bar H. To his amazement he had now discovered that Lorry Kershaw was the owner of four thousand acres, more or less, of that portion of Eden Valley which, in the event of a dam being built in the gorge, must constitute all or the greater portion of the area that must be inundated when the dam filled up.

And Babson had always thought Nate Tichenor owned that land!

He could have cheered. No matter what Nate Tichenor might do with his dam-site now, he would have to consult Lorry Kershaw before selling it to a power company, and Babson thought he knew what the girl's answer would be. A deadlock between the two survivors of the feud!

"Got to get that four thousand acres more or less," Mr. Babson exulted. "The girl will sell to me. You bet she will. And then I'll do some trading with Nate Tichenor."

Within the week he had arranged his personal finances and purchased, from the Savings Bank of San Francisco the first mortgage that the latter institution held on the Circle K ranch. With the mortgage in his possession, Babson dictated to Ranceford Kershaw a letter as firm as granite and as cold as a penguin's tail. He informed Kershaw that unless the mortgage was paid within five days a suit in foreclosure would be instituted. Then he dictated another letter which he signed as president of the Bank of Valley Center, calling some thirty thousand dollars of Kershaw's notes.

He was striking at Rance Kershaw over the shoulder of the latter's daughter, quite confident that she would protect her father when Babson suggested that, in return for a renewal of the unsecured notes and mortgage, she should sell him at a reasonable price that four thousand acres with which he planned to embarrass Nate Tichenor!

He realized he must keep such a deal in abeyance until he could organize the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, for, with the district formed before Nate Tichenor could complete his deal with the power company, the district could enter a condemnation suit against Tichenor, and thus block the aspirations of the power company. He distrusted the local legal talent in a crisis loaded with potential legal dynamite, so that night he went to

CHAPTER V

Nate Tichenor, from early boyhood, had had more than his share of experience with sudden death and tragedy, and it had developed in him a certain stolidity and philosophy in such emergencies. For ten minutes he held Lorry Kershaw's head against his shoulder and neither spoke nor moved.

"Now, then, Miss Kershaw," he soothed presently, "this is no time for weakness. You're a Kershaw and none of your clan ever needed time out for that. You said you wanted to take your father home?"

She nodded dreadingly. The Kershaws, like the Hensleys, always buried their own dead.

"And I wouldn't, if I were you, permit my mind to dwell on the thought of your absolute aloneness in the world," he continued. "That way madness lies. I know. I've been through all that. After two years in the A. E. F., where, it seemed to me, I lost every comrade I managed to achieve an affection for; after losing my mother and aunts while I was in France and realizing I hadn't a single friend in the community where I was born and raised, I found myself, when the war ended, the loneliest human being imaginable. Often I wanted to come back to Eden Valley and know you better but—"

"Yes, I understand. Father was what he was, poor dear."

"Well, be that as it may, you're not nearly so badly off as you think you are, and one of these days, when you have time to think about it, I'll tell you why." He was almost abrupt. "I suppose we'd better get along."

"Yes, I suppose so," she agreed and started her motor. Nate Tichenor followed in his car. Arrived at the Circle K headquarters no men came out to meet them.

"Where are your riders?" he queried.

"They started with the cattle drive up into the forest reserve this morning."

He lifted Rance Kershaw's body out of the car, carried it into the house and disposed of it on Kershaw's bed.

He drew a sheet over the corpse and rejoined the girl in the living room. "I reckon," he said, in the homely mountain idiom, "you Kershaws never have any truck with undertakers. Seems to me the Kershaws don't use preachers, either."

"No, we just read the service ourselves."

"The Hensleys always did, too. Lock the house up and drive in to Valley Center with me in my car. Have you in mind some woman friend you can bring back with you to keep you company?"

"I have no friends, Nate Tichenor."

He frowned, then smiled faintly. "I forgot we're the last survivors of two clans that were beyond the pale. Well, we'll hire somebody. There must be a practical nurse in Valley Center. When we get there I'll telegraph my old superintendent, Rube Tenney, to come up here with his wife and two children."

She yielded without argument to his suggestions—commands, rather.

Doctor Donaldson made no comment when, in his office an hour later, Lorry Kershaw informed him of her father's death. He readily issued a death certificate. He was a gruff old fellow and, in the least politic, as Tichenor gazed when Donaldson growled:

"So you two have buried the hatchet, eh?"

He flushed as Tichenor's bleak blue eyes rebuked him.

"It's gone of my business, of course," Donaldson apologized. "I merely looked for 'ss Lorry's sake'."

Nate Tichenor smiled at him.

"I understand, doctor. No offense if your intentions were kindly."

"Thank you, they were. When will the funeral take place?"

"Tomorrow, at two o'clock," Lorry answered him.

"I'll telephone the coroner," Donaldson went on. "He'll take my word for it that an inquest isn't necessary, and issue the burial permit."

While Lorry Kershaw waited in the car, Nate Tichenor scouted around town and succeeded in engaging the services of a Miss Lizzie Bachman, who in her youth had almost graduated from a nurse's training school in San Francisco.

Not for considerable would Miss Bachman have missed this assignment. It was too meaty with gossip. Nate Tichenor dancing attendance on Lorry Kershaw!

Tichenor's next action was to call upon the editor of the local weekly paper, the Valley Center Register. "I

FORTY YEARS AGO

BURLINGTON

Considerable fencing was thrown down last Wednesday by the wind.

There is considerable doubt there being any fruit in this part of the county this season. The cold wave of the first of this week having completed its destruction.

Ferdinand Rue, an old, highly respected citizen of the Lower Gunpowder neighborhood died last Thursday night. He had been in poor health a long time. Mr. Rue was an honorable Christian gentleman, liked by everyone with whom he was acquainted.

Some fields of wheat are being pastured to check the rapid growth of the grain. Those who have lambs will find that the wheat will be of especial benefit to them, hastening their growth very materially. Only in the past few years have the farmers been pasturing wheat, but they have discovered that judicious pasturing is necessary and beneficial when the growth is rank early in the season, as is now the case with many fields.

PETERSBURG

We hear that a man by the name of Morrison, of Bellevue, intends moving here and operating the Loder Hotel. We also hear he will start a blacksmith and carriage shop.

A musical fete was given at the residence of Frank Grant last Monday night. The steamer Mayflower brought up a load from Aurora.

John W. Gaines, of Utzinger, was in town one day last week.

John Rucker, of Constance, was in town several days last week.

Miss Grace Grant, who is attending school in Covington, was at home Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Wingate and grandson, Earl Whiting, were visiting in Cincinnati, last week.

UTZINGER

Five big, fat hogs, the property of E. Holton, were smothered to death by crowding into a hollow log.

Miss Jennie Botts, of Bellevue neighborhood, was visiting her sister, Mrs. Nannie Randal, last Sunday.

Miss Carrie Fisher, of Petersburg, was visiting Mr. and Mrs. Andy Grosser, of Plattsburg, last Sunday.

Deputy Sheriff Beall was in town early Friday morning. He came in with the cold wave and was on his way to the mouth of Garrison.

The Petersburg Milling Co., will change hands in a few days. It is said that J. Frank Grant and Mrs. Collins will assume control of it.

UNION

Uncle Frank Smith is having a wire fence built around his yard.

Mrs. Bert Gaines and Mrs. Mary Gaines, of Burlington, were visiting Mrs. J. A. Huey last week.

John C. Mitchell, the Pleasant

Hill merchant, was in town Thursday. Same jolly man.

Charley Bannister has improved, and was out horseback riding one evening this week.

James A. Huey sold 800 bushels of wheat this week, and is delivering it at Richmond this week.

Miss Luite Baker entertained a number of young people at a tea one evening last week.

A LETTER

The following letter was received from "Squire" Williamson this week:

"Boone County Recorder
"Burlington, Ky.
"Dear Sirs:

"How is everybody in good old Burlington and around? It is pretty cold here right now. We had an 18-inch snow here Friday night; the hills are pretty when covered with snow. From the way your paper reads you are having your share of cold weather also.

"I am briefly describing our camp down here, wish we had more Boone county boys here; however, we three are holding our own.

"We have sixteen boys in our camp. Our camp is located in Clay county, 18 miles from Manchester, Ky. Our job is building telephone lines. We go to the hills and cut our own poles (Chestnut wood), haul them out with mules, dig the holes and build the line complete, with our most willing boss Eugene Adams of Johnson county.

"Our main camp is located at Wootton, Ky., in Leslie county; our 16 boys would rather be in a side camp than the main camp. We think we have a good place to stay. "We have a chance to re-enlist the last of March if we want to; I think everyone of us are signing again.

"The boys in my camp are: Zera Allen, Hickman county; Mike Cornett, Owsley county; Fred Phel's, Laurel county; Jack Rose Owsley county; Earl Gibson, Owsley county; Elmer Smith Fayette county; Arthur Brock Laurel county; Logan Long, Owsley county; Clarence Baker, Owsley county; 'Bud' Afterkitt, Boone county; Joe Napier, Les. county; Irvin McCormack, Boone county; Clyde Rose McCreary county; Robert Strunk, McCreary county; Orville Wilson, Estill county; James R. Williamson, Boone county.

"Come up and see us sometime. "Squire Williamson, "C. C. C. Camp, Peabody, Ky."

REPORT OF RED CROSS NURSING ACTIVITIES FOR FEBRUARY 1934

The Home Hygiene class at Vebona completed its lesson periods on the 13th of February, and the class roll and test papers were sent to Washington, in compliance with the regulations of the National Red Cross in order to receive the certificates, they award to the students who successfully pass the requirements necessary for them to receive these. As soon as the certificates are sent to the Boone County Chapter, and are properly signed by the Chapter Chairman I shall present them to the girls. I may say two of the girls received the highest grades ever made by any of the students I have had in these courses in the past five years. Numerous have been the calls I have had during February on the part of parents and school authorities in regard to threatened spread of contagious diseases. My position is that of adviser and instructor in these cases, with two of the disease as far as possible for the child with the disease, to recover with as little danger of complications and resultant bad after effects, which is so often the often children and families. These to lessen the danger of the spread of the disease as far as possible to other children and families. These objectives can only be accomplished by the intelligent and cooperative efforts, of parents, school authorities and physicians, and I hereby solicit all of these.

General inspection of the children of the grades in the New Haven school is now under way. Special attention has been given to the health needs of six children during the month, being placed in the Children's Hospital by me, or under the treatment of a physician. Twelve parents have also come for a conference with me and to make plans for the solving of an existent problem pertaining to the health of their child.

Miss Margaret E. Disney Nursing Field Representative of Kentucky to the National Red Cross visited our service early in the month, and as always, helped to bring assistance in the arrangements necessary in the carrying on of our nursing program.

Eunice B. Willis, Red Cross P. H. N.

The Boone county poultry raisers' clean chick program has given good profits for three years, and will be continued, it was decided at the annual winter poultry school

NAVY RECRUITING OFFICE TO RE-OPEN IN LEXINGTON

From news received from the United States Navy Department the recruiting office at Lexington, Ky., will be re-opened about March eight.

This office was closed last May, when recruiting was discontinued in this district. G. W. H. Blundall, Chief Machinist Mate, who formerly in charge of the office, and was transferred to Chicago, Ill., for duty at the Century of Progress Exposition has returned to Lexington to take charge of recruiting.

BOONE COUNTY GIRL SETS NEW CANNING RECORD

I, a friend of Miss Lucille Taylor one of our Florence 4-H leaders and Utopia Club girls, and who holds many other offices am proud that she has set such a record for Boone county Utopia club world, when she canned 506 quarts of fruit vegetables, jams, jellies and pickles last year.

She has had seven years of training in 4-H club work. Her list of preserved foods contain the names of every fruit and vegetable commonly grown in Kentucky. She raised most of the things on their farm.

She represents the high type of leadership developed through 4-H and Utopia Club work. It has often been said that she remarked that she wished more young people would take an interest in the work of the younger generation. If they have something to do to develop their minds they are kept out of mischief and also benefit by it in later years.

Miss Taylor is also a church worker, and loves her work teaching the little ones. We feel, although she never mentions a home of her own, that some day she will get a good one. —A Friend.

GULLEY &amp; PETTIT

Groceries, Hardware and Meats

This store is one of the firms in this section of the county whose career has rendered it as a landmark in the eyes of the community. Such has the public found this substantial and efficient establishment.

This firm exhibits a complete and very attractive stock which is selected from the leading brands of canned goods of the country and offered to the public at prices that denote a real and true worth. The public has come to know this and to look over their lines for unusual offerings.

The customers of this store enjoy a feeling of satisfaction when purchasing. They fully realize that the service and quality of their goods are always of the best. This popular firm selects its stocks with the one idea of giving its customers the greatest possible values. The store is very well arranged for the rapid handling of goods, thus assuring you of prompt service, and their customers always find their products in first class condition.

It is without doubt necessary that an immense stock of goods be carried by a concern of this kind and kept pace with the demands of their customers, and in regard to such, cutlery and shelf hardware, all you have to do is to call for it and the genial and accommodating clerks will produce it so quickly that you will wonder how they find it in such a vast array of stock of large and small articles of every description.

They are dealers in fresh and cured meats that are cured by them, and their hams are sold to people far and near, and are kept in the most sanitary condition in their large refrigerator.

It is firm responsible for the bringing and keeping here each year of very many dollars, and in this Review we cannot fail to compliment them upon their activities in the business world, and predict for them a future fraught with good promise.

BOB &amp; GENE

Phone Florence 23

This familiar sign can be noticed on the Dixie Highway near the Boone and Kenton County Line, and those traveling this Highway will find this a very fine place to stop, which we deem quite appropriate in this article to mention, as the pride of the home people that strive to infuse in its service the comforts of home and convenience the traveling public must have.

There is a spirit of real hospitality and home-like atmosphere of comfort and content at Bob & Gene's. Quietly, unobtrusively, you are served to the best of Sandwiches, or all kinds, Cigars, Candy—in fact everything that is usually found in a good restaurant. A visit to this place will convince you that they have just one object in view ON-THE-SPOT — Phone Florence — the good will and satisfaction of 23.

the guest through that "Never Too Much Trouble Kind of Service." "Welcome Stranger" and it's spirit of hospitality, the outstanding characteristics of this place. Based upon courtesy, and a service smoothly perfect in every detail, this genuine hospitality is, in effect, the soul of this place. You will always find the very best food and good bottled beer and soft Drinks of all kinds.

We are very glad to compliment Bob & Gene upon their progressive policies and the scope of their activities in furnishing a service that is up to the minute at all times.

You will appreciate their Curb Service—just drive up—blow your horn and they will be JOHNNY-ON-THE-SPOT — Phone Florence — the good will and satisfaction of 23.

THE BOONE-KENTON LUMBER COMPANY

(Incorporated)

Dealer in Lumber and Building Material—Planing Mill Work A Specialty—Erlanger, Ky.—At 219 Crescent Ave.—Sash, Doors — Moulding Finish — Sheet Rock—Wall Board — Framing. Phone Dixie 7138 or Erlanger 37.

This firm is known for "Courtesy and Service With Every Order" and furnish the people of this section of Kentucky with a complete service in all that pertains to Lumber and Building Material. A 20th Century concern, equipped for rendering the most Metropolitan service and dealing on a large scale in quality products including Sash, Doors, Moulding, Flooring, Ceiling, Interior Finish, Sheet Rock, Wall Board, and will be glad to help you with your plans if you are contemplating any building.

At the outset this company realized that a Satisfied Customer was the best influence for more business, and they determined to build for this establishment a reputation that would be the envy of the building material trade. That they have succeeded is evidenced by the large amount of patronage that they now receive and the amount of territory that their activities cover. With a knowledge of their business that always breeds success, they have offered the best Lumber and Building Material. The scope of their activities includes most everything the builder would demand.

With that business acumen and foresight which has won such wide popularity and patronage for the company in the past, the management has anticipated the needs and demands of the people of this section of the State and the establishment of this company is one of the busiest spots in this section, and though the business has grown to large proportions and the demands far surpasses even their largest expectations, the Boone-Kenton Lumber Co., Inc., still specializes in rendering individual service to every patron.

In making this Review of the community we are glad to compliment the Boone-Kenton Lumber Company upon their extensive lines and their excellent service in all departments and refer them to all our readers.

DOLPH'S GARAGE

Expert Service and Reasonable Prices

This section of the county, as a whole, has an added business advantage by having in its midst this Garage whose commendable policies and inherent honest dealings have gained an ever increasing business that can be noticed by the large amount of business handled by this progressive establishment.

This is one of the best Automobile Repair Shops in this section and has a reputation for turning out work of class for reasonable prices and getting it done when promised. Upon these lines Mr. Dolph has built up the business to its present high standard.

The Garage is equipped to turn out all classes of repair work. No matter what may be your needs in this line they are able to take care of them.

Dolph's Garage in Burlington offers the motorists of this section not only expert repair work but a prompt wrecker service day or night. This service is always by phoning Burlington 45.

In this day of automobiles and progressive improvements in all kinds of machinery, it is very important that every citizen have Oil and Gasoline supply firms. This Garage enjoys a tremendous business and renders a very complete and efficient service.

In this Business Review we think that it is very appropriate that we direct attention to the very efficient management, high grade of its products, and the very satisfactory service it renders.

RABBIT HASHINGS

BY NOEL WALTON

Oh me, we're affected with a Charley-horse this a. m., but luckily or un— we are still able to percolate. So on with the racket. Pin back your ears and button up your lip and listen.

When hath fled our little Bare-fax than which there was nothing than whither.

And we hear a certain guy climbed up in the middle of his brother's gal friend's hair, over a certain little gal round Hare Mulligan.

Talk about Miss America for a bathin' beauty you ought to have seen our Mr. Lower Gunpowder in a pair of shorts the other nite playin' basket ball. Looked like an elephant in pajamas.

Judging from our good friend Oswald's use of the mother-tongue he must have got his education eatin' alphabet soup.

We attended a charivari the other nite held in honor of Hensley and his (blushing?) bride. The first round was pretty noisy, but after findin' out that the boy gave away two-fer's they got peeved and come back for more.

If the gals would use that lipstick on another part of the frame and a little bit stronger it would do more good.

We hear that they declared a little war up on the corner the other nite.

And Herby and Cricket have sure got it.

We asked a guy for a match the other nite on the road, but he didn't answer.

We got a new nickname, "Chub the Chisler."

We know a gal that craves a husband.

"Who was that bum I saw you downtown with?" said one gal. "That was no bum, that was my husband."

Oh well, we'll fold up and be on our way. So long till we see you. Yours for fun, Hasher.

BELLEVIEW

Mrs. Bernard Sebree, of Woolper, spent part of last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rice and attended the Bible Institute at the Baptist church.

Edward Rogers, Jr., visited his aunt, Mrs. C. M. Hook and Mr. Hook at Cincinnati, over the weekend.

Mrs. A. S. Burcham and Mrs. Richard Marshall, have been on the sick list, the past week.

Mrs. Emma Stephens, who is ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs.

W. M. Aylor, does not improve. Mrs. Josie Riley was called to Lexington, to the bedside of her brother-in-law, Lucian Stephens, who is seriously ill, following an operation.

Quite a few from here are planning to attend the basket ball tournament at Florence this week.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

The Mother and Daughter banquet given by the Girl Reserves last Friday night was a decided success and everyone spent a delightful evening. We wish to thank in these columns, Misses Glenna Lee Clifton, Roberta Berkshire and Ruby Cotton, members of the seventh and eighth grades for the efficient manner in which they acted as waitresses for this occasion. The menu for the banquet was as follows:

Baked chicken and dressing
Mashed potatoes and gravy
Peas
Coffee and Rolls
Jello
Cake

An enjoyable program was presented throughout the evening. This program consisted of "A Welcome to the Mothers" by Betty McMullen; a toast to the mothers, by our president, Lucille Ryle; song, "Mother" by the entire club; "What our mothers mean to us" by our advisor, Mrs. J. L. Fowler; a pageant, "The Sculptor's Dream," vocal duet by Melicent and Helen Berkshire; vocal duet by Lou Ella Berkshire and Betty Lucas. Those girls and their guests who attended were as follows: Lucille Ryle and Mrs. W. C. Brown, Ethel Ryle and Mrs. Manley Ryle, Katherine Clifton and Mrs. E. H. Clifton, Lou Ella Berkshire and Mrs. Leslie Ryle, Betty Lucas and Mrs. M. M. Lucas, Thelma and Lee Etta Aylor and Mrs. L. W. Aylor, Vera McClure and Mrs. Ezra McClure, Ethel Snow, Marjorie Hensley and Mrs. Thomas Hensley, Leora Vice and Mrs. L. R. Vice, Wilma Cotton and Mrs. W. B. Cotton, Helen and Melicent Berkshire and Mrs. R. E. Berkshire, Marjorie Botts and Mrs. Ray Botts, Betty McMullen and Mrs. Leslie McMullen, Ruth Ligon and Mrs. A. B. Ligon, Elizabeth and Anna Lea Burton and Mrs. John Burton, Margaret Walton and Mrs. F. M. Walton, Dorothy Rogers and Mrs. Louvett Rogers, Irene Cason and Mrs. R. Z. Cason, Betsy Eddins and Mrs. Lallie Eddins, Hollie Stephens and Mrs. Lucian Stephens, Mrs. J. L. Fowler and Mrs. C. A. Fowler.

The Civics class has started a very interesting project. They have organized a mock congress and intend to pass a bill introduced in the House and also one introduced in the Senate. The teacher, Mr. C. G. Lamb was elected president and Howard Garrison, vice-president. Senators are: Russell Ryle, Marjorie Botts, Harold White, Allen White, Katherine Clifton, Lee Etta Aylor, Edwin Hughes, James Brown, Orville Sebree and Harold Ogden. Representatives are: Harry Cook, speaker, Elmore Ryle, Ethel Snow, Irene Cason, Rose Williamson, Leora Vice, Alvin Clure, Leon Ryle, Joseph Rouse, Dorothy Rogers, Kenneth Rogers, Creed Harris, Margaret Walton, Helen Berkshire, Ruth Ligon, Betsy Eddins, Vera McClure, Elizabeth Holbrook, Farrish Walker and Ivan Norris. Three committees were appointed for each house.

A very interesting basket ball game was played on Monday of this week at the noon period. A boys' team from the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th grades played against the Freshman boys. The Freshman boys took this closely contested battle to the tune of 24 to 16. This game certainly revealed one fact, and that is our school won't be without good basket ball material for quite a few years.

THANKS

We wish to thank each and every one for the many beautiful and useful presents which we received at the shower given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Alge in honor of Willard Alge and wife.

FLORENCE SCHOOL NEWS
The Girl Reserve and Hi-Y clubs are making a splendid showing in the state Bible study course. Much interest is being manifest on the part of both organizations.

Supt. D. H. Norris visited our school last Friday and spoke to the entire school during the chapel period.

Our school orchestra is making remarkable progress. If you don't believe it come out to chapel and hear them play. The orchestra now has fifteen members. There are eight more children taking lessons and are about ready to join the other fifteen.

The Florence school children will take an active part in selling White Seals to the people throughout this community, the proceeds of which will go to the Cripple Children fund. This is one of the most worthwhile programs we have ever sponsored. We are expecting the Florence school to make a very good showing in this drive, due to the fact that aonation is to be made from the proceeds of the Independent tournament in the name of the Florence school.

Our debating team has a good record so far this year, and two very outstanding teams are on the program this week. On Wednesday night our team meets Covington, and on Tuesday night they meet Highlands.

On Friday night, March 23rd we will have our annual grade entertainment. This will be sponsored this year by the first four grades and over 150 characters will participate in the program. We have restricted the program this year to the first four grades due to the fact that the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth will participate in the county tournament.

On Friday night, March 30th we are sponsoring our annual grade and high school declamation contest. The program for the declamation contest and the grade entertainment will be published later. On Friday morning, March 16, Dr. Hafer will speak to the entire school in chapel concerning the program being sponsored for the cripple children. We are expecting a large crowd to be present.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas death has again invaded our Lodge and removed from its membership Lucian B. Dickerson, one of our oldest and consistent members.

Therefore, we consider it our duty to publicly deplore his passing and recognize his worthiness.

Resolved, that all who knew him as a citizen and neighbor express their deep regrets.

Resolved, a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, they be spread on the Journal and in his memory the Charter be draped for sixty days.

TOWN IN MIDOCEAN

A vast uncharted island, forerunner of many others which will give to the world a new race of island dwellers, is said by a Berlin correspondent likely to rise shortly in the North sea. A time in the near future has been visualized when there will be maritime towns moored in the middle of the Atlantic and complete with luxury hotels and landing grounds for aircraft. Fast airplane services will be begun from the mainland and in between the island communities, airdromes, with powerful wireless stations, will be built. Then will come the health seekers. Week-ends will discover this new world on their doorsteps. The islands will have their trees, flowers and gardens. The sea will be harnessed to provide electricity, and the wants of the communities will be supplied by cargo carrying aircraft from the mainland.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward. The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a prescription. It is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they may do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Topics of general discussion in Washington obviously range the whole category of subjects that go to make up the "New Deal," but I have been impressed lately with the predominant place now held by two questions in the conversations one hears about the streets, offices, clubs and other places where men meet. Largely to the exclusion of other matters, one hears people trying to figure out whether a turn has come in the Roosevelt political luck, as one topic, and growing comment on the prevalent confusion within the administration, as the other subject of comment. True, they constitute questions to which the final answer is not yet apparent, but the thought I am trying to advance is that possibly the New Deal is undergoing some sort of a transition after one year.

Attention should be called again to the all-embracing control which President Roosevelt hitherto has exercised almost without effort. Anything he said, anything he did, or anything he proposed, was accepted. There were few critics, and those who did criticize could not be described as highly vocal. Now, however, it is a fact that there are more critics and they are making noise that is not hushed. There are open opponents of the administration policies, not only in the Republican ranks where it is natural they would be found, but among the Democrats as well.

As nearly as I can ascertain, the wave of criticism that has come forth into bloom is traceable to one of Mr. Roosevelt's acts, directly. The confusion that has followed seems, at the same time, to have been given birth as a result of the unexpected criticism. Or to state the proposition in another manner, the administration efforts to fend off the criticism are viewed by some observers as having formed the basis of the confusion. I can report only that which I can ascertain to be fact and, on appearance alone, it seems Mr. Roosevelt acted hastily on the air mail contract cancellation and his action unloosed an issue over which individuals can take sides. It is really the first time he has provided the opposition with a peg on which they can hang their hats.

While the official spokesmen of the administration say there is no connection between the back-fire resulting from the contract cancellation and the several moves made by the President since, in his far flung efforts to get us out of the depression, I am told that these declarations are having no effect on those who want to criticize the New Deal schemes. The NRA revision program, the substitution of a new billion-dollar program of a relief character for the CWA which Administrator Hopkins now concedes has been something of a flop, and the battles for legislation in congress, all are accepted as showing the desire of the President to accomplish a change in the attitude of the critics. It is axiomatic that if people can be made to talk or think about other things, they will forget to voice opinions about things which they oppose. Some say it is another exposition of the Roosevelt psychology of keeping people's minds off the depression.

But it has not succeeded yet. Whether it will, remains to be seen.

It is to be observed that, for the first time, criticism of the New Deal plans includes a sizable attack on the CWA. It is to be observed that, for the first time, criticism of the New Deal plans includes a sizable attack on the CWA.

Hit at Expenditures vast expenditures being made. Mr. Roosevelt has been spending money as fast, if not faster, than was spent during the World war, and many persons are now coming forward with the assertion that "spending our way out of the depression" may leave the government with such a debt that our children's children still will be paying on it. But right in the face of these attacks, Mr. Roosevelt has brought forth the CWA substitute and a request that congress appropriate $500,000,000 to pay for it.

In the meantime and while the confusion has become worse confounded, it is to be noted that orders have gone from the Executive offices to the Democratic leaders in congress to get new air mail contract legislation through in a hurry. This legislation is predicated on the theory that private airlines shall carry the air mail. Further, there is every reason to believe now that the companies whose contracts were cancelled so hastily will be allowed to bid again for the jobs.

Postmaster General Farley maintains the President was acting in accordance with law when he ordered the mail contracts canceled. Mr. Roosevelt has said so in several different languages. The fact remains, however, that it always has been the practice to accord an opportunity for a hearing, whether the charge be one of fraud or whether it be some other allegation. No hearing was granted the air mail contractors. Indeed, they were given less than two weeks of time before they were off the job, and the army pilots were doing the work. According to the discussion in congress, it is quite evident there are many influential persons throughout the country who feel the contractors were not given a fair shake by the President.

The conversations I hear are to the general effect that if the army had been equipped to do the mail carrying job, as some of its general staff members publicly announced, and if there had been no such deplorable loss of life among the youthful army pilots as occurred, Mr. Roosevelt in all likelihood would have had few repercussions to the dramatic cancellation of contracts. But the army planes were not fitted for the job, and there was a deplorable loss of life among the youthful army pilots. And on top of that, there was open criticism of the cancellation order among a good many of the President's own party in congress.

If the criticism of the air mail contracts had come alone, Mr. Roosevelt, in the opinion of many competent observers, would have weathered the storm. Probably he would have been the gainer, because few people are willing to condone crookedness.

I mentioned confusion as one of the main topics of conversation in Washington. That is a correct statement. At no time in a long acquaintance with official affairs have I seen circumstances in the nation's capital in which the moves have been so swift that even trained observers have their difficulties in keeping up. Actually, by the time one gets a thorough knowledge of changes resulting from one move, another, or several, has taken place. They have come, accurately speaking, "from all over town," for the numerous agencies, administrators, bureaus, departments and so forth are scattered that widely.

Here is an illustration of how things change: from the various sources of information which the administration has set up, the correspondents were led to believe that the Civil Works administration plan of relief was going along all hunky dory. Then, rather suddenly, there came the happening which I predicted some months ago, namely, a lot of petty graft. Next, Mr. Hopkins, the administrator, made a rather clean breast of the thing, saying, in effect, that the CWA had flopped.

But few of the correspondents were prepared for the sudden announcement from the President that a substitute plan had been evolved. The President had been planning to eliminate CWA relief with the return of warmer weather. Something had happened, however, with which the correspondents were not made acquainted. This was development of a conclusion that industry, despite the NRA and other New Deal plans, was not absorbing workers as rapidly as had been expected. Hence, the President decided to continue the CWA program, but in a different form.

It ought to be said here that industry has not been entirely to blame. Industry is recovering. Of that, there can be no doubt. But the progress has been just as slow as progress that takes place when a human being recovers from a long illness. Some of the economists in the government have been frank enough to tell me that they had been too optimistic; they were justified in their belief that recovery was under way, and it is happening, but their guess had been wrong as to speed.

Mr. Roosevelt outlined in his announcement a program of relief for first, distressed families in rural areas; second, distressed families in communities where industries have died, such as in worked-out coal mine areas, and for unemployed populations in large cities. From this outline, it would appear that there had been a great change in the method of dealing out relief, compared with the present system. As far as I can get facts on this new program, however, there is actually little difference. It may serve to create a feeling of new progress, and it may serve to get rid of some of the appointees whose work has not been satisfactory, without causing political strife, but I believe the end sought will be no different than the CWA plan.

While this has been worked out, there have been new rulings galore respecting the Agricultural Adjustment administration contracts with farmers, relating to cotton, wheat, corn and hogs; a new policy also respecting treatment of the dairy industry, and a new setup for handling foreign trade. The treasury, with its vast gold hoard has had to work out details slowly, but there are myriads of those details. And on top of these, there has come a ruckus in congress where 435 representatives and 30-odd senators are up for re-election this fall. There is more than a sprinkling of these who want to restore part of the veterans' compensation that was taken away last year by the economy act. Then, there are the soldiers' bonus advocates. A year ago, Mr. Roosevelt could have said a whispered "no" on any of these, and his wish would have been an irrevocable order. It is different now, however, and the breach between the President and congress is getting no better very fast.

LAST SILK DRESS OF CONFEDERACY MADE WAR PRIZE

A recent acquisition of the Army Aeronautical museum at Wright field is a small portion of the gas bag of a balloon used by the Confederate army for observation purposes. This is a portion of a larger piece presented to the National museum in Washington by the son of Prof. Thaddeus S. C. Lowe, the latter having figured very prominently in the aerial activities of the Union army.

This piece of cloth is valuable not only as a reminder of the use of aircraft in the Civil war, but of the ingenuity displayed by a poverty-stricken army in providing equipment. General Longstreet, in "Our March Against Pope," relates an interesting bit of history in this connection as experienced by the opposing forces.

"It may be of interest," he wrote, "to relate an incident which illustrates the pinched condition of the Confederacy, even as early as 1862. The Federals had been using balloons to examine our positions, and we watched with anxious eyes their beautiful observations as they floated high in the air well out of the range of our guns. While we were longing for the balloons our poverty denied us, a genius suggested that we gather together all the silk dresses in the Confederacy and make a balloon. It was done, and soon we had a grotesquely patterned ship of many and varied hues which was ready for use in the seven days' campaign. We had no gas except at Richmond, and it was the custom to inflate the balloon there, tie it securely to an engine and run it down the York River railroad to any point at which we desired to set it up.

"One day it was on a steamer down the James river when the tide went out and left the vessel and balloon high and dry on a bar. The Federals gathered it in and with it the last silk dress in the Confederacy. This capture was the meanest trick of the war and one which I have never forgiven."

Patriotism, sacrifice, ardor and romance, quite aside from its aerial activities, hang about that vanished and faded silk.—Washington Post.

Whose Fault?

If a Child Won't Play with Others?

Parents who understand children know where to place the blame when a youngster mopes, keeps to himself, or is "ugly" toward others. Sluggishness runs any disposition, and that's what is usually wrong. But it's just as wrong to dose that child with sickening cathartics. Until 15—or older—a child's bowels need but little aid—a very mild form of help. Stronger things often upset the stomach or weaken the bowel muscles. For the happy solution of this problem, see what to do, in the next column.

There are happy, healthy boys and girls who have never "down the bitter taste and violent action of castor oil—or similar cathartics. The only "medicine" they ever get—or ever need—to help the bowels is plain California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fruit syrup has the natural laxative action that assists Nature as it should. Next day, the child feels and acts himself, and has a normal appetite. But use the real California Syrup of Figs, with the word "California" on the label and on the bottle.

Lesson for March 18

JESUS RESPONDS TO FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 13:54-58-14:13, 14:15-21-31.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ask and it shall be given you, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you.—Matt. 7:7.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Helps a Stranger.

JUNIOR TOPIC—When People Trust
Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR
TOPIC—A Mother's Love and Faith.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Faith Tested and Triumphant.

I. The Unbelief of Jesus' Own Countrymen (13:54-58).

Jesus shared the common fate of men, unacknowledged in his own country. Even his own brothers did not believe in him until after his resurrection (John 7:8-9; cf. Acts 1:14).
Because of this unbelief only a limited work could be done there.

II. Jesus Responding to the Faith of the Multitude (Matt. 14:13, 14).

1. He retired to the desert (v. 13).
The news of the cruel death of John the Baptist brought grief to the heart of Jesus and he withdrew to a place of quietness to commune with the heavenly Father. Jesus accepted John's death as typical of his own.

2. Followed by the people (v. 13).
The people were so greatly interested in him that they followed him on foot out of the cities.

3. Jesus healing the sick (v. 14).
Although the rulers had broken with him, he did not abandon his work.
Though desperate and hopeless cases were brought to him, none was found too hard for him.

III. Jesus Responding to the Faith of a Woman of Canaan (Matt. 15:21-28).

1. The mother's awful distress (vv.
21, 22). Her daughter was grievously vexed with a devil. The daughter was the one who was afflicted, but it was the mother who carried the burden.
No doubt this gentle woman had heard of the fame of Jesus. His power to heal had come to her notice and doubtless many times she longed for him to come her way that her daughter might be healed. Now that he was in her neighborhood she came straightway to him.

2. The mother's fervent appeal for help (vv. 23-25). She humbly fell at his feet and pleaded for mercy. She besought him to cast the demon out.
Her appeal may be considered as a model prayer.

a. It was sincere and earnest. From the depths of her heart she cried to the Lord for help.

b. It was brief and definite. In a few well chosen words she besought the Lord in behalf of her daughter.

c. It was personal and humble. The Lord is pleased when we beseech him in behalf of personal friends as well as ourselves. She came humbly, for according to Mark's account she fell at his feet (Mark 7:25).

d. It was believing and persistent.
Though she was outside of the covenant people, she believed the Lord would hear a cry of need. All who accept Christ are his covenant people.
She persistently begged help of the Lord. She would not accept a refusal.
The Lord is pleased with the soul who will not let him go until the blessing is granted (Luke 11:5-10, 13:1-8).

3. The woman's faith rewarded (vv.
26-28).

a. Jesus' apparent refusal (v. 23).
He answered her not a word. This seems strange that to her distressing cry he was irresponsive. Scarcely ever did anyone have to ask the second time. Frequently he did not wait to be asked. The reason for his silence was that a real difficulty lay in the way.
He was sent to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. This woman was a stranger to the covenant people. Her appeal was on the wrong basis. She addressed him as the son of David, which only a child of the kingdom, an Israelite, had a right to do.

b. The woman's quick response (vv.
25-27). As soon as she perceived the difficulty she worshiped him as Lord and cried for help. While only the Israelite could approach him as the son of David, all can come to him and own him as Lord. She willingly took her place as a Gentile "dog," recognizing that salvation is of the Jews.
The word for dog is a diminutive term used for the pet or household dog which had a right to the crumbs which fell from the table.

c. The glorious issue of her faith
(v. 28). She received more than she asked. Her daughter was healed at once while the instructions she received were worth much to her. She goes down in history with the Savior's commendation of her faith.

When Age Comes

Now they that are younger than I have me in derision, whose fathers I would have disdained to have set with the dogs of my flock. And now I am their song, yea, I am their byword.—
Job 30:1, 9.

Liberty

What is your besetting sin? Christ can turn that bondage into liberty and more. What can be more than liberty? To have the power to liberate others.

Common Sense Applied to Hot-Weather Garb

It wasn't until 1910 that men's summer clothes were thin enough;
and seersuckers were the pioneers.
And a monument to the man who invented tropical worsteds! If we have our sartorial history with us in serviceable accuracy, seersuckers appeared long before the 'date' men tioned. They came from India and the pucker in them is caused by holding the threads in the warp more loosely than the other threads during the process of weaving. All ancient peoples in tropical lands would have none of your trouserings "hok'g in the heat," but wore gowns in some form, long or short. You can't induce civilized man to do this, but he might be persuaded to compromise on knickerbockers slightly below the knee and wide open at the bottom.

You see this in the Bavarian native costume; and Dutchmen of medieval Holland wore them.—F. H. Collier, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"I keep fit"

"...in these days of recovery...if I don't, someone else will have my job." How? "Well, I learned years ago that work...wear and tear...takes something out of men and women—particularly those who work indoors."

"I tore down those precious red-blood-cells faster than my good body could rebuild. A friend told me the story of that grand medicine S.S.S. Now at 4 P. M. I am fit to still 'carry on'."

If you feel weak...lack a keen appetite...or if your skin is pale...try S.S.S. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick up in your appetite...your color and skin should improve with increased strength and energy.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-globin of the blood to enable you to "carry on" without exhaustion as you should naturally. At all drug stores.

WITH HER LAUNDRY SOAP

Discovers Oxydol's Richer Suds last even till her wash is done

THE amazing new discovery of the world's most famous soap experts, the makers of Ivory—this new and improved Oxydol does these things no other soap can do or has ever done:

- (1) Soak out dirt in 15 minutes. Without boiling, without back-breaking rubbing. Hence—cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine, saving hours of labor.
- (2) Gets clothes 4 to 5 shades WHITER, by scientific Tintometer test, than other soaps. Whiter in one washing than ANY other soap can get them in two to FOUR washings!
- (3) Yea, due to the special mild protective elements it contains, it neither fades nor injures color or fabric. Even cotton prints and children's dainty frocks are safe. And—it's so kind to hands that you're amazed at its power to clean clothes!

Thick 3-inch Suds in Any Water
Oxydol is specially fitted to water conditions in each district where it's sold. The Oxydol you get here already contains just the right amount of water-softener to fit the water you use. You can see the results in the suds.
Oxydol multiplies 500 TIMES in suds! Makes rich 3-inch suds in any water, hard or soft!
And Oxydol is economical. By actual test, a regular 25c package will do the work of 8 to 10 cakes of bar soap or 2 to 3 times as much flakes!

Accept FREE Trial
Send your name and address to Procter &
Gamble, Dept. 86-4, Box 1801, Cincinnati, Ohio, and we'll see you get a regular 10c package (enough for 2 full washings) absolutely free. Or to avoid delay—get Oxydol today from your own grocer.

HAMILTON NOTES

Probably the most interesting event during the last week was the Fat-Slim contest that was "pulled off" last Friday evening. We can in no way describe this game and we can only say that if you missed it you certainly missed thirty minutes of continuous laughter. In other games the Midgets defeated the girls and the boys (Rambler) defeated the Independents in a rather over-time affair.

The honor roll follows:

First Grade—Mary Lou Jones, Sara Bell Woods, Lloyd Shields.
Second Grade—Kathryn Acra, Charles Palmer, Wilma Hodges, Junior Black.
Third Grade—Catherine Carroll, Jeanette Edwards, Dorothy Griffin.
Fourth Grade—Lucille Varner.
Fifth Grade—Ralph Abdon, Jean Ogden.
Sixth Grade—Bertha Newberry, Clara M. Hamilton, Betty Palmer, Maud Atha.
Seventh Grade—Esther Jones.
Eighth Grade—Mary Atha.
Tenth Grade—J. Wesley Palmer.

EXPERIMENT STATION

FIFTY YEARS OLD
Plans are being made to celebrate next year the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky. "The growth and service of the Experiment Station have been such as to make the occasion eminently worth celebrating," says a statement from a committee arranging to observe the anniversary.

Spraying and pruning orchards are being emphasized by Jackson county owners. Thirty Experiment Station bulletins have been given out, and several demonstrations held.

IN REMEMBRANCE

In loving remembrance of my dear mother, Mrs. Ida Caroline Koons LaFever. Born April 2, 1858, died November 9, 1933 at Lorain, O. Laid to rest by her beloved ones at Bellevue, Ky., Nov. 12, 1933.

Leaving one daughter and son-in-law, Mrs. Prudence Isabella LaFever Yingling, seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, also one brother, two sisters, Mr. Geo. Koons.

Dearest mother you have gone and left me with a gap that can never be filled. My heart sure is heavy and I miss you so. But God knows best his will is mine.

A precious one from us has gone, A voice we loved is stilled; A place is vacant in our home, Which never can be filled.

God in His wisdom has recalled, The boon His love had given, And though the body slumbers here The soul is safe in Heaven.

Sadly missed by Daughter and family and also one brother Geo. Koons and two sisters.

CLUB GIRLS SERVE LUNCH

Girls of Unit III, 4-H club foods project, served lunch to 106 women at the mothers' day program at the Oddville consolidated school in Harrison county. The Oddville Hustlers club is the champion 4-H club of the county. Seventy-eight members completed projects last year, and 104 boys and girls are enrolled this year. Mrs. Helen Harcourt Switzer is leader.

Boys county homemakers are using more fresh vegetables and cooking them for shorter periods of time, and using economical meat dishes, reports Miss Lolis Husebo, home demonstration agent.

There was a splendid attendance and all enjoyed the day.

EARLY PRECAUTION TENDS TO PREVENT TOBACCO DISEASES

Precaution taken at this time will help to prevent injury from malarial leafspot diseases, mosaic, and root-rot in tobacco later in the season, points out Dr. W. D. Valleau, plant pathologist at the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

Barns should be thoroughly cleaned out and trash disposed of in a way that it will not be blown about the farm and deposited in plant beds. Such trash may be a source of infection of wildfire and a gular leafspot.

Tobacco trash should not be used on plant beds as fertilizer, either before or after burning. Commercial fertilizers are more satisfactory. Plant beds should be located away from barns to get away from tobacco trash.

Most farmers realize the importance of thorough burning or steaming so that weeding will not be necessary. The mosaic disease is spread from the hands of men who chew natural leaf tobacco while weeding the beds. Thorough burning or steaming is necessary also if the same plant bed site is to be used a second time, because of possible injury from black root-rot.

Rowers in Calloway and Graves counties should prepare to spray plant beds with bordeaux mixture, as the true-wildfire disease caused extensive damage to beds in Calloway county last year, and has been present in parts of Graves county for at least two years. This disease has proved injurious in plant beds and to some extent in the field. It differs from the blackfire common in topped tobacco in wet season which seems to be due to abnormal soil conditions.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Whitley county farmers have bought 4,000 pounds of Korean lesperon seed this year, as the crop last year gave good profits.

Several Daviess county farmers are building standard poultry laying houses, using specifications from the Kentucky Experiment Station.

The Allen County Loose Leaf Warehouse will furnish premium money for 4-H club members growing one-sucker tobacco.

Mrs. Breathitt county farmers are planning to sow Korean lesperon seed than in any previous year. Simpson county 4-H club members sold 29,565 pounds of one-sucker tobacco at an average price of $11.35. The highest crop average was 18.25 and the highest basket price was $22.50.

RAPID ACTION

BEING TAKEN IN COUNTY A-A-A SIGN-UP - MOST REMUNERATIVE OF ALL A-A-A PROGRAMS - GROWERS TO BE HIGHLY BENEFITTED

The Boone county AAA Corn-Hog sign-up swings into full action beginning this Friday with the first community sign-up day to be held at Florence. Community sign-up days will be held as rapidly as possible the next two weeks to give every eligible grower an opportunity to cooperate and receive parity payments.

Twenty-two growers had already signed contracts at the close of the educational campaign on Tuesday of this week. Growers in the first part of the program were advised to postpone signing of contracts until the community sign-up days. This was done in order that each grower would have sufficient time to fill out his preliminary work sheet and supporting evidence sheet. It is necessary that these sheets already be filled out by the grower at the time of signing. Every grower with two or more acres of corn is urged to fill out and turn in a work sheet for the past two years as this will greatly assist the campaign committee and save the local association the expense of making this survey later. This survey will be made of all non-signing growers.

The sign-up days are being held in as many communities as possible. All corn-hog raisers who possibly can are urged to report at these sign-up days. They will be held as follows:

Florence Bank, Friday, March 23.
Grant Bank, Monday, March 26.
Hamilton school, Tuesday, March 27th.

Hebron Bank, March 28th.
Verona Bank, March 30th.
Petersburg, Thursday, April 5th.
Union Bank, Friday March 6th.

The Corn-Hog program is the most remunerative of all the AAA programs. Growers were found the past week to receive from $25.00 to over $800.00 in parity payments with a large number receiving from $400.00 to $600.00 in benefit payments this year. The contract is also a one year contract covering the period from now until the first day of next December. The payments in most instances will mean more net profit than was made from the entire corn-hog operations during the past two years combined. The growers cooperating in this program are not only benefiting thru their payments but are benefiting in a more important way thru the expected better prices as a result of all growers cooperating in the program.

The sign-up is coming at one of the busiest times of the entire farm year, however, it is too important to overlook. Every grower shares an equal responsibility to his profession. The big responsibility in this case is to come forward and sign or list the corn hog information on your farm if you have averaged two or more acres of corn the past two years and not expect to be solicited.

Those growers who have signed Corn-Hog contracts are H. M. Holladay, L. C. Acra, Owen Allan, Mrs. J. H. Bartley, Ed Berkshire, Pericles Grubbs, George Gubser, J. E. Hodges, G. D. Hoffman, R. B. Huey, R. P. Hughes, M. M. Lucas, W. R. Morris, Wilford Rouse, Karl Rouse, Lassing Huey, A. J. Scott, J. W. Seebree, Holt White, Pat Code, G. H. Moore and C. W. Montgomery.

Note—Last Saturday was listed in last week's paper as the closing date for the sign-up. This was an error.

Mrs. B. E. Aylor, of Woolper Creek, spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Myrtle Charles, of Dayton, Ohio. Her daughter Miss Velma Phillips, who has been in a hospital there for several weeks, returned home with her.

INTERESTING GAME TO BE PLAYED AT WALTON

One of the most interesting games of the season will be played at Walton High School Auditorium Saturday, March 24, when the Dayton All-Stars girls will play the Walton Independent boys team. The entire portion of the proceeds received by Walton will be donated to the Cripple Children Fund.

MISS MARY JUDGE

Miss Mary Judge, aged 76 years, passed away Sunday at her home on Route 42, near Union, Ky., after five weeks' illness.

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Harry Ruffra, with whom she made her home, two brothers, Mark Judge, of Union, Ky., and Morris Judge, of Erlanger, Ky.

Funeral was from the late residence Wednesday at 1:15 a. m., with requiem high mass at St. Paul's church, Florence, Ky., at 10 a. m., by the Rev. H. J. Egbring, pastor after which she was laid to rest in St. Mary's cemetery, by the side of her parents, who preceded her to the grave many years ago.

Funeral director Philip Tallafiero had charge of the funeral arrangements.

MRS. LULU WILSON

Mrs. Lulu Wilson, aged 54 years, passed away Sunday at her home near Union, Ky., after a few weeks' illness. She had recovered from an attack of measles, when she was stricken with bronchial pneumonia. She is survived by her husband, Harry Wilson, one son, Robert Wilson, one sister, Mrs. Geo. Hollis and one brother, John Rouse.

Funeral services were conducted at the Hopeful Lutheran church Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. H. M. Hauter, pastor, after which she was laid to rest in the cemetery nearby.

Funeral director Philip Tallafiero had charge of the funeral arrangements.

C. O. and Listen Hempfling, of Taylorsport, were business visitors to Burlington Monday, and while here made this office a very brief call.

ASSOCIATION

COMMITTEEMEN MET IN BURLINGTON LAST TUESDAY TO CERTIFY THE SIX HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE B.O.O.N.E. COUNTY A-A-A CONTRACTS

Twenty-six Boone county Tobacco Production Control Association committeemen met at Burlington Tuesday and began certifying the six hundred and eighty-five Boone county AAA tobacco contracts. The committeemen found they had a big job to check and classify each contract as to evidence and certify as to it being correctly executed.

The committeemen were greatly handicapped by many growers failing to supply warehouse weights and sufficient evidence to show for the number of pounds listed on their contracts. All growers who have not supplied warehouse weights for their base years on their contract and wish supporting evidence should notify their community committeemen immediately by mail them by letter to the County Agent's office.

The community committeemen are expected to complete the contracts not later than Friday of this week and turn them over to the County Control Committee for final certification, and sending to Washington.

The county committeemen in county meeting Tuesday voted to file protest with the Tobacco Section on the expected ruling that only where ten percent or more of the tobacco is left at home will appraisals be made. All growers in the meantime having less than ten percent of their crop left for appraisals are urged to sell the remaining if possible before the warehouses close.

WORKERS FOR ANY JOB

Employers in need of any kind of workers, labor, skilled workers, domestic, clerical or executive, are urged to get in touch with the local Reemployment office at Burlington, which will send a qualified and competent worker to you without cost to employer or employee.

If the prospective employee does not meet your requirements, there are others waiting for a trial according to O. R. Russ, manager of the local Reemployment Office at Burlington.

The local National Reemployment office is a division of the United States Department of Labor. It was organized to recruit workers for public and civil works and to supply workers to industry and other private employers.

Workers of nearly every trade and occupation known are listed in the local Reemployment offices. In the past many of the persons listed by the Reemployment Service have been absorbed by federal projects. Forces on these projects are now being drastically curtailed.

The purpose of this article is to acquaint the persons of this county with the fact that there are hundreds of persons seeking employment. The Reemployment Service is prepared to furnish the name and work record and experience to anyone who may be in need of labor, whether it is skilled, unskilled, domestic, clerical or professional.

Whenever permanent or even temporary work is given it will lighten the load of the relief organization and may restore an entire family to a self sustaining basis.

Already a number of the largest employers in the state have signified their intention of securing all labor from registers of the reemployment service, recognizing the fact that a standardized government agency has the facilities to supply selected labor that will fulfill all requirements.

A list of odd jobs will be found below which gives an idea of the kind of employees that may be obtained from the Reemployment Service. A call to the Reemployment Office in person or by telephone will receive immediate attention.

TOURNAMENT

WON BY FLORENCE BOYS AND UNION GIRLS—WAS SAID TO BE VERY SUCCESSFUL IN EVERY PARTICULAR—WAS HELD AT FLORENCE

The Independent Tournament held at Florence, March 15, 16' and 17 proved to be very successful in every particular. Large crowds attended each game and much interest was shown.

were Florence in the boys division, with Walton as runner-up and Union in the girls division with Florence as runner-up.

In the boys' division the Hebron and Walton boys are the openers, with the Walton boys winning by a score of 30 to 20. In the next bracket the Verona boys defeated the Hamilton team by a score of 22 to 24. Probably the most interesting game of the tournament was between the Florence boys and New Haven, when the game went into five over-time periods. The final score was Florence 42 and New Haven 38. The next bracket was won by Petersburg, who defeated the Burlington boy by a score of 46 to 15.

The winners of the first and second bracket played for honors, Walton defeating the Verona boys by a score of 40 to 24. The third and fourth bracket was won by Florence when they defeated Petersburg in a close game, by the score of 32 to 31.

The finals proved to be very interesting, and was hotly contested from the beginning to end, with Florence winning over Walton by a score of 32 to 28.

In the girls' division, the Burlington and Florence girls were the openers, with the Florence jassies winning by a score of 38 to 19. In the second bracket the Union girls trimmed the Hebron team by a score of 36 to 26.

The finals played between Florence and Union proved to be an easy victory for the Union girls when they defeated their opponents by the top-heavy score of 40 to 21.

Army Air Mail Service Is Suspended, Safer Schedule Is Planned—Cummings Starts Criminal Action Against Mellon on Income Tax Evasion Charges.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

BY DIRECTION of the President, all air mail operations by the army air corps were suspended by Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the corps, and the drafting of a new schedule that would insure greater safety for the flyers was begun. When the news reached him of the deaths of the ninth and tenth army mail carriers within three weeks Mr. Roosevelt sent out word: "The continuation of deaths in the army air corps must stop." He ordered that the carrying of air mail cease except "on such routes, under such weather conditions and under such equipment and personnel conditions as will insure, as far as the utmost care can provide, against constant recurrence of fatal accidents."

General Foulois, Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of air mail operations, and various Post Office department officials built a revised "safety" route with the trans-continental line from Newark to San Francisco as the main line, other routes feeding into it. The intention was to reduce the number of trips on all schedules and to permit less night flying.

Colonel Lindbergh aroused interest by visiting Washington for two days and conferring with Secretary of War Dorn. Soon after the secretary named the colonel, Orville Wright and Clarence Chamberlain on a committee to investigate the army carrying of the air mail.

General Foulois has been working on a plan by which army flyers could join with commercial pilots in receiving training. The step follows a suggestion by Mr. Roosevelt that "because military lessons have been taught us during the last few weeks," army aviators should train with those who "later on will fly the mail" in "night flying, blind flying and instrument flying."

Meanwhile committees of both house and senate were working out legislation along the lines of the President's request that the flying of the mails be returned to private companies under a new contract system.

The President's prompt action in the air mail matter, virtually admitting an error had been made, took some of the wind out of the sails of his opponents but did not entirely stop the attacks. Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronautic association and formerly Republican senator from Connecticut, demanded in a public statement that Mr. Roosevelt tell who had misled him as to the fitness of the army air corps and its planes to carry the mails. Both General Foulois and General MacArthur, chief of staff, were quoted in interviews as saying the army was equal to the task, but Bingham said that, so far as he could learn, the President had not consulted either of them before ordering the air corps to undertake the assignment.

CRIMINAL action for alleged evasion of the federal income tax law was ordered by Attorney General Cummings to be brought immediately against Andrew W. Mellon, former secretary of the treasury and one of the world's wealthiest men; T. L. Sildow of Cleveland, law partner of Newton D. Baker; Thomas S. Lamont, son of the noted financier Thomas W. Lamont and a member of the J. P. Morgan banking house, and James J. Walker, former mayor of New York.

Mr. Cummings announced that the Department of Justice had conducted a secret investigation of the tax affairs of these four men and had turned the information gathered over to United States attorneys in New York, Cleveland and Pittsburgh. Grand jury action in each of those cities was expected to result. Cases against more than a score of other men were being prepared by the department's tax division.

Mr. Mellon was quick to place his case before the people. In a long statement he denied ever having failed to pay his proper income taxes and said that in the last twenty years he had paid more than $20,000,000 in this form of rates. He characterized the attorney general's action as "politics of the crudest sort."

"I feel very strongly that before the attorney general of the United States should bring a charge of this kind against me I, like any other citizen, should be given proper notice in the manner provided by law of the government's intention to assess additional taxes and should have been afforded an opportunity to meet such charges in the customary way."

"In all my years of experience in the administration of the tax laws I have never known of a single instance in which such unfair and arbitrary action has been taken."

Several times since last May, when

Congressman McFadden made charges against Mr. Mellon based on information given by one Olson, regarding what was called a specific tax evasion, Mr. Mellon said, he has requested Mr. Cummings to make a full investigation and received nothing better than an evasive response. In conclusion Mr. Mellon said: "I am glad the issue is joined at last and am quite content to leave the outcome to the courts and to the good sense and fairness of the American people when all the facts are known."

TWO hundred and thirty-one Democratic members of the house kicked over the traces and, with the aid of 59 Republicans, passed the Patman bill calling for the immediate payment of the veterans' bonus with greenbacks. The President has repeatedly expressed his opposition to the measure and indicated that he would veto it if it got through congress. Its passage by the senate was considered most doubtful.

There were only two reasonable explanations for the revolt of the Democrats. One was put in words by Representative John X. Brown of Kentucky, a Democrat, who was in opposition. He said: "You are buying veterans' votes. You are holding out this piece of bait to get veterans' votes this summer. There is not a man in the house who believes this bill will ever become a law, and yet you sit here and vote for it for your own political welfare."

The other explanation was that many of the Democrats are resentful of the "rubber stamp" label that has been put on congress and welcomed an opportunity to break away from dictation and, as one of them said, vote as their consciences directed. Fred Britten of Chicago, Republican, charged that the Democrats supported the measure with the secret understanding that they would not vote to over-ride the President's veto.

SENATOR SIMON D. FESS of Ohio is one of the most valuable of the administration's critics, and he found opportunity for another energetic attack when the senate was considering Senator Tom Connally's bill to include cattle among the basic commodities subject to farm adjustment control.

The provision for an appropriation of $200,000,000 was the special point of assault by Fess, McNary of Oregon, Dickinson of Iowa, and Carey of Wyoming and Vandenberg of Michigan, all of whom agreed that the Agricultural adjustment program has been a complete failure. The Democrats, with the exception of Connally, made no reply to the verbal barrage.

The Ohio senator said that hog prices had fallen instead of risen, that the prices of farm commodities not under the AAA had in many cases risen faster and higher than the so-called basic commodities. "That sort of thing is nauseating to any decent person who wants business to be done in a business way," he said, alluding to the hog buying program. "It's time to stop this foolish experimentation, time to take the heavy hand of government off business and let business recover."

Senator Vandenberg and Senator McNary could not understand why $200,000,000 were required for cattle when only $100,000,000 were asked in the original bill covering six commodities.

JOSEPH B. EASTMAN and the Interstate Commerce commission have joined in recommending to congress legislation that will place under "the guiding hand of government control" the transportation agencies that use the highways and waterways of the country. Their report, which was submitted to the President, declares that regulation of motor and water transportation is necessary "if a threatening chaos is to be transformed into order." Such regulation, they said, should be concentrated in the Interstate Commerce commission.

In proposing changes in the interstate commerce act, the co-ordinator and the commission recommend liberalization of the long and short haul clause forbidding a railroad to charge less for a longer than a shorter haul, except on permission from the commission.

This clause is held by middle western interests to have damaged them substantially by preventing traffic moving by rail to the Pacific coast, and its repeal is now being sought.

ONE of Japan's new torpedo boats, the Tomozuru, of 527 tons, was wrecked mysteriously off the Sasebo naval base and it was believed most of her crew of 113 men were lost. The vessel was completed only February 28 last and was a new type, carrying the heaviest armament ever given a ship of its size. It was considered a triumph of Japanese naval architecture. Several others of the same type are under construction.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—As I look back on events that transpired when President Roosevelt took office a year ago, it is

New Deal "Digging In" striking to note the similarity of action then and in the two weeks subsequent to the opening of his second year in office. The "New Deal" opened its second year in the midst of a series of events that were comparable, in my opinion, with those of the historic inaugural week of 1932. And as the "New Deal" was all-embracing as regards our economic and social structure, just so were the events which I am reporting now definitely linked with the very fundamentals of our individual and national existence.

We became accustomed, during the dark days of the World war, to reading about this army or the "digging in" to hold the ground gained. It appears to me that the outstanding fact with relation to the opening of the New Deal's second year is the digging in process represented by the latest developments. Let us examine them.

First, there was President Roosevelt's momentous speech in which he calmly told the country that the principles of NRA were here to stay; second, there was a decision by the Supreme court of the United States beyond which none can go for legal adjudication, by which the New York milk licensing law was held constitutional, and a few days later the congress gave approval to the so-called bill which would be construed no other way than a reflection of solid nationalistic feeling.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech, of course, stood out, but had the Supreme court ruled that the state of New York had no right to fix a minimum price for milk, there can be no doubt that the basis of much of the New Deal would begin to crumble. Had the congress turned away from the big navy idea—that is, ordering construction of our navy to the limits of treaty agreement—it would have denied that nationalistic policy seriously, although the New Deal schemes generally have not touched on the question of defense. Rejection of the big navy plan necessarily would have had the effect of raising some doubt as to the President's control, and one hears about Washington the suggestion that Mr. Roosevelt will have plenty of trouble if congress gets too independent.

As a part and parcel of the President's enunciation in the speech, General Johnson, called upon

"We Are Not NRA, Going Back" industry to reduce hours and raise wages further. The militant "crack down" Johnson was not as severe in his statements as was Mr. Roosevelt and words of protest boiled right out of the meeting where he spoke. But whether the industries represented in the conference with General Johnson are willing or able to do as he declared was necessary, every one in Washington is convinced that Mr. Roosevelt meant exactly what he said when he solemnly declared:

"One thing is very certain. We are not going back."

The President was equally unequivocal in his assertion that the principles of recovery embodied in NRA must move forward. Industry can wait no more that if Washington opinion may be taken as a criterion. The President holds that the NRA principles provide for a balanced recovery and that without a balance, there can be no permanent good times. So it is the proposition that Mr. Roosevelt has determined to go on, that a majority of the highest court in the land has found one of his basic laws, although embodied in a state statute, to be in accordance with the Constitution, and he has a congress that is thus far under his control for enactment of the bulk of his New Deal legislation.

The effect? As far as I know, there is no person of super-intelligence now living, and that would be the only human being capable of foretelling what the results will be. The changes made under the New Deal are brand new, different than anything economists have ever seen, and time alone will reveal which of them holds the things that fit our country's national life.

Politically, it is quite apparent that the effect will be. Every mother's son in the Democratic party in congress is going back to his bailiwick to seek re-election under the Roosevelt banner, as distinguished from the old Democratic flag. Espousing Roosevelt's program will be popular in the bulk of the districts, and the public opposition will just as obviously have to be predicated on issues built up against what the present administration has done, is doing or proposes to do.

The "big navy" bill is a five-year proposition. It contemplates that the American navy will be expanded by the construction of sufficient ships of the various types to place the totals just inside the limitation of the London and Washington treaties by which tonnage was limited. So, according to naval authorities, our government will soon set out on construction of about 100 new destroyers and submarines, something like 1,000 airplanes and one aircraft carrier, the airplane's mother ship. We have nearly all of the heavier gunboats now that are permitted under the arms limitation of the treaties mentioned. But the navy strength respecting destroyers and submarines is far below the total that is allowed.

Before the senate passed the bill, it included an amendment that reduces profiteering on construction jobs, to some extent. I have a hunch that the big shipbuilding corporations will find a way to get around part of the provision, but obviously they will not be able to gain the profits out of the construction work that might otherwise obtain. Succinctly, the provision requires that no contractor can gain more than 10 per cent profit for his risk and investment, but enforcement of such a rule is not as simple as it sounds. It will be recalled that there were "cost-plus" contracts used during the World war construction, and it also is a matter of general knowledge that the government paid dearly as a result. The contractors were willing to pay any kind of wages and hire any number of workers they could get, because when the costs were totaled, they simply added their 10 per cent, and collected.

From some of the letters I have received from readers, I gather that they felt I was a bit glibistic a few weeks ago when I predicted that there is war brewing and that it is likely to engulf some parts of the world before the end of this year. I was reporting at that time just what authorities in Washington knew of world conditions and signs they could read.

While our own congress was authorizing construction of a treaty-size navy, consider the developments that same week abroad. They include: the French chamber of deputies naval committee approved a project for construction of a 26,000-ton man-of-war, to be a sister ship of the gigantic Dunkerque that is now being built. It also ordered construction of two new submarines and a destroyer. The British admiralty presented 1934 estimates for four more cruisers and twenty other ships, and an increase in naval personnel of 2,000 men. These additions will cost roughly $282,000,000.

In addition to these moves by the British and the French, the Italians took quick cognizance of the action of their rivals, the French. While it was not officially communicated to Washington, my understanding is that the Italians are making plans to build a 25,000-ton battleship. This, of course, would offset the new Dunkerque that the Paris government will commission soon.

Over in Japan, war plans go on apace. And Japan is making faces at Russia. For example, the Japanese war ministry sent a note to Russia the other day, telling the Soviets, in effect, to stay on their own side of the international border. It seems the Soviet planes had been doing a little flying over Manchukuo, the new state set up by Japan out of territory taken from China, and the Japanese apparently didn't want the Russians playing in their back yard.

Now, concerning General Johnson's demands on industry, it certainly can be said that his

Johnson's Warning theme song, as they say of the movies, was burdened with a threat. He did come down off his high horse long enough to say "we cannot succeed without public support." That was quite a concession by the general. Yet, he had previously said to the folks, who are the personnel of the code supervision, that they were going to compel industry to cut the hours of labor and increase wages at the same time.

"Of course," said General Johnson, "we cannot succeed without public support of what we are trying to do, and I want to warn non-compliers that we are not only going to revive public sentiment for the Blue Eagle insignia, but under specific orders from President Roosevelt we are reorganizing to enforce the penal sections of the recovery act."

The administrator went on to say that he had been "too gentle." He feels, apparently, that he has not cracked down sufficiently hard. So, he is going to see that more employment is made by compelling industry to take on more workers, and the whole import of his attitude appears to this observer as being one that will enforce that employment whether the particular industry needs the added workers, or whether it can pay them if it hires them, or whether it will bankrupt the firm if it obeys. From this position, it appears to many with whom I have talked that General Johnson has put industry right between the devil and the deep blue sea, and there is little choice left.

The general obviously was moved to go the distance he did by the definite character of Mr. Roosevelt's assertions which were that "we are not going back," and the recovery principles are here to stay. All of which is very strong language. It is different language than the American nation ever has heard from Washington.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, © 1934, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 25

CONFESSING AND FOLLOWING CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 16:13-24. GOLDEN TEXT—And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Matt. 16:16. PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter's Answer to Jesus' Question. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Question and the Answer. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Putting Christ First. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Thin Ye of Christ?

In order to obviate a break in the studies in Matthew and still have an Easter lesson, the review should be omitted and the lesson for April 1 taken instead.

2. The time in Christ's ministry. It marked a turning point. His ministry was largely restricted to his disciples after this. The cross was a short time ahead. The Messiah had already been rejected. They had already charged him with being in league with the devil and sought to kill him. It was highly important that the disciples should have clear views as to Christ's person in order to stand the test of the trial and crucifixion of Jesus.

3. Peter's confession of Jesus (vv. 13-16). The occasion (vv. 13-15). Two questions asked by Jesus provoked this confession.

(1) As to the opinion of the people concerning him (vv. 13, 14). They recognized him as a teacher and prophet of more than human authority. Today, as then, there is a diversity of opinion concerning Jesus. Some think that he is only a man; others that he is a great teacher but nothing more. It was his persistent claim to be the Godman, the very Son of God, that sent him to the cross.

(2) As to the personal opinion of the disciples (v. 15). It was not enough for them to be able to tell what opinion the people held concerning Jesus. It was necessary that they have clear personal knowledge.

b. The content (v. 16). It consisted of two parts.

(1) "Thou art the Christ." This means that Jesus of Nazareth was the Messiah, the fulfiller of the Jewish hopes and expectations.

(2) "The Son of the living God." This acknowledged him to be divine. It was the recognition of his glorious person in keeping with the Jewish hope (Isa. 9:6, 7).

4. Christ's confession of Peter (vv. 17-19). Peter had made a noble confession. Now Jesus confesses him. Those who confess Christ shall be confessed by him (Matt. 10:32, 33).

5. Christ's charge to the disciples (v. 20). He asked them not to tell any man that he was the Messiah. The time was not ripe for such testimony.

6. The New Body, the Church, Announced (vv. 18, 19).

Following the confession of Peter, Jesus declared his intention of bringing into existence a new body. To the members of this body he promised to give the keys of the kingdom. Peter was to have a distinguished place in this body. The keys entrusted to him were used at Pentecost and again in the case of Cornelius. Christ has the keys of Hades and death.

7. The King Predicts His Death (vv. 21-23).

This prediction was no doubt startling to the disciples. They did not yet realize that redemption was to be accomplished through the passion of the cross. So unwelcome was this announcement that Peter, cried, "This shall not be unto thee." Later Peter saw through the darkness the sunlight on the hill tops beyond the cross. Redemptive victory through Christ's death is yet the stumbling block to many.

8. The Cost of Discipleship (vv. 24-26).

To follow Christ means suffering. To follow him is to turn one's back upon the world.

1. There must be denial of self. There is a wide difference between self-denial and denial of self.

2. "Take up his cross" (v. 24). This cross is the shame and suffering which lie in the path of loyalty to Christ. To do our whole duty will bring suffering (II Tim. 3:12).

3. Follow Christ (v. 24). This means to have the mind of Christ, to be like Christ. All such shall be rewarded when Christ comes in glory.

Religion Gives Confidence

Religion gives the religious soul the confidence born of close touch with the center of all things. "I can do all things," says the Christian, "through Christ who strengthens me." Is not this worth while?

The Need Today

The need today is for men and women of active personality, men and women who cannot only do things themselves, but also can get things done by others.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

(An Editorial For Thinking People)
As this issue is printed, the magic and hope of spring will have followed the misery of a departing winter into our presence. Let's think for a minute:

The most beautiful of seasons come after the most dreary; a devastating cloudburst will break up to reveal a rainbow of exquisite tints; and a shapeless brown bulb will produce a wonderfully gorgeous bloom.

Such things happen as a matter of course by the immutable laws of God and Nature. Shall we then say, that from the financial moral and governmental wreckage into which our careless living and thinking has brought us, we shall as a matter of course recover to a civilization finer than ever before?

Nay: The laws and customs of man are changeable and sway with the winds of evil; not like the firmly standing laws of the Universe.

Rome, Athens, Babylon, Jerusalem and scores of others reached the pinnacles of the arts and sciences and civilization then fell for centuries into darkness. Shall we?

Our nation stands at the crossroads, but we must do the turning. We must bring about our salvation by our own efforts before we shall be helped from above. Jove helps those who help themselves. The question "Where Do We Go From Here?" must be answered by every one of us NOW.

THE GARDEN

(By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture)

PEAS—Although peas are a precarious crop to grow in many parts of Kentucky, yet the toothsome prospect of home-grown peas makes many gardeners willing to risk at least a small planting.

Peas do not need excessively rich ground; in fact, if there is too much nitrogen, as in heavily manured gardens, leaf and vine growth is made at the expense of the peas. They do need phosphorus however, to make pods set, and, in the event manuring is done, 16 per cent or 20 per cent superphosphate should be sown where the rows are to be and raked in to a depth of from 2 to 4 inches. The rate at which the phosphate should be applied is 1 pound to 30 feet of row. In the event manure is not to be used, a complete fertilizer such as 8-8-6 or 4-10-6 should be used instead of the superphosphate, but in the same way.

In as much as peas are cool weather vegetables, they begin to fail when the weather becomes warm. Their season can be extended by planting the seed deep, 4 inches, for example, but covering it only an inch or two, filling the furrow later, when the seedlings are tall enough not to be covered. With their roots thus in cooler, moisture soil, they are enabled somewhat to resist droughts and warm spells.

For early peas, Radio Id Alaska are excellent, for the seed of both is smooth and not so subject to rotting in the ground if germination is delayed for any reason. For peas of better quality, an either of these, Blue Bantam or American Wonder should be used.

These are wrinkled-seeded sorts, and should not be planted until prompt starting can be expected. All the seed are dwarf sorts, and if the seed is planted in rows of 6 inches apart, they will support each other. Of the semi-tall varieties, Laxtonian and Grandus are among the most satisfactory to grow. Planted in pairs of rows, one row of support will do for both. The leading tall variety is Telephone, which, besides bearing the heaviest crop because of its large bearing surface, seems to be rather more heat-tolerant than some of the others. To carry the pea season quite far into the warm weather, the gardener may plant a row of the relatively little known but quite desirable "edible-podded" peas. Mammoth Melting Sugar is a good variety. Because of its extreme tallness, support to suit should be provided.

The most aggravating pea pest is the plant louse. Spraying with tobacco tea, or better still with a solution made of nicotine sulfate, is recommended.

ONIONS—The time is here for starting onions from sets. The variety is "Yellow sets." The soil should be highly manured so that enough nitrogen is present, and besides, a side dressing of chicken manure or of nitrate of soda should be made. The rates are one bushel of the former to 200 to 300 feet of row; one pound of the latter, to 100 feet.

INSECT CONTROL—Soon the familiar yellow-and-white vutterflies will be observed bobbing toward the early cabbage, laying the eggs that hatch out the troublesome green worms that make cabbage growing so troublesome. It is well to lay in a stock of calcium arsenate or of arsenate of lead, to use as a dust, mixed one part to 6 of hydrated lime. It is well, too, to see that last year's duster is still in usable condition. Those gardeners who have no duster may use merely a sack of porous material, with which to sift on the dust, or a tin can with nail holes punched in its bottom.

THREE-DAY SCHOOL HELD

Mr. A. Threlkeld, President, and Mr. L. D. Richards, Secretary of the Northern Kentucky Production Credit Association, returned Saturday from Louisville. This association was recently formed to make working capital loans to the farmers of the counties of Kenton, Campbell, Boone, Grant, Owen, Carroll, Gallatin and Pendleton.

The Production Credit Corporation of Louisville, the parents organization of all these associations had called in the officers of the associations in Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio for a three days schooling in their duties.

When a farmer makes application for a loan, the Secretary sends an inspector out to praise the chattels offered as security. At this school, instruction was given regarding the proper making of all these papers; the legal and accounting departments also explained the papers and record necessary in that work—all with the thought of having the machinery so set up and oiled as to smooth the applicant's way to a loan.

One of the high lights of the three days was the address Wednesday evening by Mr. Ernest Rico, General Agent at Louisville for the Farm Credit Administration. He told of the rapid expansion of the work of the Federal Land Banks and predicted as rapid growth of these new agencies set up to help the farmers secure working capital. He presented a vision of the two agencies, the one caring for long time credit needs, the other the short time credit system, farmer owned, farmer controlled and run with the farmer's view point in mind.

Throughout the conference, emphasis was placed on the contrast between the emergency loans by Congress which have often been regarded largely as a welfare measure; and on the other hand these agencies set up and planned as a sound, self-supporting, and permanent agricultural bank.

Mr. A. Threlkeld tells us that the local association expects to be ready to receive and act on applications by March 1, 1934.

The names and addresses of the directors of the association are:

A. Threlkeld, Corinth, Ky.; W. H. Parker, Ghent, Ky.; Wm. Ehrig, Alexandria, Ky.; Fred Nelhoff, Independence, Ky.; C. A. Kelly, DeMossville, Ky.; R. H. Procter, Owen, Ky.; C. Listen Hempfling, Constance, Ky.; Warren Davis, Glencoe, Ky.; and H. W. Webb, Williamstown, Ky.

A MONKEY DIET FOR AMERICANS

Natives in the Philippines and other East Indian lands gather coconuts to give us over 300 MILLION Pounds of Oleo imitation or substitute for Real Butter. This substitute has been appropriately named "Monkey Butter."

American farmers feed and milk Cows twice a day, and they can't get a decent price for the fat! Why? Because every pound of the "Monkey Butter" that is sold displaces one pound of American Cow Butter. America is supporting over Two Million Coconut Cows at the direct expense of nearly Two Million American Dairymen.

If General Johnson really wants a Chiselling "Nut" to "Crack Down On," tell him about those Coconut Cows chiselling markets away from the American Dairy Cows and American Farmers, just because Coconut Cows are furnished free in Tropical climates—no feed, no milking—just plenty of cheap labor to gather them up and load them on a boat Duty Free, to sell as 5-cent fat against the American Dairy Farmer.

Write General Johnson—Write Your Congressman—ask your friend Your Congressman—Ask Your Friends to Serve Real Butter on their table.

(It is reliably reported that if every American Farmer had used only one pound of Cow Butter on his table each week we would have a tremendous shortage of Butter today instead of a price wrecking surplus of more than 150 Million Pounds).

DISCUSSES SPRING DRESS ACCESSORIES

Many of the new accessories for spring costumes reflect the influence of the "wind-blown" silhouette, says Miss Iris S. Davenport, extension specialist in clothing, College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Especially is this true of the hats. The hat that has caused the most excitement is the off-the-face" hat. The designers have been kind to those who cannot wear this unusual line, as there are also hats with brims. The crowns are more shallow than last year. Ribbon trimmings predominate. Fabric and straw vie for first place.

PLANNING FOR HOUSE CLEANING

(By Ida C. Hagman, Ky., College of Agriculture)

Sulphur and molasses and spring housecleaning have been considered as synonymous in the good old days when the routine and comfort of family life was disrupted by a prolonged orgy of spring cleaning. As a consequence, the worn and harassed housewife and her family failed to fully enjoy the loveliest season of the year.

The up-to-date housekeeper fancies from life. At the same time wants to get the maximum satisfaction from her home. She considers it essential that her home always be clean, sanitary, comfortable, livable and free from disturbing upheavals, yet without requiring too much of her time and effort to keep it so. This an achievement requiring managerial ability of no mean order.

One of the problems the homemaker faces that of keeping up with the present trend toward ever higher standards of living. For example, she can't be satisfied with a house that was considered clean a hundred years ago. Modern methods and invention have made it possible to have cleaner, more sanitary houses now than at that time.

Only by better planning and organization of her work can the homemaker meet the challenge of today to have her home run smoothly without disturbing the peaceful order of living. Increasingly complicated living conditions made planning not only difficult but very essential. It is no easy matter to decide what must be done and when and how it can be done best to achieve maximum health and happiness for the family.

As an aid in thinking through the planning process, it is well to make a list of all of the tasks that are performed every day. These are sometimes called the routine tasks. Another list should be made of those done once or twice a week and still another list of the special and seasonal tasks. The next step is to work out a calendar for the year of seasonal and special tasks distributing them so that the heavy work is scattered throughout the year and not concentrated at any one time or season. For example, the calendar for March might suggest such special and seasonal tasks as making an inventory of what must be done to re-furnish the home—repairing and painting screens; cleaning and equipping closets and other storage spaces; rearranging dresser, buffet and other drawers; refinishing furniture; cleaning beds, book cases, china cabinets, etc.; and discarding dust catchers and useless articles.

With the lists made out, you are

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

There has been much talk around school lately concerning the swiftly approaching county scholastic tournament. Declamation and duet contests have been held and Elmore Ryle was chosen to enter in the county tournament and Boyd Snow to enter in the District tournament. This decision was due to the small amount of difference in these two boys' ability. For duet Mellicent Berkshire and Wilma Cotton were selected. The girls' declamation contest has not been held as yet. The choruses from both the grades and high school have started practice and are making quite gratifying progress.

The greatly anticipated debate tournament will be held Thursday of this week. Our debaters have been hard at work this week and of course we wish them every success and expect them to gratify our wishes to the fullest extent. Chapel exercises will be held Friday afternoon by the Freshman class. Everybody welcome.

DOES BOONE COUNTY

Wish All Ways to Be Dependent on Kenton County and Ohio Hospitals? Where Is Our Pride?

We have a population of about ten thousand with approximately five thousand voters, which means we have the remaining five thousand, ranging from the ages of one to twenty-one.

We pay our county nurse a small salary each year to give aid to the destitute of our county. There are school children who must have attention, and they must be taken to the Children's Hospital of Cincinnati. The Cincinnati Hospital must pay for the medicine used in such cases. Who really pays? Either the state of Ohio or some of her charity clubs. We also have grown folks who are not able to obtain medical aid, no matter how much it is needed.

The hospital of Covington has refused to take any more of Boone county's charity cases. Can we blame them? No! They have enough of such cases in Kenton.

In fact, almost half of their patients are such.

Should our County Judge appoint some one in each of our voting precincts to collect just one chicken from each voter and that same chicken brought 50c each—and what chicken wouldn't, the amount would almost, if not altogether take care of such cases as we might have in the county. The amount collected from the sale of said chickens or any other produce collected for the express use of giving the county a way to provide for their sick people should be deposited by collectors in one of our county banks if we wish our county nurse to work for us. We should give her something with which to work.

We have a fine number of medical men in the county and feel sure that most of them would be willing to help make our county altogether independent of other counties, by giving their services for as small a fee as possible. And as our Kenton county hospital is kept up mostly by donation, am sure that they, too would give our patients some reduction on their care.

I hear home of the farmers saying: "It is the farmer who must do it all." That is not at all necessary. If those who do not have chickens should be asked to make an offering of 50c. Our people will be glad to give so small a donation for such cause, we feel sure.

A Boone County Nurse, Mabel Wright, Union, Ky.

MT. ZION ROAD

A small crowd attended the Emral sale last Saturday. Everything sold at favorable prices.

Quite a few are on the sick list. It is more profitable to pay a doctor to keep us well than to get sick and perhaps never be able to pay him.

Mrs. Maggie Clarkson is the first to report young chicks in this neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Ward spent the week-end with Mrs. Robert Ringo.

GUNPOWDER

Mrs. Maggie Glacken, of near Richwood, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Ben Northcutt.

Mrs. Harry Wilson died at her home near Union last Sunday, after a few days' illness with the measles, which resulted in pneumonia.

Noah Zimmerman is getting along nicely, and we hope to see him out in the near future.

If the groundhog is responsible for the weather we are having, he is working overtime.

TICKLING THE PALATE

"This duck is certainly enough to tickle the palate," the boarder told his landlady. The woman beamed. "I'm very glad you like my cooking," she replied.

The boarder looked squarely at her. "I didn't say I liked your cooking," he quickly replied. "I said that this duck is enough to tickle the palate. I was referring to the feathers you left on it."—London Answers.

He Knew

The doctor surveyed his patient with a critical eye.

"H'm," he muttered, "you confess that you are bad-tempered, eh? I suppose I need not tell you that a bad temper is caused by an ugly little microbe?"

The patient gasped.

"Shh!" he exclaimed. "For Heaven's sake, speak quietly, doctor. She's sitting in the room next door."

True Enough

An Irish small farmer was asked by his landlord if the report of his intended second marriage was true, and replied: "It is, yer honor."

"But your first wife has only been dead a week, Pat," said the landlord. "An' shure," retorted Pat, "she's as dead now as she ever will be, yer honor."—Border Cities Star.

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christened Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. He proposes to play Nate against Lorry, assuming that they are carrying on the old feud. In this way getting control of the key lands necessary to the project. Nate, however, has no intention of carrying on the feud.

CHAPTER V—Continued

The deputy sheriff rolled a comical eye at the editor. "I haven't seen the boy since he was in high school here, but from what little I know of his tribe I should say none of that breed ever made a threat. They made promises—an' kept 'em."

"I sized him up that way," the editor replied.

After eliciting from Brainerd all the news the latter had, Mr. Rooney strolled away to distribute his tidbit of gossip around Valley Center. Almost the first place he went was to the Bank of Valley Center. Henry Rookby, in charge during Babson's absence, received him.

"I see young Nate Tichenor's back in the country. An' Rance Kershaw's kicked the bucket. Died of heart disease right smack in front of the Bar H gate, an' Nate Tichenor an' Lorry Kershaw 've been in town together an' thicker'n thieves."

"When the cat's away the mice'll play, I suppose. Who told you all this?"

"Brainerd. Tichenor was in an' gave him the story."

"That Nate Tichenor's a bad lot," Mr. Rookby murmured darkly. "I never liked him. D'y'e mean to tell me he's around with Lorry Kershaw now, helping her out in her trouble?"

Mr. Rooney nodded.

"The hypocrite! He's back here to smash the Kershaw outfit. Not another reason in life, Bill. Rance Kershaw's estate must owe Tichenor more'n three hundred thousand dollars an' for the past three years old Rance has been using clam shells and woodpeckers' heads for money. Interesting situation. Very interesting."

When he turned to wait on a customer Mr. Rooney continued on to the Valley Center garage to discharge another load of his interesting information.

Arrived back at the Circle K headquarters with Lorry Kershaw, and Miss Lizzie Bachman, Nate Tichenor, after the fashion of a rural neighbor, did the chores. He realized that, with the men all away, Lorry would have had to do them.

He ate his dinner in silence, for both he and Lorry were acutely aware of the presence of Miss Bachman and distrusted her. After dinner he kindled a log fire in the living room fireplace. He was a straight, well-set-up young man, not overly thick but muscular; he had a little crescent out of his left ear and a faint white scar about three inches long ran across his left temple and disappeared into his hair. His teeth were strong, even, white and well cared for. His nose, thin and high and a fraction too long, tended to spoil what would otherwise have been a handsome face, but lent to him an air of distinction. It was the nose of a thoroughbred, a thinker. His eyebrows, heavy and almost black, were a bit overhanging, thus giving to his glance an expression of alertness and directness, particularly when he asked one a question.

Lorry had already observed that he moved with quick, precise motions, like one very sure of himself and in the pink of physical condition.

About eight-thirty the nurse retired; as her bedroom door closed behind her, Nate Tichenor arose, shoved an easy chair toward the fire and waved Lorry into it. He remained standing until she had seated herself.

"Too bad your father wasn't here when I called this morning. I might have preserved his life for many years," Tichenor snapped his fingers. "Kismet!" he murmured.

"We thought you were waiting until we got in so deep we couldn't swim out, then you could smash us more easily."

"Had I chosen to smash you a long time ago there was nothing to stop me. You were helpless."

"Then why didn't you?"

"I didn't need the money and I knew I could always protect myself. I could have gotten the ranch at 25 per cent of its value. As a matter of fact, I did plan to buy your mortgage. Sure, you do not think I am so careless as not to have kept a close watch on the Kershaws."

"Your people always wanted all of Eden Valley, of course. So you planned to buy the mortgage and foreclose."

"No, I planned to buy it and hold it, because only in that way could I be assured the Kershaws wouldn't be annoyed. I planned to give you time to work out of the jam you are in; then, if you couldn't make the grade, I planned to buy your outfit, lock, stock and barrel, at a fair price. Owen is dead, your father was a cripple and you couldn't operate the business."

"Of course I could operate it," she challenged. "And I shall. The cattle business is bound to recover. It's getting better every day. Within 70 years beef will be selling at ten cents on the ranch."

"I do not doubt that. Who is your father's foreman?"

"I am. Since graduating from the university in 1921 I have operated this business. I do a man's work. I know

"Had I Chosen to Smash You a Long Time Ago There Was Nothing to Stop Me."

cattle and I know my job. I can ride rope, and I know and I bust my own saddle stock. I hire and I fire. I had to do it."

"And you want to keep on doing it. The girl nodded.

"Well, carry on."

"I cannot unless you buy the ranch mortgage to protect me—and yourself otherwise it will be foreclosed."

"In a few days," he suggested, "go to see Babson and say that I am inclined to grant you additional time provided he will do the same."

"I can't understand why you are so kind."

"It's a fault I inherited from my father. A tiny smile flitted around his firm mouth. "Your grandfather tried hard to be neighborly to my grandfather but my grandfather was hard-boiled and mean and stupid and wouldn't play the game; as a result he spoiled all subsequent opportunities for his clan. It's my chance now and I have a curious yearning to make good, particularly since it will not cost me anything," he added bluntly, as if ashamed of his chivalry.

"I thank you more than I can say. We've been paying the bank in Valley Center 12 per cent on our unsecured loans."

"Well, 12 per cent is legal in this state, Miss Kershaw. However, strike Babson for a reduction to 7. Give him an argument. You may win. Bab-

Antelopes Are Among Most Deceitful of All Wild Animals; Despise People

Visitors to zoos have nothing but kind words and sympathy for one group of animals on exhibit—the antelopes. The graceful build, expressive eyes and the dainty manner in which they handle their food and step around their enclosures perhaps is accountable for this. Yet the truth is, says a writer in the Detroit News, that there is no single group of wild animals more feared by their keepers and of a more vicious and treacherous nature than these same creatures, be they gnus, hartebeests, waterbucks, Biesboks, reedbucks, impalas, oryxes, springbucks, kudus or any one of the dozen or more "gentle-eyed" gazelles.

There is hardly a zoo in existence that has not recorded either serious or fatal encounters with these animals. Antelopes are among the most deceitful of all wild animals. They may appear kind, gentle and lovable and stir a desire on the part of the spectator to pet them. Apparently they are the personification of contentment and trustfulness, but lurking under their hide is a lasting desire to kill, which is likely to assert itself at the most unexpected time. This is one lesson directors of all zoos try to drive home to their animal keepers. Never trust an antelope under any circumstances. A buck deer, during the rutting season, may be dangerous, but its son's probably as hard as a picnic egg, but he may have an unsuspected soft spot."

"I wish I could agree with you, but I find that impossible. Our ranch was mortgaged to a San Francisco bank, but recently Babson bought it from them."

"He has a hen on," said Nate Tichenor, "and I'll have to find out whether it's a Bantam or a Plymouth Rock. A coward and a potential crook. Money-mad. A schemer. Miss Lorry, he wants the Circle K ranch. When he ascertained from my attorney that the Bar H was not for sale, he decided to acquire the Circle K, so immediately he purchased your mortgage."

"But why has he developed this sudden interest in Eden Valley?"

"I do not know, but I intend to find out. However, he'll never own the Circle K. Whenever you find yourself unable to hang on to it, I'm the rightful heir to it. Understand?"

"Perfectly. You're sure you will not permit him to crowd me? Sure this isn't a generous impulse because you find me in such a sad case today? An impulse you may, with reason, regret next week."

He drew a checkbook from his inner breast pocket, went to her desk and signed a check in blank. "You fill that in for what your father's estate owes Babson and his bank," he ordered curtly, "and secure me with your promissory note."

She tossed the check in the fire. "What's your interest in me?" she demanded. "I can understand sympathy and gentlemanly kindness but not a blank check that could be filled in for nearly two hundred and ninety thousand dollars."

"I met your brother, Owen, in France. It was before Cantigny. I was the chief of No. 4 section of my battery, and my gun got bogged in a small shell-hole in the road. The teams were new, half-trained and unused to draft—and the drivers were worse, so I had a lot of plunging and tugging—no co-ordinated effort—and there we stuck. There was an infantry regiment resting by the side of the road, and pretty soon a private came up and told the green lead driver to dismount and let him try. I saw by the way this doughboy soothed the excited horses that he knew horses—so I took the place of the driver on the swing team. Fortunately, I had a good driver on the wheel team, so presently, with the cannoneers and spare drivers at the wheels and pushing behind, we gathered our teams and made one steady, concentrated pull—and the gun came out. And when the infantry man dismounted from the lead team, Owen Kershaw and I recognized each other. I said: 'Thanks, Kershaw. I'm obliged to you. Good luck to you.'"

"What did Owen say?" the girl asked softly.

"Nothing, Miss Lorry. His face sort of twisted. You see, we were all exhausted and hungry and thirsty and we'd been through a lot of mud and blood and I suppose we each had the same thought—that the Hensley-Kershaw feud was a pitiful thing. I know I had a vision of Eden Valley just then. Perhaps Owen did, too, because he commenced to cry silently; and then he came toward me and I commenced to cry, too. We didn't say anything, because there was nothing to say; just leaned against each other and thumped each other's backs and were quiet about it. Owen walked beside me up the road a little, his arm through mine; and finally he said: 'Nate, maybe my dog tag will beat me back to Eden Valley. But if you take care of yourself, you're liable to go back with both your dog tags; and when you do, call on the old man and Lorry and tell them it's an order from me that you're to stay for dinner.'"

"Did he say anything about the water?"

"Yes, he said we were to have it and that he'd write home about it as soon as he got the opportunity. So I told him you'd already promised to let my people have it and that pleased him. And I promised him I'd be a good neighbor and fight as hard for the Kershaws hereafter as our clan had ever fought against them. That affected him very deeply and he dragged me off the road and we swore blood brotherhood, each to the other—and then we embraced like two sentimental Frenchmen and were ashamed of it because we were both hillbillies—and I went on with my section and he went back and forped with his weary squad—and here I am, and I've been a long time getting here."

"Why did you delay, Nate?"

"I kept remembering him"—he pointed to the bedroom door—"and how he spoke to me that morning I came to ask for the water. I was afraid he'd never understand—so I thought I'd wait and not bother him and gradually inculcate in him the belief that I wasn't a bad sort of citizen. I see now that was poor strategy."

"Life," the girl said gleefully, "is a game that is played to be lost."

His hand strayed over and imprisoned hers. "Poor little sister!" he murmured. "So hopeless and bitter—and the sun just rising over Eden after a long eclipse. Life may be a game that is played to be lost, but we'll play it like sportsmen and go smiling to our defeat."

CHAPTER VI

Nate Tichenor slept at the Bar H that night, but returned to the Circle K early next morning, with two men he had picked up in Valley Center. He set them at once to the task of digging Rance Kershaw's grave in the family cemetery, Lorry Kershaw pointing out to them the desired spot. About noon the coffin arrived from Valley Center and he helped the man who delivered it place Kershaw in it. Then he lunched with Lorry and Miss Bachman. At one-thirty he and Lorry hitched a team to a wagon and he drove it around and tied the team in front of the house. At two o'clock the girl met his inquiring glance bravely and said:

"We might as well proceed, Nate. Nobody's coming to my father's funeral."

With the aid of two of the hired men he carried Rance Kershaw out to the wagon and, mounting the seat, drove his late enemy on the latter's last pilgrimage, while Lorry, Miss Bachman, and the two laborers followed in the Kershaw car. At the grave Tichenor read the funeral service, the men covered the grave, Tichenor gave them each a ten-dollar bill and with Lorry and Miss Bachman returned to the house.

He was rather proud of the manner in which Lorry had carried on, even though he had expected her to exhibit the traditional courage of her clan.

"That Affected Him Very Deeply and He Dragged Me Off the Road and We Swore Blood Brother-hood."

Throughout the remainder of the afternoon he sat with the two women in the ranch house veranda and was talkative to a degree only excusable in his own mind because he had the customary masculine belief that it was his duty to keep Lorry's mind off her troubles. Evidently Miss Lizzie Bachman was similarly inspired. He enjoyed (and was certain Lorry did also) the efforts of Miss Bachman to elicit from him information as to his comings and goings since he had left Eden Valley. For three hours he withstood her assaults; then, weary and discouraged, excused himself and motored back home to the comforting presence of his silent valet.

FABRIC STICKS TO METAL

A worker at a prominent institute has devised a method of combining metal with any sort of fibrous material by means of a metal adhesive consisting of certain low-melting alloys which will cling to both metal and fiber without affecting the properties of either. One of the first commercial results of the development is a form of corrugated roofing in which sheet metal is protected on either side by asbestos fiber firmly attached. Other materials such as wool, felt or paper, can be bonded equally well to it.

Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from unwise dosing with harsh cathartics may cause bowel strain, and even set up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be safely relieved in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you're suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until the bowels are moving regularly without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need.

Your druggist has Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

Doctors Give Creosote For Chest Colds

For many years, our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on.

Creosolium with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quick and effectively stops coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Creosolium is powerful in the treatment of colds and coughs, yet it is absolutely harmless and is pleasant and easy to take.

Your own druggist guarantees Creosolium by refunding your money if you are not relieved after taking Creosolium as directed. Beware the cough or cold that hangs on. Always keep Creosolium on hand for instant use. (adv.)

EARLY IDEA OF RECKONING TIME

Twelve-Hour Day Traced to Babylonians.

One of the oldest mysteries of scientific history seems at last to have been solved. This is the origin of the 12-hour day, apparently universal among civilized mankind since long before the Greeks and even before the first actual clocks invented by the Egyptians. The origin of the decimal system long has been traced, with great plausibility, if not certainly, to man's possession of ten fingers. The history of our so-called Arabic numerals is even better known. Most of the essentials of mathematical operations are traceable to more or less definite times and places in Greece, Egypt or Babylonia. Many scholars have suspected, also, that the beginning of the 12-hour day was in these same Babylonian lands and with some relation to the number counts by sixties which the earliest Babylonians used. But there was no certainty, nor was there even a plausible solution of the selection as the daily number of hours of 12 or 24 instead of the 6 or 36 or 60 which the Babylonian number system would seem to make more reasonable.

Now the mystery appears as related to that other puzzle, the origin of the dozen. This ancient method of counting eggs or other articles of trade seems not to be Babylonian but later. It has been conjectured that it was invented because 12 is so easily divisible into parts. Half a dozen, a quarter dozen, a third dozen, all are whole numbers. Undoubtedly this is why dozens and grosses still are used in many trades in spite of inroads by the decimal system in money and measures. A similar origin behind the 12-hour day was suggested by Prof. Stephen Langdon, expatriate American who now heads the Department of Assyriology at Oxford, in a recent address at that university.

Another Oxford enthusiast, Dr. J. K. Fotheringham, began as an astronomer but has turned historian and Assyriologist. For more than a decade he has been applying his astronomical knowledge to points of obscure interpretation in ancient Babylonian records. Recently he uncovered on an inscribed prism now in London the system of time reckoning which seems to have been in use among the mysterious Sumerians, first bringers of the germ of civilization to Babylonia and possibly that germ's inventors. This system was to divide both day and night into 12 parts each; these "hours" being, therefore, of different lengths in summer and winter. The hour had no definite length of its own but was merely a twelfth part of day or night. Other fractions of day or night probably were used quite as much as the twelfths, since no one had mechanical clocks or could do more than estimate roughly how much of the dark or light part of the daily cycle had elapsed. There was the same reason for having units easily related to halves, thirds or quarters as there is for this convenience in counting by dozens.—New York Tribune.

Plutarch Given Honor as First Biographer

The word biography (biography) is first found in the works of a Greek writer named Damascus, who lived 25 centuries ago, but the stories go back further even than he, for they occur in the myths of nations so old they are almost forgotten, stories of popular heroes such as Hercules, often exaggerated, yet in most cases with at least a grain of truth in them. Xenophon, the famous Greek general who marched for long months through hostile countries, with a little army of hard-bitten warriors, was one of the first to write a real life story. It was that of his master, the great philosopher, Socrates. The first real biographer was Plutarch, who lived in the first century of the Christian era and who wrote the lives of 46 Greek and Roman heroes. There is nothing dull about Plutarch's "Lives."

Monks and abbots of the early Middle Ages were the earliest British biographers. Their subjects were mostly saints. The first real English biography was the life story of Sir Thomas More by his son-in-law, William Roper. Every angler loves his Isaac Walton, but every angler does not know that old Isaac wrote a delightful series of lives of people of his time.

REASON FOR THE FEZ

The recent decree of President Mustapha Kemal, forbidding the citizens of Turkey to wear the time-honored fez, recalls the practical reasons underlying the origin of this ancient head-dress. Almost all Turks are devout followers of the Mohammedan religion, one of the requirements of which is that each believer must pray five times daily. And because a Mohammedan prayer is said in a kneeling position with the forehead touching the ground or floor, it early became apparent that a hat with a brim was unnecessary for a people whose prayers must be said with the head covered whether indoors or out.—Kansas City Star.

Auctioneer: Lute Bradford

March 15, 1934, at the age of 71 years and some months.

In early girlhood she united with the M. E. church at this place, to which she has been a loyal, devoted member throughout her life. She spent all her life in this community with the exception of about twelve years, which were passed in the home of her brother, Smith, in Lawrenceburg, Ind., after the death of her sister-in-law.

She leaves to mourn her departure, two sisters, Sallie and Lou Ella, one sister-in-law, Euna, two brothers Smith and Harry, four nephews, two nieces and twelve great nieces and nephews.

Sweet be her rest And gentle her sleeping; God's way is best, She is in His keeping.

Sleep on dear friend, such lives as thine

Have not been lived in vain; But hold an influence, rare, divine On lives that here remain.

America here they are!

To fill the record-breaking nationwide demand, Chevrolets are being produced at a record-breaking rate of 4000 units a day!

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

CHEVROLET factories are breaking records, trying to give America all the cars it wants. 4000 units a day are rolling off the assembly lines. In fact, more Chevrolets are now being produced than any other make of automobile in the world.

Nat rally, Chevrolet is proud of the record its factories have made this year. Especially so, in view of the fact that the 1934 Chevrolet is not merely last year's model improved, but a basically new automobile throughout. Producing so many of these cars so early in the season, and producing them all up to Chevrolet high standards of quality, is nothing short of a real accomplishment!

Chevrolet takes this opportunity to thank the American public for the wonderful way it has received the 1934 Chevrolet car. And Chevrolet is happy to report, that with over 4,000 cars a day being built, dealers everywhere will soon be in a position to make immediate deliveries.

INSURANCE

IMPORTANT FEATURE IN AAA CORN-HOG PROGRAM — 39 BOONE COUNTY FARMERS HAVE SIGNED—PROFITABLE PROPOSITION FOR FARMERS.

Insurance is one of the most important features of the AAA Corn-Hog program. The cooperator receives $5.00 per head on his allotment or put in other words $15.00 per head on the number he reduces plus 30 cents per bushel for corn on the rented acres. These payments are paid on past performance and are guaranteed whether cholera, drouth or depression affects the farm in 1934.

There is an old proverb, "A Bird in the hand is worth two in the nest." The payments in most cases will represent more clear profit to the producer than he has made during the past two years from his corn and hog production. Many farmers say they can not afford to reduce their corn acreage. It is questionable if any farmer has made 30 cents per bushel net profit from the corn they produced the past two years. It is certainly a better business proposition to take 30 cents per bushel or more profit by not raising the corn than one would receive by raising it. Again the hog reduction is in most cases going to reduce the number of bushels of corn required per farm. It must also be remembered that agriculture is still in a sick or bad economic position, will not likely be much better before two years. The corn-hog contract covers only this year and is over the first day of next December.

Thirty-nine Boone county farmers had signed AAA Corn-Hog contracts up until last Tuesday. They include the following listed by county districts according to the 1929 census:

District No. 1—J. H. Bartley, Ed Berkshire, George Gubser, H. M. Holladay, M. M. Lucas, J. W. Seebree, Holt White, B. C. Stephens, Wilford Rouse, Karl Rouse, R. B. Huey, V. W. Gaines.

District No. 2—Owen Allen, W. B. Arnold, W. B. Rogers, John W. Rogers, Edward Rogers, Orville Rice, Franklin Clore, J. F. Buffington.

District No. 3—D. E. Ogden, Wilbur O. Ryle, J. E. Hodges.

District No. 4—J. Lassing Huey, E. M. Willis.

District No. 5—Cecil Ashcraft, Pat Code, R. P. Hughes, C. W. Montgomery, G. H. Moore, C. W. Ransler.

District No. 6—L. C. Acra, Otis F. Biddle, G. D. Hoffman, W. R. Morris, S. J. Zapp, A. J. Scott.

Those expecting to sign AAA contracts will greatly assist the campaign committee if they will fill out the preliminary work sheets before coming to the community sign-up days or to the County Agent's office for the signing of contracts. Community sign-up days will be held as follows:

Hebron, March 28th, E. J. Aylor in charge.

Verona, March 30th, Bank, J. A. Harris in charge.

Petersburg, April 5th, Union Bank, L. L. Weaver in charge.

The community sign-up days are held for the convenience of those who wish to sign-up. All sign-up days begin at 9:00 a. m. and close around 4:00 p. m.

CHILDREN MEET

It was a happy occasion for the children of Florence Methodist church when they met Saturday afternoon.

After the usual business meeting, presided over by the president, plans were made for two busy days in April.

On April 21st Rev. Floyd Rose will be with the children. Rev. Rose is not only the Presiding Elder of the Covington District, but comes to us as a special boy and girls worker. All parents, boys and girls are urged to be present on April 21st. Parents and children of other churches are given a special invitation to hear Rev. Rose on this occasion.

On Saturday morning, April 28th, the boys of the club will call at the Florence homes for discarded papers, magazines and cartons. Will anyone who has such a contribution have them ready for that Saturday morning call?

Refreshments were served at this meeting by Catherine and Billie Wood and Francis Layle.

DECLAMATION CONTEST TO BE HELD AT FLORENCE

The Florence annual grade and high school declamation contest will be held in the Florence school auditorium Friday night March 30. The winner of this contest will represent the Florence school in the Boone County Tournament, which is to be held in the near future. A gold medal will be awarded the winner in each division.

This should be one of the most interesting contests that we have ever sponsored. All of the boys and girls have had some training along this particular line.

The Florence school orchestra will furnish the music for the occasion. Be on time and get a good comfortable seat. We are expecting a large crowd, due to the interest that is being manifested on the part of both pupils and parents. The date for the annual grade entertainment has been postponed due to illness.

SPECIAL PROGRAM TO BE GIVEN BY THE CINCINNATI SEMINARY

The Taylorsport Church of Christ invites all to a special program to be given April 12th by students of the Cincinnati Bible Seminary.

Both instrumental and vocal musical numbers will be given. The address of the evening will be delivered by Charles Carter minister of the Columbia Ave. Church of Christ, Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Carter will be remembered by many in the county as he was a former pastor of Constance and Petersburg churches.

This program is to be given in the interest of the seminary. Services will start promptly at 7:30. Everybody welcome.

PRACTICE SESSION

The first practice session and meeting of the Florence Lucky Pals will be held on April 10th at the girl's ball field at 6:30 p. m. Any new players wishing to try out for the team will please report to Larry Kenner, manager on ball field. This includes all old players to be present.

There will be a girls' soft ball league for the coming season in Boone county, and all teams are eligible to enter, and may receive full information by calling on Robert Rouse, Jr., Florence, any evening after 7 p. m.

LUTHERAN A-CAPELLA CHOIR GIVES EASTER CANTATA

The Lutheran a-capella choir of thirty voices, composed of the young people of the Hebron and Hopeful Lutheran churches, and under the direction of Rev. H. C. Huter, will present the Easter Cantata, from Cross to Crown, by Judson, at the Hopeful Lutheran church Sunday evening, April 8, at 7:30 E. S. T.

The choir sang this beautiful cantata at the Hebron Lutheran church Palm Sunday evening, and it was greatly appreciated by those present.

The choir will also sing the cantata at the First Lutheran church in Covington, Easter Sunday evening.

HEBRON LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Huter, Pastor
Easter Sunday, April 1, Bible School at 10:00 o'clock. Mr. Edwin Walton, Supt.

Morning Worship 11:00 o'clock. Subject of the sermon, "He Is Risen." Holy Communion will be celebrated at this service.

Our Lutheran a-Capella Choir will present its Easter Cantata at First Lutheran church in Covington, Sunday evening at 8:00 o'clock. Any friends of our young people who care to attend this service in Covington are cordially invited to do so.

TIME CHANGED

In a recent issue of the Recorder it was stated the consolation night in the fiddling band contest at the Liberty Theater would be held April 7th but the time has been changed to March 31, when the final play of the three winning bands will be held.

The three bands competing are The Kentucky Pioneers, Buddy and George and The Dandyville Hotshots.

A. W. Bingham has moved to the Northcutt farm on Middle Creek. Mr. Bingham moved here two years ago from Grant county and has made good. He has had a wide experience along agricultural lines and is classed as one of Boone's best citizens.

HARD JOB

COMPLETED BY COMMITTEEMEN IN PAST WEEK ON AAA TOBACCO CONTRACTS—WILL PAY FARMERS BETWEEN $60,000 AND $100,000 IN BOONE.

Boone county AAA Tobacco committeemen the past week just completed checking the individual contracts of six hundred and eighty-five growers. The committeemen all report they had one of the hardest jobs they have encountered recently and much harder than they had expected. The committeemen at the same time are to be congratulated for the careful and sincere consideration given each applicant.

The chief difficulty in checking the contracts was the failure of the growers to file sufficient warehouse receipts for the claims to be listed as with supporting evidence. Most growers when this point was called to their attention gave immediate consideration. The fact that a grower did not file his warehouse receipts does not mean that his acres or pounds will not be accepted on their face value if they receive the recommendation of the County Control Board. It simply means that if Washington finds the county has gone over its allotment the only blanket reductions to bring the county down to its allotment will be made from the growers who are not listed as with evidence.

The AAA Tobacco contracts this year are expected to pay Boone county farmers from $60,000 to $100,000 in party payments. Boone county growers have shown a splendid spirit of cooperation thruout the program and are one of the leading counties in the state in the sign-up program.

AGED CITIZEN

DIES AT HIS HOME THURSDAY, MARCH 22, AFTER SEVERAL MONTHS' ILLNESS—WAS ACTIVE IN CIVIC AND CHURCH WORK MANY YEARS.

J. J. Tanner, aged 78 years, passed away at his home two miles east of Burlington, Thursday, after several months' illness. His death was attributed to infirmities of old age.

Mr. Tanner was one of Boone county's most prominent farmers. He had been active in both civic and church work for many years, having been a member of Hopeful Lutheran church for the past forty years. He was secretary of the Boone County Harvest Home Association for twenty years, and performed his duties very efficiently.

The county as well as the community in which he lived will feel the loss of this fine man. He was highly respected by both young and old and will be missed by all who knew him.

He was married to Emma D. Aylor in 1880. To this union two daughters were born, Mrs. Chester Aylor and Miss Ebra Tanner, of whom survive. He also leaves one grandson, Elmo Aylor.

Impressive funeral services were conducted at the Hopeful Lutheran church Saturday, March 24, with Revs. Huter and Harold Beemon officiating, interment in Hopeful cemetery. The large crowd attending the funeral services show the high esteem in which this good man was held.

Chambers and Grubbs had charge of funeral arrangements.

RECITAL TO BE GIVEN

A recital will be given at Hebron school next Monday afternoon at which Vera Goodridge will sing her contest number to be entered at Lexington in the State contest April 6th.

The pupils of Lillian Gould Faber taking part are: Helen Wahl, Mary C. Stephens, William Kraves, Vera Goodridge and the Hebron school orchestra.

HOPEFUL LUTHERAN CHURCH

Easter Sunday, April 1, Bible School at 10:00 o'clock. Mr. John Surface, Supt.

Vesper Service at 4:00 p. m. Subject of the sermon, "Seek Ye Jesus of Nazareth." May we have a good attendance at this special Easter service.

Our Lutheran a-Capella choir will present its Easter Cantata at First Lutheran church in Covington at 8:00 p. m. Any friends of our young people who care to attend this service in Covington are cordially invited to do so. This Cantata will be given at Hopeful church Sunday evening, April 8.

Luther League business and social meeting on Tuesday evening, April 3, at the church.

FORMER CITIZEN FATALLY INJURED

Mrs. W. M. Ramey, of Louisville was fatally injured March 14th, when she was struck by an automobile. It was a great shock and grief to all who know her.

She was the daughter of the late Clinton and Carrie Kirtley Gaines of this county.

She was cut down in the height of her usefulness. She was active in all church duties, and her business ability was recognized in all her undertakings. She enjoyed family and friends to whom her going was a calamity.

She is greatly missed in every circle in which she moved.

She was laid to rest in the Bullittsville cemetery beside her father, mother and other relatives.

MARY UNDERHILL

Aunt Mary Underhill, aged 79 years passed away Saturday evening at 9 p. m., at her home near Beaver, after being confined to her bed for several days.

Mrs. Underhill leaves several nieces and nephews and a host of friends to mourn her death.

Funeral services were conducted at Beaver Baptist church Monday at 2 p. m., conducted by Rev. Roy Johnson, burial in Beaver cemetery.

The pall-bearers were Wayne Brown, Russell Brown, Marvin Brown, Ossman Jack and Harry Moore. Undertakers Chambers & Grubbs, of Walton, had charge of funeral arrangements.

MOCK TRIAL HUGE SUCCESS

The Mock Trial held at the court house Friday night, by Judge Goodenough, Covington, was a huge success. One of the largest crowds seen in the court house in many years gathered to witness this entertainment.

Benefits derived from this entertainment was donated to the Crippled Children fund.

FERRY MAN RESIGNS

Frank Cunningham, who for years operated the Whitlock ferry between Rabbit Hash and Rising Sun, Ind., has resigned his position as operator of the boats. His place will be filled by Stewart Whitlock. Mr. Cunningham whose accommodation and good service have made him popular here will move to Kentucky to live in the near future.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

A surprise birthday dinner was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Kline, Glenwood farm, Mt. Zion, in honor of his mother, Mrs. Lou Northcutt who has reached her 82nd milestone. A bountiful dinner was served and everyone voted a good time.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Baucum and daughter, Athalee, Mr. Bud Lang of Covington, Freddy Struve, Mrs. Leona Newman, Mr. and Mrs. John Davis, Mrs. Harriet Davis, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Tillett and son Preston, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Gier, and Miss Esther Bailey.

On account of illness, Rev. Bradley and wife were unable to attend, and their absence was noted very much.

TO ALL PERSONS ON

RELIEF IN BOONE COUNTY

When Forms C. D. 1 are issued to you covering surplus commodities in your grocery store, will you please sign these when slips and take them immediately to the groceryman and receive your commodities. The Federal Government will not permit these commodities to stay in the stores very long. If these commodities are not picked up within two days after you receive Form C. D. 1 there will be another Form filled out in favor of some other client who will receive commodities issued to you. Please be governed accordingly.

C. A. Youell, Disbursing Officer, Federal Emergency Relief, Boone Co., Burlington, Ky.

Earl Cropper left Tuesday for Dillsboro, Ind., where he will spend several days. Mr. Cropper has been in failing health for several months, and it is hoped by his many friends that he will derive much benefit from his stay at this noted health resort.

Atty D. E. Castman, of Erlanger, was a business visitor in Burlington Tuesday.

Mrs. J. G. Smith, of Latonia has a position at the local postoffice. The many friends of Mrs. Smith are glad to see her located in Burlington again.

LEGISLATIVE

NEWS FROM THE REGULAR SESSION OF 1934—MEMBERS PLEDGE THEMSELVES TO BALANCE BUDGET DURING EXTRA SESSION.

The following paragraphs explain just what the 1934 House of Representatives has been doing during their session:

Concur in Resolution

Whereas, the 1934 session of the General Assembly in many years, proven to be by far the most progressive in all the recent history of the State, having enacted more helpful legislation for the benefit of the whole people than any General Assembly in many years, outstanding among the many important laws passed being the following:

The Administrative Reorganization Act—For thirty years the citizens of Kentucky have been demanding a thorough reorganization of the State Government which would recognize the executive responsibility of the Governor and make it possible for him to be Governor in act instead of in name only, by enabling him to really govern and to demand and obtain real efficiency and economy in the Government. Such a law has been passed. It reduces administrative departments and agencies of the State Government from seventy-nine to twenty-four; it abolishes many useless offices; it simplifies the Executive Department; it creates an Executive Cabinet composed of certain departmental heads. This law will save large sums of money by reason of economies which can be enforced by virtue thereof.

The Budget and Financial Administration Act—The people long have sought the enactment of a real budgetary control law and a comprehensive and workable financial code. Such a law has been enacted. It provides for an adequate, unified and integrated system of financial and business administration of the State Government embracing budgeting, accounting, pre-auditing, treasury administration, post-auditing and fiscal reporting. The code provides control of income and expenditures, insures against future treasury deficits, requires all expenditures to be within the income of the State and prevents any unit of the Government from spending one dollar more than its appropriation.

Educational Code—It required courage and vision for this Legislature to over-ride certain prejudices in order to enact the Educational Code designed to simplify and regulate the school system of Kentucky, to the end that equal educational opportunities may be given all of the children of the State; a law which will be beneficial to the children of the present and future generations. The new School Code may be justly called "A Chapter of Freedom from Ignorance for the Childhood of Kentucky," recognizing and providing, as it does, for the best modern methods in education and giving the children the State qualified teachers.

Three Million Dollar Farm Land and Real Estate Reduction—This General Assembly has done a thing which for years representatives, loyal to the best interests of the people, have sought in vain to accomplish. It has taken a large part of the burden of taxation from off the shoulders of farmers and other real estate from thirty cents to five cents on the hundred dollars, thereby saving in excess of three million dollars annually to this class of citizens who through all the history of Kentucky have been forced to bear an outrageously unjust proportion of the burden of taxation.

One Million Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollar Auto License Reduction—A law has been enacted reducing the cost of automobile licenses more than one-third, thereby saving the automobile owners One Million Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars annually.

Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollar Truck License Reduction—Alaw reducing truck licenses has been passed thereby saving truck owners more than Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars.

Reorganization of County Government—Several laws have been enacted dealing with the reorganization.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

FARM LOAN OFFICE SET UP

The Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation and the Federal Seed Loan have temporarily made plans for the receiving of applications at the County Agent's office in Burlington.

The Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation has received fifteen applications for loans from Boone county farmers. Eight Federal Seed Loans were received up until Tuesday of this week.

Applications for both loans will be received on Wednesdays and Saturdays of each week. Applicants are urged to apply only on these days. Mr. William Walton has been appointed secretary to assist applicants in filling out applications.

SEWING LEADERS CONFERENCE

A good 4-H Home Economics leaders' conference was held at Florence on last Wednesday. Miss Edith Lacy from the College of Agriculture discussed plans and styles for the 4-H sewing club in 1934.

Gain in Industrial Employment Reported—Steel Industry Accused of Price Boosting and Fixing—Japan and U. S. Exchange Good Will Notes—Navy Bill Passes.

SECRETARY OF LABOR FRANCES PERKINS announces a jump of $45,000 in industrial employment and a gain of $12,000,000 in weekly pay rolls between January 15 and February 15.

Secretary Perkins

Secretary Perkins pointed out that her survey of industrial employment covers only a small part of the total business field.

"The manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries covered," she explained, "normally employ only 20,000,000 of the 49,000,000 gainful workers of the country and therefore these totals do not indicate all changes in employment. To them should be added 10,000 workers reported by the interstate commerce commission to have been taken on during the last month by Class 1 steam railroads, and gains in agricultural employment which normally take place at this time with the beginning of farming activities in the Southern states."

"The increases in employment and pay roll in the automobile industry were the outstanding gains of the month. The agricultural implement industry reported employment gains of 14.9 per cent and machine tools a rise of 15 per cent, continuing the gains which have marked every month since last May and June."

"Industries allied with building construction also showed increased operations."

PRICE fixing and price boosting, tending to discriminate against small enterprises, are current practices in the steel industry under its NRA code, the federal trade commission declares in a report to the senate. That there has been price fixing as well as increases in prices of steel products during the period covered by the inquiry, the commission declares, are conclusions warranted by ample facts. Under the provisions of the code and the methods of its application prices for any given product at any point of delivery are uniform. This is a direct violation of the order to desist from the Pittsburgh plus practice.

The steel code, according to the trade commission, is devised to lodge control of the industry with the United States Steel corporation and other large producers, to take business away from little manufacturers, to discriminate against certain fabricators and producing centers and to discriminate in favor of powerful customers like the automobile industry.

At a press conference at the White House the President indicated that he was not satisfied with the way the steel code is operating. There were signs the Executive might reopen the code and call for drastic revisions to protect consumers and independent manufacturers from price fixing and increased costs.

ASSURANCES of cordial regard and pledges of a desire for the settlement of any differences by amicable means were expressed in an exchange of notes between Secretary of State Hull and Koki Hirota, Japanese foreign minister. The exchange of notes was the outcome of interchanges initiated by Japan in furtherance of a foreign policy the general purpose of which is to conciliate the United States. Japan is intent upon persuading the United States to abandon the policy of obstruction of Japanese occupation of Manchuria and to recognize the Japanese dominated state of Manchukuo.

Hirota expressed the firm belief that "no question exists between our two countries that is fundamentally incapable of amicable solution."

Hull, in concurring with that statement, said he would be glad to receive "any suggestion calculated to maintain and to increase that friendship and cordiality which have constantly marked, since the conclusion of our first treaty, the relations between our two countries."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a letter to the senate and house banking committees, asked congress to set up twelve industrial credit banks which he had been told would safeguard the jobs of 346,000 persons and create work for 378,000 more. Immediately after the President's wis-were known legislation was introduced in both houses giving the federal reserve system authority to create the banks, financing them by selling $140,000,000 of stock to the treasury.

The plight of the "small or medium size" industrialist was stressed by the President, and he cited results of a survey indicating that such industry was badly in need of $700,000,000 working capital.

A RAY of hope for unpaid school teachers appeared when a house subcommittee was ordered to draft legislation authorizing direct federal grants to needy school systems throughout the country. The primary purpose of the proposed grants would be to insure the operation of schools for a minimum term each year.

A serious curtailment of educational facilities in many sections of the country has been forced by lack of funds, according to the committee, with consequent result that thousands of children are not receiving the proper amount of instruction. An inability to pay teachers is the most pressing problem.

A large part of the proposed federal grants will be available for the payment of salaries to unpaid teachers.

Under the direct grant measure proposed by the education committee it was understood, the necessary funds would be supplied either by the federal Emergency Relief administration or the Public Works administration.

SPEAKING before an assembly of 5,000 cheering chief fascists Premier Mussolini outlined a 60-year program of internal and external expansion which, he predicted, would in the Twenty-first century give Italy the "primacy of the world."

That century, he said, will be a "black shirt era."

"In this age of plans," Il Duce declared, "I want to lay before you a plan not for five years or ten years but for 60 years carrying on to the Twenty-first century, at which time Italy will have the primacy of the world."

"Italy has no future in the West and North. Her future lies to the East and South in Asia and Africa. The vast resources of Africa must be valorized and Africa brought within the civilized circle."

"I do not refer to conquest of territory but to natural expansion. We demand that nations which have already arrived in Africa do not block at every step Italian expansion."

Here, it was said, he was referring particularly to France.

Internally, Mussolini said, immediate objectives are completion of swamp reclamation by 1940, new aqueducts and highways, plans to recreate Italian municipalities, complete rebuilding of 500,000 rural houses and repairs to 980,000 rural houses, a work of 30 years.

"Every rural person will have a clean and healthy house," he asserted. "Only in this way can the rush to the city be combated."

In the midst of a pandemonium of applause Mussolini said Fascism "became universal in 1929."

"But in this phenomenon," he continued, "it is necessary to distinguish positive from negative Fascism. Positive Fascism knows how to destroy the old and rebuild the new, whereas negative Fascism knows only how to destroy."

EXPANSION of the navy to treaty limitations is now assured with the passage by congress of the Vinson-Trammell bill. The bill calls for the construction of 102 warships and an increase of 1,184 in the naval airplane strength at a cost estimated at between $570,000,000 and $700,000,000 spread over five years.

The bill merely "authorizes" a treaty navy. Appropriations must follow in order to translate the action into ships and planes.

Private builders of ships and planes for the navy are limited in the bill to a 10 per cent profit on the "contract price" excepting on contracts involving $10,000 or less.

Alternate warships must be built in government navy yards, unless the President determines that emergency conditions require change of that schedule.

A BROAD national program for reducing the nation's supply of milk from 10 to 20 per cent in return for federal cash payments to the individual milk producer was proposed to the dairy industry of the country by the Agricultural Adjustment administration. The program was evolved after months of effort by AAA experts.

The plan suggested by the administration would involve some $165,000,000 at the outset, it was said, with prospects that the cost might rise as high as $300,000,000. It would be financed by a processing fat of a cent per pound on butter fat, gradually increasing as the program advanced, to a peak of 5 cents per pound.

THE man who works for a living will get a break if amendments to the income tax law proposed by the senate finance committee are finally adopted. These amendments would take more taxes from big estates and reduce the tax on smaller incomes.

Chairman Harrison estimated that the net result of the changes proposed would add $50,000,000 to annual revenue to the bill.

The committee voted unanimously for a proposal to continue the one-tenth of 1 per cent corporation capital stock and 5 per cent excess profits tax levy, which were repealed when repeal put liquor taxes into effect.

These taxes would have expired July 1. Under the new proposal they would become effective again July 1, 1935. Experts estimated the revenue from these taxes at $95,000,000.

The reduction in income taxes would come in the form of a 10 per cent credit to be allowed on earned income up to $20,000.

The estate amendment would increase taxes on such property to a maximum of 50 per cent as against the present 45 per cent, the raises ranging from 1 per cent on estates valued between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 to 5 per cent on those over $10,000,000.

TRACKS urging the public to donate cash to promote the sport of flying in Germany were circulated in Berlin Sunday. Under the Versailles treaty public funds are not permitted to be used to stimulate aviation, but the leaflet points out that the treaty does not refer to private initiative and adds:

"We are unable to construct military planes, but the development of the sport of flying and training German people as flyers are entirely of our own accord and our responsibility to make ourselves."

The demand for a German air force was also emphasized by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia and reichsminister of aviation, in speaking at a flying exhibition at the Essen airport. Goering declared that Germany can enjoy no such thing as peace, no equality until she is granted the right to defend herself in the air. This demand cannot be altered, the air minister proclaimed.

"If other countries are permitted the heaviest weapons of attack in the air, Germany at least must be given the right of defense," he said.

A NOTHER step forward in developing trade between the United States and Austria was taken with the recent decision of the Austro-American commercial interests in Vienna to found an American Chamber of Commerce in Vienna. Later a cognate institution is also to be established in Washington.

The decision to open up a chamber of commerce here is the result of lengthy study by a committee appointed some time ago "for founding a special organization to develop trade and tourist traffic between Austria and America."

The organization of the American Chamber of Commerce has the backing of President Ernst Streeruwitz of the Vienna Chamber of Commerce, American Consul General E. L. Harris, and Commercial Attache J. H. Hughes.

General inquiry has indicated that the United States can get a bigger share of the Austrian market through this way of making an intensive study of detailed openings for exports than through any new general trade agreements.

THE city of Hakodate, most important port in northern Japan, was reduced to a smoldering shambles as the result of a devastating fire. One thousand persons are dead and three thousand are injured. The fire followed in the wake of a driving equinoctial windstorm which tore through northern and western Japan. A total of 150,000 of the city's 240,000 inhabitants are homeless. Thirty-seven thousand of the 48,000 houses were burned to the ground.

SECRETARY MORGENTHAU reported to President Roosevelt that income tax receipts for the first quarter of the year were well above estimates and far more than a year ago.

Payments to the close of business March 15, the day when all returns were due, were $147,794,000. In announcing this figure on the basis of telegraphic reports from collectors, the treasury said corresponding collections last year were $99,847,000.

In 1933, however, the date for filing returns was extended from March 15 to March 31, after the bank holiday.

Treasury estimates of income tax payments for March are $250,000,000 as compared with $174,000,000 last March.

A NEW and serious controversy has arisen in the railroad industry. Unexpectedly, representatives of the railroad brotherhoods flatly rejected a compromise wage settlement suggested by President Roosevelt, calling for a continuation of their 10 per cent pay reduction until April 30, 1935, and demanded an immediate restoration of predepression wages for all railroad workers.

The action, taken by the Railway Labor Executives' association, threw negotiations looking to an amicable settlement of the rail wage situation into a virtual uproar and precipitated what the spokesmen of the railway management called a "serious situation."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—It begins to appear that the principles of NRA, upon which President Roosevelt has staked so much, are approaching a test.

NRA Near Test
Roosevelt's assertion that NRA is here to stay, it seems that there are quite a few who are not satisfied with them. They have revolted, at last. The challenge appears to have been given, and it is up to the administration to fight it out now. It is not too much to say that if the administration is victorious, NRA principles in the nation's economic structure are here to stay. If it fails, the story will be different and no one can say what the course then will be.

Counter Irritant
Disquieting conditions resulting from labor provisions of the codes, particularly the automobile industry code, the threats, the rumbles, the dissension among political leaders, all constitute a circumstance that must be examined together in order to recognize the serious nature of the test that confronts NRA. And when I refer to dissension among politicians, I include not only the differences of opinion on NRA; the disagreement runs much farther and embraces many points of party policy. Indeed, on the basis of the unrecurrent talk in congress, Mr. Roosevelt has suddenly found himself faced by a breach with the legislative body that is not going to be healed easily.

The circumstances seen by observers here in their efforts to piece the picture together demonstrate also the thing so many people long have believed, namely, that theorists cannot get along together indefinitely. Mr. Roosevelt's brain trust, as it is popularly called, has dissension in its ranks. No two of the professors appear to be holding to the same theories now, although agreeing thus far as to the objective sought. They are jealous of each other and some of them actually have become backyard gossip about others. Which, to use an old expression, is a fine kettle of fish.

To advert again to the test of NRA principles, the situation as we see it in Washington is simply this: a vast segment of industry has had a craving full of professional theories. It has found that codes cost industry money, reduce chances of profit and destroy age-old trade practices. It is fighting back, and it is not important to this phase of the discussion that industry has seized on the company union as distinguished from recognized American Federation of Labor chapters as the issue in the opening battle.

The administration has started to fend off industry's challenge by resorting to a counter attack in the form of a demand that hours of labor be shortened. It has accepted the challenge of industry to the extent that it has called upon industry to use its much bruted "organized individualism" to manage its own affairs. And it is not amiss to point out just here that the success industry has with its first venture on this line will be measured by the amount of slack in unemployment which it can take up.

Problem of Relief
It is well to remember, in this connection, that Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers have the problem of relief on their hands. As I reported some weeks ago, the CWA form of taking care of a part of the unemployed is to be discarded because, frankly, it has been a flop. That leaves only the principles of NRA by which jobs can be supplied if they are to be provided. Of course, the administration has the responsibility of supplying work now.

It started out with many high-sounding phrases about social justice, and the unemployed are now chanting to know when social justice is going to be worth something in the form of beans for the belly.

Thus, it becomes plain how bitter this struggle is to be. The administration's political life appears to be on the spot. It cannot, dare not, admit defeat. It probably will not be defeated in its encounter with industry, but one should not make the mistake of believing that victory will come easily. The conclusions I hear most frequently expressed indicate to me that the administration and its NRA ideals will win eventually because there are so many more employees than employers. Mr. Roosevelt can count upon a majority of the people to be behind him, therefore, because the big majority are folks who work for their bread and butter. Self-preservation continues to be the first law of nature, despite theory.

In the present situation, the issue has been joined chiefly on the company union question. It is an outgrowth of the overreaching which I believe was done by supporters of the American Federation of Labor in their demands when the national recovery act was written. I do not blame the federation leaders. They, like every one else, are out to get for their adherents as much as they can. But their insistence for labor protection through the legislation and the influence which they wielded on General Johnson apparently, as viewed from this point, were a little bit too strong. In other words, they went so strong in their demands that they caused the employers to fight back.

The NRA provisions on labor call for unionizing all employees. The American Federation of Labor says that means affiliation with their institution and it has fought bitterly for that result. Industry and employers generally disagree with that idea. General Johnson has sided with labor. He has Donald Richberg, a long-time attorney for labor unions, as his right hand man in NRA, and Mr. Richberg surely has backed up the general's plans, if, indeed, he did not formulate them.

As a counter irritant in the situation, some of the employers have contended that if employees in their respective plants or organized themselves into a union of their own, there was compliance with the law. They have insisted on this to the extent of refusing to deal on wage questions with any delegates excepting those from their own plants. A negotiator affiliated with the American Federation of Labor was welcomed in those plants just as warmly as most of us welcome a rattlesnake.

As a further bit of history, it should be recalled that Mr. Roosevelt early smelled the trouble that could come under the labor provisions, so he set up the national labor board, of which Senator Robert Wagner, of New York, is the chairman. It was to be something of an appeals board, a body for review of complaints. But somehow, that body also construed the law as against company unions and the employers were balked again.

So now there is a definite and concerted effort to break down the program that an organization of employees must be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor before it is acceptable to the powers that be in Washington. It is a row that is going to continue for some weeks. There will be strikes of greater or less consequence; there may be some riots and some bloodshed, and surely there will be much orator, very little of which will be from people who are conversant with all phases of the problem.

As a part and parcel of the Roosevelt attack, or counter movement, against opponents of the NRA, it is generally believed in Washington that the President used his powers to prevent any government purchases from manufacturers other than those complying with NRA provisions. It was a week or more ago that he issued the executive order that precludes the award of government contracts to any bidder not a member of NRA. Some observers here are saying that this order is going to cost the government a considerable sum of money. It has the effect of limiting the number of bidders. Although one may say that nearly every firm of consequence is flying the Blue Eagle, there are very few that have not in some way or other violated its provisions. I do not charge that they have done so intentionally; the facts indicate the contrary, but there have been thousands of violations wholly because it seems impossible to meet every requirement all of the time.

The air mail controversy continues to rise up to plague the Roosevelt administration. I judge, from the current conversation in Washington, that sundry administration officials would willingly miss a couple of good meals if they could retract and cause people to forget the jibe made at Col. Charles A. Lindbergh because his aviation company released his protest about cancellation of the air mail contracts before it was delivered to the President. That White House statement saying that the transatlantic flyer was discourteous to Mr. Roosevelt flits around like a fly in the room when you want to sleep late.

The White House and the War department insist that their attempt to get Colonel Lindbergh on the army aviation investigating committee was made because of the colonel's superior knowledge of aviation. Yet, all denials to the contrary and all insistence of sincerity have not downed a widespread belief that appointment of the colonel was hoped to serve as an antidote, a sleeping potion, to offset his criticism of the contract cancellation.

Political observers here are pointing out that administration made an ill-advised move in seeking to appoint Lindbergh without first having gone through a quiet move to find out his reaction in an informal way. That usually is done with appointments. The failure to have enquiries go around and ask the colonel whether he would serve on the investigating committee left him in a position to do some more talking. If I accepted, of course, he would not do any more talking about the cancellation of contracts. It would have been improper for him, as something of a leader, to convict before he heard the evidence. Those who know the colonel intimately say he would have observed the rules. But, Colonel Lindbergh did not accept, and when he refused to be maneuvered into a position of silence, it was a maneuver, he could protest, gain with assurance that it would get country-wide publicity. It did just that.

THIS BIRD HAS SPEED
At widely separated points on the prairies, says Nature Magazine, you find outcrops of sandstone, forming cliffs or buttes, and here you are sure to find in the perches or on ledges the brick-red eggs of that most splendid of all our birds of prey—the prairie falcon. A bird of marvelous speed and indomitable courage, this little falcon typifies the wild freedom of the Great Plains. Less frequently you come upon the eyries of the majestic golden eagle. The nests, which are often used for generations, are added to, year after year, until the material composing them would fill the body of a wagon.

GOOD ADVICE AS TO IMPROVEMENT OF ROADSIDES

Local materials for roadside improvement can be utilized at a comparatively low cost, says Wilbur H. Simonson, landscape architect of the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture. Such materials include boulders or native stone for guard rails, suitable plant material salvaged in the path of construction operations, trees and undergrowth carefully trimmed in contrast with haphazard cutting, and other such objects naturally adapted to the landscape.

The use of approved landscape and horticultural specifications for trees and plants for roadside improvements is the best safeguard in the planning and execution of roadside improvements, says Mr. Simonson. Co-operation between all parties engaged in planning the work is necessary to insure final harmony and attractive results.

For the price of a single mile of high-grade road surface 30 miles of roadside can be improved. This estimate by Mr. Simonson is based on plant materials obtained through fair competitive bids, unified control of highway building so that construction scars are avoided, side slopes graded during construction operations to fit landscape requirements, and the salvaging of valuable tree growth.

Mr. Simonson calls attention to the importance of parking places, spring outlets, railings, and other such features that the motorist sees and enjoys which are not necessarily more expensive when attractively developed.

Whose Fault?

The Boy or Girl Who Refuses to Eat

"What have I ever done to deserve a child who refuses to eat, and is just skin and bones?" The mother who asks that question might be surprised to learn that she alone is to blame. She knows a lack of appetite is the sign of a clogged system, but does the wrong thing to remedy the condition. A violent cathartic that upsets the stomach pulls down a child like a spell of sickness. It often forms the laxative habit. A more sensible way of regulating children is explained in the column to the right:

It's a lucky girl whose mother knows how to regulate her children's bowels without some strong, evil-tasting cathartic that upsets the system and ruins their appetite! Whenever sluggishness coats the little tongue, makes the whites of the eyes a bilious yellow, or a child is headachy and fretful, just try pure California Syrup of Figs. ## LUCIEN B. DICKERSON

(An Appreciation)

"With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation."

When a man has lived such a long and upright life as Mr. Dickerson lived, it seems fitting that those who knew and loved him well should express appreciation of his character, and pay tribute to his many fine qualities.

Born in 1844, the son of Volney and Sarah Jane Dickerson, he lived ninety years in the neighborhood of Union, Boone county. During these years his integrity of character, his courageous and uncompromising attitude toward life, and his cheerful, happy disposition, commanded the respect and admiration of all who knew him.

He was a member of the Baptist church at Union and was a faithful attendant at church and Sunday school until impaired hearing prevented his enjoyment of the services. He was active and energetic until the week preceding his death—busy with the affairs of his household, interested in the activities of the community and of the nation. Love of kindred, of home, and of his children was his strong passion.

Seven children are left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving father and to honor and revere his memory.

The strife is o'er the battle done; The victory of life is won; The song of triumph has begun.

TOOLS FOR BUTTERMAKING

The farm butter maker should have a good dairy thermometer, several straight ash paddles, a buttermilk strainer and an accurate scale to weigh the salt and butter, says J. O. Barkman of the Kentucky Experiment Station. Milk pails should be of the sanitary covered-top pattern, and a rectangular butter printer is desirable. The churn may be the barrel, swing or box churn, as they are free from wheels, paddles and dashers which make churning difficult.

Unless a large acreage of pasture is available, it is considered economy to keep cattle off grass until it is well started. A height of 4 inches is recommended by many farmers, before the stock is allowed on it. Cows cannot obtain a full feed on grass shorter than 4 inches.

RABBIT HASHINGS

BY NOEL WALTON

Old man winter may have been down, but it's obvious that he was not altogether out, and now when we are all ready for an endless succession of balmy days it seems that we are consigned for weeks to rain and its ever present side-kick mud. However a curl of smoke from a still, over in the holler indicates that there is one dry voter in Rabbit Hash. So maybe with his assistance we can pull thru.

Rumor of an executive change in L. A.

And a certain young bud, who so we're told is careless with the lists of her personal and private boy friends must take heed to a little warning and be extremely careful in her accusations or else—and that goes for the rest of the family too.

Herby and his little gum-chewin' mama have agreed to disagree.

And who is the guy down around Rabbit Hash who gave the orders to the exchange officials that nobody knew anything about? We is de president and general manager, incorporated, eh wot?

And all the youngsters are greasin' up their dispan and cowbells for another weddin' down the way.

Notice the punchin' Doc from over Florence way is on the make down our country quite a bit.

We found out where you can get the inside-est (pardon our grammar) dope on the telephone situation. Right in the business section of Rabbit Hash. Illustrated slides for benefit of children.

And the Professor, another gentleman and your old Snapper were treated to quite an amusing bit of animal comedy Sunday afternoon, eh, wot, teacher?

While browsing around the other night, came across this little item which we thoughtfully dedicate to the Kingfish of the R. H. phone office:

My wife will want a new spring hat, To wear on Easter morning; A woman thinks of things like that Expensive self adorning! But I, to top my manly head, crave no new he-bonnet— I'd merely like to have instead A bit more hair upon it.

W. B. F.

A fable: Once there was man ack in 1924 with a pocket full of old and a quart of whiskey. A policemen arrested him and the judge jailed him for having whiskey, but complimented him for saving his gold.

In 1934 the same man was jailed for having the gold and advised to put it into legal whiskey. Find the moral.

We ought to have a word or two for M. S.—but can't think of anything, so just our regards. We will probably be the recipient of a little of same's withering sarcasm anyhow.

It ain't the smoke that gets in a woman's eyes that worries a man, it's the fire in the eyes of the one he's married that gives him the jitters.

Leaving just enough room for us to wind up the loose edges and fall by the wayside again.

Yours for scandalization —Hasher.

Forty tons of lime have been distributed by Elliott county farmers, due to successful demonstrations.

SALE OF SCHOOL PROPERTY

TIME NOT WASTED

The irate parent stormed up and down the room before the nervous-looking young man.

"What, sir?" he shouted. "You have the nerve to come to my office to ask for my daughter? Well, I might as well tell you that you could have saved yourself the journey."

The suitor sighed wearily. "Well, that's all right, sir," he said. "You see, I had another message to deliver in the same building."

Most Perplexing

"How's your new cook?" asked Jones' neighbor.

"Quite satisfactory," said Jones. "We've only one complaint to make about her."

"And what is that?" his neighbor inquired.

"It's most annoying," explained Jones. "We can never tell whether she is singing because she is happy at her work, or whether she has burnt herself and is in pain."

Old Nick Was Spry

A man caught a boy in his garden stealing apples and handed him to the police.

As it was the boy's first offense, the judge let him off, but told him never to yield to such temptation again, adding: "Ye should have flown from the evil one."

"So I did, sir," replied the boy, "but he caught me before I got over the fence!"—Border Cities Star.

PRETTY WELL "CLEANED"

"George has offered me his name," "That's all he has left now, since he's been going with you."

Again the Spotlight

"Are you sure the country will come out all right?"

"Absolutely," answered Senator Sorghum.

"Then why all this argument?"

"As usual in every seeming crisis, there has to be an argument about who's going to get the credit for saving it."

Exchange of Bullets

"The pernicious custom of the duel has been abandoned forever."

"Enemies didn't do as much damage, however, when they met deliberately on the dueling field as friends now do when they accidentally catch sight of each other on a hunting expedition."—Washington Star.

Beginning of Property

"I suppose winning money from that tenderfoot was like taking candy from a child."

"Just about," replied Three-finger Sam; "assumin' you have noticed what a howling fuss any kid can put up if you try to grab his confectionery."

—Philander Johnson in the Washington Star.

Only Exceptions

Johnson—There isn't anything these bandits won't take nowadays.

Bronson—Oh, yes there are.

Johnson—Yeah? What is there?

Bronson—They take neither heed nor warning.

EDEN

... By Peter B. Kyne ...

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christens Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley baron, schemes to dominate the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. He proposes to play Nate against Lorry, assuming that they are carrying on the old feud, in this way getting control of the key lands necessary to the project. Nate, however, has no intention of carrying on the feud. He tells Lorry that he has a plan. Kershaw, Lorry's brother, met in France just before Owen was killed. They became buddies, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

The two days that followed Rance Kershaw's funeral were spent by Nate Tichenor at the Bar in headquarters, until his old superintendent, Rube Tenney, should arrive and, with his wife, assume the duty of looking after Lorry Kershaw's affairs and keeping her company. He spent those two days looking over his decayed estate and formulating plans for its restoration, but in the midst of these thoughts his mind constantly shuttled back to a consideration of Lorry Kershaw and her affairs. He did not know Silas Babson except by sight; hence, lacking knowledge of the man's character, he was at a loss to know why Babson had so suddenly turned on the Kershaws. Was it possible he had purchased the mortgage because he feared the holder of it might grant an extension? If so, then Babson desired it, not as an investment, but as a weapon. As it was, then, Babson's operations before they had fairly started.

The inability to puzzle out a trail had always annoyed him; he knew, too, it must be annoying and harassing Lorry Kershaw to a far greater extent.

She was a fine girl, and if he was going to be her neighbor he desired her friendship, not only for both their sakes but for the sake of all the Hensleys and Kershaws who had died with their boots on. He'd promised Owen Kershaw he'd wave the olive branch, if and when he should get back to Eden Valley. . . . What a fine-looking lad that Owen had been! . . . All man . . . unexpectedly sentimental. . . . Well, he'd been out of Eden Valley to a private school for a few years. . . . He'd been civilized.

"Yes, Owen," Tichenor soliloquized, "it is hard to accept too many favors from a traditional enemy. The suspicion, distrust, and dislike of a half century aren't to be eradicated in a day. . . . and she did throw my hand in the fire! Well, she has something I want and I'm willing to pay for it and pay heavily. . . . That cursed feud is dead and I'll not revive it with a lawsuit. Why rub into the girl the knowledge that I'm rolling in money while she's bankrupt?"

Forthwith he motored into Gold Run and telephoned to his attorney in San Francisco. "Tichenor speaking, Paddon. Listen carefully. Ranceford Kershaw is dead and has left a bankrupt estate to his sole heir, a daughter named Lorraine. But two years ago he gave a deed of gift to his daughter of those four thousand acres I spoke to you about—you have the legal description. Well, Lorraine Kershaw filed that deed of gift for record very recently, as I discovered when running down the title at the court house in Gold Run. The local bank holds thirty thousand dollars' worth of Rance Kershaw's notes, unsecured, overdue and with interest in default, and the president and controlling owner of that bank holds also an overdue first mortgage in the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, with a year's interest in default. In addition the Kershaw estate owes the Bar H Land and Cattle company more than three hundred thousand dollars. The bank and the banker are going to foreclose, but the Bar H isn't!"

"Good news," the lawyer interjected, as Nate Tichenor paused for breath. "It would seem that the girl is not in a position to hold you up, so you ought to get that four thousand acres cheap." "Precisely. But I'm not going to give her the opportunity to begin to think she can hold me up; there'll be no argument as to the price. I'm mailing my bank in San Francisco today a check in its favor for four hundred thousand dollars, with instructions to issue a certified check in favor of Lorraine Kershaw and send it over to your office. Meanwhile, prepare a deed from Lorraine Kershaw to the Mountain Valley Power company for that four thousand acres."

"Why not do a little trading? Offer the girl twenty an acre and work up 'Listen Paddon. You transact my legal business for me, but I do not need you for my general manager. That land is worth four hundred thousand dollars to me if I can get it without a fight and without leaving a taste in Lorry Kershaw's mouth."

"I can afford to pay for my fancies, I have a fancy for this four thousand acres, and I fancy it now! But I do not wish to be known in the premises, so do not come up yourself to close this deal. The girl would suspect a collusion. Understand?"

"Aye, aye, sir."

The following afternoon a lively car from Gold Run arrived at the ranch, bearing Mr. Rube Tenney, Mrs. Rube Tenney, and two little Tenneys, a boy and a girl. Mr. Tenney, in his young days, had been a Hensley bodyguard, willing (albeit never called upon to do so) to kill a Kershaw out of loyalty to the bread he ate. He was riding under Nate Tichenor's father, and when the latter died was elevated to the position of ranch superintendent, which position he had held with credit and honor until Nate Tichenor had gone out of the cattle business. Rube Tenney was nearly fifty years old now, but active and still trustworthy. He greeted his old master as informally as if he had not seen each other since 1917.

"Well, I got your wire ordering a report, Nate," Rube Tenney announced. "So I came a-runnin'!"

Tichenor smiled. When the Bar H retirement had left Tenney without a job, Nate had financed his old superintendent in the lease of a ranch and a band of two thousand sheep. Shee were and always had been repugnant to Rube Tenney, but he had worried along with the nuisances and even during those lean years had managed to make more than a living off them.

"You left a good man in charge of your sheep, I hope, Rube?"

"I sold 'em to a good man. My lease was expiring in October, an' after three bad feed years I reckoned I'd better quit before my sheep died of starvation." He handed Nate a check. "There's the money you staked me to. I got a few thousand over an above that. Thank God, the rest o' my life will be spent with decent, respectable cows."

"Now's a fine time to get back into the cattle business," Mr. Tenney went on. "Prices is advancing but you can still stock up cheap."

"I'm not going back into the cattle business, Rube. But you are. You're to be riding boss of the Circle K—on the salary of a ranch superintendent."

"Ah! Closin' in on them Kershaws, eh?" Tichenor grinned.

Patently Nate proceeded to disillusion him, and while he was doing it, the Tenney head wagged understandingly. "Never did figger you'd be able to keep up steam like the Hensleys," he declared. "That's your father's blood. Very well, son. I'm glad to have the job."

"Miss Kershaw knows all about you—knows I've sent for you. There's a Miss Bachman staying with her at present. Tell her I suggested she send Miss Bachman back to Valley Center in this rented car of yours."

He gazed long and affectionately after the departing Rube Tenney and his brood. "Old Faithful," he soliloquized. "He doesn't suspect I bought him out of the sheep business and took a loss to do it. But it's worth it to have him back on the job—to be free of worry about that Kershaw girl, and her finances—and mine. Fine joke on Rube and me if she takes a notion to fire him—for a woman's reason!"

But in his heart he knew there was little chance of that. Lorry Kershaw was a girl one could trust to know the value of a good rider and a loyal employee. And Rube Tenney could fill the bill.

When Silas Babson returned to Valley Center he brought with him three legal documents, all undated. One was a petition to the county board of supervisors for permission to form the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district; another was a formal application to the state water commission requesting the allocation to the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district of the flood or freshet water of Eden Valley creek; the third was the articles of incorporation of the district.

The attorneys he had consulted, Messrs. Brooks, Gagan and Brooks had agreed with him that, under the circumstances, his strategy was excellent, but had taken occasion to warn him that if Nate Tichenor and Lorraine Kershaw should decide to oppose his proposition seriously, he would realize he had a fight on his hands before he got through with them.

"Under legislation recently enacted a state water commission has been appointed and this commission has control of the so-called unappropriated waters in all the streams in this state. There are, undoubtedly, billions of gallons of so-called unappropriated water in Eden Valley creek, and there is no doubt but that the state water commission will grant the petition of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district for the allocation to it of these so-called unappropriated waters."

"As I understand your situation," you can get your machinery in operation to enter a condemnation suit before Tichenor sells his dam site to this power company you suspect of having an interest in it, and before the Kershaw girl sells her lake site to the same power company, you will, by the filing of that suit, automatically ruin the aspirations of your competitor, and you may safely accept my assurance that you can win such a condemnation suit. However, what the proposed irrigation district will have to pay Tichenor and Miss Kershaw for these properties is, of course, a matter for a jury to decide. Your irrigation district will have to pay the price within thirty days or forfeit forever its right to acquire the lands."

Babson nodded his comprehension and the attorney continued: "Your first choice of an impounding dam is now owned by Tichenor and the lake site by Miss Kershaw. If these properties are sold to the power company, being a public service utility, cannot be disturbed in its possession by another smaller corporation. You understand that point clearly?"

"We will assume that this is exactly what will come to pass. You will understand that in the position the power company will occupy, it will not have to purchase or condemn any water rights from Tichenor and Miss Kershaw. The water will pass over their ranch lands just as it has been passing for centuries, and the power company will merely impound it just above the point where it normally goes to waste on barren lands which still lie in the public domain. The Department of the Interior, which has jurisdiction over the public domain, will doubtless make no objection to the impounding of water by the power company, but in the event that settlers should in the future file homesteads on the infertile lands just below the power company's dam, the power company will be forced to let such settlers on lands riparian to the old channel of the stream have their fair share of the water."

"That is a contingency which will never occur, Mr. Gagan. Those waste lands, even with irrigation, will never attract anybody."

"We will assume you have the correct viewpoint. We have already assumed that you will not be able to acquire the Tichenor dam site and the Kershaw lake site. Now, have you an alternative lake site? Unless you have just hand us a check for the cost of this interview and forget your irrigation project."

Babson drew a sheet of paper toward him and made a rough sketch of Eden Valley and the surrounding country. "This portion of the valley, which is occupied by Tichenor and the Kershaw ranches, is usually referred to as the Pan," he explained. "This narrow canyon at the head of the Pan is known as the Handle. By cutting a canal through a pass in the hills on the western boundary of Forlorn Valley and installing our flood-gate there, the water can be led from this natural reservoir by easy gradient along the northern base of the hills that form the southern buttress of Forlorn Valley and separate it from Eden Valley. Thence laterals from this main canal will lead the water over some thirty thousand acres of Forlorn Valley. There is a 10 per cent slope."

"And your diversion dam would be in the public domain, eh? Have you sufficient political influence in Washington to induce the Department of the Interior to grant you permission to erect such a diversion dam, dig your main canal and impound your water in the public domain?"

Babson smiled. "I feel assured we can work that game through our local congressman and senator."

"Nathan Tichenor and Lorraine Kershaw," Gagan reminded him smilingly. "They own lands riparian to Eden Valley creek below the proposed diversion dam and may block your aspiration with the Department of Interior by claiming you are diverting water from riparian lands to non-riparian lands, to their signal loss and damage."

"But we will not divert their share of the water, Mr. Gagan. Our plan is to divert only that portion of the flood or waste waters allocated to us by the division of water rights, which is under the control of the state water commission."

"That will be fine, provided you can get away with it," the lawyer replied dryly. "My partners and I have considered this new law very carefully and it is our opinion that it is subject to successful attack by an energetic and belligerent riparian owner, as unconstitutional."

"It's been on the statute books five years," Babson challenged. "Why hasn't it already been declared unconstitutional?"

"Probably because nobody has pressed the point. Lawyers who could be engaged to tackle such a tough fight are high-priced, and the men who would engage them usually cannot afford them. So the victims make the best of the situation and get along on the amount of water allocated to them by the state water commission."

"Tichenor and the Kershaw girl will not fight us," Babson declared confidently.

"Nevertheless, if they're smart, they'll fight you. From what you tell me, these people come of fighty stock."

"Well, suppose we lose," Babson countered. "The district can still get rid of them by condemning all their lands' water rights, and buying them, can't it?"

"Yes, of course. But you still have the power company on the creek below you, clamoring for more water than they would then receive."

"Wouldn't the state water commission have to adjudicate the quarrel?"

Again Gagan smiled his enigmatic smile. "I suppose so. Still, with these two riparian owners eliminated by a condemnation suit, the issue would lie between you and the power company and if, as you seem to think, there is water enough for both, a compromise should not be difficult to reach."

"It's a chance I'll have to take," Babson answered doggedly, thinking of the mortgage his bank held on dry-farming lands in Forlorn Valley. Once he succeeded in getting surface irrigation on those lands their values would be stabilized—likewise the value of his bank's capital stock.

Having gorged himself with legal information on every angle of the situation that confronted him he paid his bill and returned to Valley Center in great good humor. He had boiled the issue down to its essentials. The water would cost nothing save the expense of leading it to Forlorn Valley or, if Nate Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw should oppose him successfully, he would have to buy them out via the condemnation suit process. If his plans matured in advance of those of the power company he suspected of interest in the Eden Valley water, he was safe. If they didn't he would still not be ruined. And once safely out of the unpleasant situation in which he found himself, he cared not a fig should ruin overtake the district subsequently. He told himself it was high time he liquidated his various interests and retired on the income from his capital.

The bank was closed for the day when Babson reached Valley Center, so it was not until he sat down at his desk next morning that Mr. Henry Rookby was able to impart to him such news of local interest as had developed during Babson's absence.

"Rance Kershaw's dead," Rookby announced immediately. "Troppead dead of heart disease the day you left for San Francisco."

Possibility of Places

of Fire and Brimstone

The discovery of the presence of sulphur in the sun is not wholly unexpected. For many years we have been hearing about "fire and brimstone" and we have concluded that fire and brimstone are the hottest combination in existence. But where was there any sulphur, or brimstone, except on the earth? Astronomers have searched outer space with telescopes. They have found various elements such as tungsten and fluorine, but no brimstone. Preachers have confessed they did not know where this place of fire and brimstone was located, and in later years some of them even began to doubt if it was real, though others stoutly insisted that it was.

But now Princeton university astronomers, with infra-red rays and highly sensitive plates, have obtained photographs showing more than 20 sulphur lines and confirming the theory advanced by a German astronomer some years ago that there is sulphur in the sun. So there must be some truth in it. The sun, the hottest spot science has yet been able to find anywhere, is fire and brimstone. And it is only 88,000,000 miles away. And if the sun is not "the" place of fire and brimstone, that does not prove that no such place exists. For it is now known that sulphur is not simply an element of the earth, but an element widely distributed through space.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Oceans Contain Gold, Silver, Iron and Many Other Precious Elements

There is enough gold in the sea to give every man, woman and child in the world about $14,000 worth, with gold at $20 an ounce, if it were all removed and distributed equally. Such is the conclusion which might be drawn from the most recent estimates of the composition of sea water contained in the 1933 physical tables of the Smithsonian Institution, says Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Each kilogram of sea water contains about forty-five millionths of one milligram of gold. The total ocean surface area is estimated at 365,500,000 square kilometers and the average depth at three kilometers. The seas therefore contain about 1,000,000,000 cubic kilometers of water with an estimated weight of one sextillion kilograms—a number represented by the figure one, followed by twenty-one zeros. This would mean about 500,000,000,000 ounces of gold, or 700 ounces for each human being. It is estimated the oceans contain silver 1,000 times greater than the amount of gold. Also there are vast stores of iron, manganese, phosphorus, iodine, copper, barium, arsenic and zinc—all present in sea water in minute amounts along with such vastly more abundant elements as chlorine, sodium, magnesium, calcium and potassium.

It has been found that the cost of extracting the precious elements from sea water is vastly out of proportion to the returns. While it has been assumed that the amounts of the various elements found in the surface water also would be found throughout the sea, this is by no means certain, as there is reason to believe the amount decreases with depth.

The Name of Hapsburg

Hapsburg, or Habichtsburg, translated into English, is Hawk's castle. It was from Hawk's castle, the gloomy little mill-like fortress on the River Aar in Switzerland, that came the name of Hapsburg, a name borne by a family that ruled Austria for 638 years, or so long that scarcely anyone but the historian today recalls the name of their predecessors, the Babenbergs.—Chicago Tribune.

Lesson for April 1

THE CHRIST RISEN (Easter Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.—Col. 3:1.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living With the Living Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Reality of the Resurrection.

The resurrection of Christ is one of the foundation truths of Christianity. It is the grand proof that Christ was what he claimed to be, the Messiah, the Son of God (Matt. 12:24-40; John 2:19-21).

1. The Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10). John does not enter into a description of the resurrection of Christ, or give any proof other than the empty tomb and the fact that it repeatedly manifested itself afterward. To see the body of Christ disfigured with a spear thrust and nail prints, and the empty tomb, was all that faith needed. In this lesson John describes the processes of his own conviction touching Christ's resurrection.

2. The testimony of Mary Magdalene (vv. 1, 2). This woman, out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons (Mark 16:9; Luke 8:2), announced the fact of the empty tomb to Peter and John. Prompted by great love to him for his kindness to her, she went early to the tomb even "when it was yet dark." She had realized great good at his hand, therefore she could not rest until she had done her utmost for him. The measure of one's service for Christ is the degree in which he realizes the benefits conferred.

3. Personal investigation by Peter and John (vv. 3-10). The news of the empty tomb which Mary brought so moved John and Peter that they both ran to investigate. Their investigation assured them of the reality of the resurrection. The removal of the stone from the sepulcher, and the arrangement of the grave clothes, convinced them that this would not have been done by an enemy.

4. The Manifestations of the Risen Lord (vv. 11-29).

a. Mary weeping at the empty tomb (v. 11). Peter and John went home but Mary could not. She stood there weeping. She really should have been rejoicing that the grave was empty.

b. Mary questioned by the angels (vv. 12, 13). Through her tears she saw angels at the tomb who inquired as to the cause of her sorrow.

c. Jesus revealed himself to Mary (vv. 14-16). She first saw the angels and then her eyes lighted upon the Lord. She did not recognize him in his resurrection body but his voice was familiar to her. As soon as he called her by name she recognized him and fell at his feet weeping.

d. Jesus forbade her to touch him (v. 17). This showed that she was now coming into a new relationship to him. Besides this, the disciples were still in doubt and sorrow. "Go tell my brethren" was the message she must carry.

e. Mary's testimony (v. 18). She told the disciples that she had seen the Lord.

2. To the disciples (vv. 19-29). This is the first appearance to the disciples as a body. For fear of the Jews they met in a private room and barred the door. While they were discussing the strange happenings of the day, the Lord mysteriously appeared among them.

a. When Thomas was absent (vv. 19-23).

(1) His message of peace (v. 19). He did not come with censure for their failure and desertion. Their conduct merited censure, but his consideration was too tender for that.

(2) He showed his hands and his side (v. 20). Having calmed their fears he gave them unmistakable evidence of his resurrection.

(3) He commissioned them (v. 21). "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you." This commission was not simply to the eleven but to all the believers (Luke 24:33).

(4) He bestowed the Holy Spirit upon them (v. 22). He breathed on them and said unto them, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." Only as empowered by the Holy Ghost can a disciple go forward as a successful witness for his Lord.

(5) The disciples' authority (v. 23). This authority was not by virtue of office but by virtue of having the Holy Ghost.

b. When Thomas was present (vv. 24-29).

(1) The victory of sight and touch (vv. 24-25). Jesus graciously supplied the evidence which Thomas needed.

(2) Greater blessing for those who see only by faith (v. 29).

Foolish Ideas About Dieting

Absolutely No Scientific Basis for Separating One Food From Another, at a Meal; Digestion Will Take Care of Itself.

Always an interesting subject of written or voiced discussion, is the matter of diet. This expression of opinion is by a recognized authority: "A friend of mine called me up the other day and told me she wanted to ask me a lot of questions about diet. She said: 'I have never heard anything like the way people are dieting just now. Every place I go I hear of some new fad, and when I have company there is almost always somebody who can't eat this or that, or, more likely, this with that.'"

"She went on and asked me if there was any reason why bread or root vegetables should not be eaten with meat and fruits. My answer was emphatically No! There is no scientific basis for separating one food from another at a meal."

"She continued, 'They say that only one digestive juice will work at a time—that the doctor tells them that they can't digest mixtures. What do you believe?'"

"I don't believe—I know. Nature has supplied us with digestive juices which will prepare all the foods we eat for absorption into the blood stream to be taken around the body for the tissues to pick out what they need for use in giving us the strength to do active work. What is left over will be stored as fat, whether we eat fat, sugar, starch or protein."

"Nature has arranged that digestion shall take place in different parts of the alimentary canal. In the mouth we should chew our food well to mix it with the saliva which acts on starch. This goes on acting in the stomach until the stomach juices have saturated the food. Then the digestion of protein begins. When the food is well acidified with the gastric juice the valve to the intestines opens, the food goes through gradually, and there it meets a number of different juices which then finish the digestion of starch and protein and which act on fat in such a way that it can be absorbed."

"Almost all individual foods are mixtures of protein and starch and fat. The exceptions are pure sugar and pure fat. Peas, beans and cereals contain protein, starch and a little fat. Meat is a combination of protein and fat. If we eat sugar or starch by themselves, they will pass quickly through the stomach, but this in itself is of no particular advantage. Rapid digestion and food digestion are two different things.

"If we eat a well planned varied diet, which gives us plenty of minerals and vitamins and 'roughage,' and do not eat an overload of protein, starches and carbohydrates, we need have no fear of the 'backing down' of our digestive apparatus, which is equipped naturally to take care of a varied diet."

"The food faddist who insists upon separating food elements does not seem to take into consideration the fact that nature itself combines these in most of our staple foods. "It is annoying and amusing, but also pathetic, that a spectacular theory of diet, however false its foundation, gets the attention of even some otherwise intelligent persons."

"The true scientist in the nutritive field is not so assured in his pronouncements even about nutrition facts, because he always remains with an open mind ready to add or subtract from his existing theories of diet, which, although they may change in detail, remain standard. Plenty of vegetables and fruits, some of them raw, plenty of milk or milk dishes, an egg several times each week, some meat, fish or cheese, and enough fats and sugar and starches to keep his weight normal—and you have the basic principle of a good diet. The addition of sunlight, cod liver oil or an irradiated food among the cereals, the inclusion of a citrus fruit or tomato juice are details of this simple practical plan."

Cabbage.
Apples.
Bacon fat or butter.
Salt.

Chop or shred cabbage. Saute in butter or bacon fat with one-half or an equal quantity of sliced apples or saute the cabbage alone and serve with slices of apple dipped in flour and sauted.

Carrot Ring.
3 cups mashed carrots.
4 eggs.
1/2 cup thick white sauce.

Beat yolks and white of eggs separately. Combine all ingredients, folding whites in last. Bake in ring set in pan of water till firm. Fill center with green peas.

Norwegian Salad.
3 cups potato cubes.
2 slices onion.
1 cucumber pickle.
1/2 teaspoon salt.
1/2 cup sardines.
1/2 cup parsley.
5 tablespoons olive oil.
1/2 teaspoon salt.
1/2 teaspoon paprika.
3 tablespoons vinegar.
1 hard-cooked egg.

Cut cold boiled potatoes in one-half inch cubes. Chop very fine the onion, cucumber, pepper, sardines and parsley. Add these to potatoes with oil, salt, paprika, vinegar and egg. Mix thoroughly, shape in mound on serving dish and garnish with slices of egg and heart leaves of lettuce, surrounded with sardines and olives.

Golden Gate Bridge

The Golden Gate bridge over San Francisco bay will cost about $35,000,000. The bridge proper will be 6,450 feet long and the towers will be 740 feet above mean high water. They will be the tallest bridge towers ever built. The main tower at the San Francisco end will be 834 feet high. The minimum vertical clearance at the center will be 220 feet above mean high water. Including approach roads, the total length will be seven miles. The two main cables will have a diameter of 36 1/2 inches and will be 7,660 feet long between anchorages. Cable sag at the center will be 475 feet.

"I keep fit"

"...in these days of recovery...if I don't, someone else will have my job." How? "Well, I learned years ago that work...wear and tear...takes something out of men and women—particularly those who work indoors."

"I tore down those precious red-blood-cells faster than my good body could rebuild. A friend told me the story of that grand medicine S.S.S. Now at 4 P. M. I am fit to still 'carry on'."

If you feel weak...lack a keen appetite...or if your skin is pale...try S.S.S. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick up in your appetite...your color and skin should improve with increased strength and energy.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-globin of the blood to enable you to "carry on" without exhaustion as you should naturally. At all drug stores.

NO LONGER ASHAMED

TO HANG HER WASHING OUTDOORS!

Towels, Linen Sparkling White Now — Colored Clothes Unfaded—Thanks to Oxydol!

READ MRS. GUDGER'S LETTER

Mrs. E. Gudger, Minneapolis, Minn.

"I used to hang my wash in the basement so no one could see it, until one day I heard about Oxydol. Now you couldn't get me to use anything else and my dish towels and hand towels are as white as my lovely table linen. My colored clothes, too, may fade from the sun, but never from Oxydol."

THE amazing new discovery of the world's most famous soap experts, the makers of Ivory—this new and improved OXYDOL does these things no other soap can do or has ever done:

- (1) Soaks out dirt in 15 minutes. Without boiling or back-breaking rubbing. Hence—cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine, giving you your afternoon free!
- (2) Gets clothes 4 to 5 shades WHITER, by the scientific whiteness-measuring Tintometer test. Whiter even than other granulated soaps (heretofore considered "whitest washing") can do in TWO washings!
- (3) Yet, due to its new and improved formula, colors won't fade; fabric won't wear out! Even cotton prints and children's dainty frocks are safe. Yet, despite its amazing cleaning power, it leaves hands soft, finger nails lustrous and uncracked.

Thick 3-inch Suds in Any Water

OXYDOL is specially fitted to water conditions in each district where it's sold. The OXYDOL you get here already contains just the right amount of water-softener to fit the water you use. You can see the results in the suds. OXYDOL multiplies 500 TIMES in suds! Makes rich 3-inch suds in any water, hard or soft!

And OXYDOL is economical. Many ordinary granulated or flake soaps cost 8% to 30% more for the same amount of soap. OXYDOL gives you in some cases a third more soap for the same money.

Make This Test

Get OXYDOL today from your grocer and make this two-way test: (1) With a ruler measure OXYDOL's thick suds and compare with the suds made by your usual soap—note how long they last; (2) Watch the clock to prove to yourself that OXYDOL does soak out the dirt in 15 minutes!

ization of County government which will result in the saving of millions of dollars to the taxpayers of the State.
Uniform Narcotic Law—A uniform narcotic law was passed which without increased expense of enforcement, places Kentucky in the vanguard of civilized States in the reduction of this great evil.
Amendments Workmen's Compensation Law—Certain amendments to the Workmen's Compensation law were enacted which insure the erection in Kentucky of several large factories, furnishing employment to many laborers; and, Whereas, due to the conditions hereinbefore set out, it appearing to our satisfaction that the expenses of the government of Kentucky have been so greatly cut that it would be thoroughly unwise to reduce them any further and that this with the continuing decrease in receipts makes it absolutely essential, in order that the State government may properly function for the members of this General Assembly to enact legislation for the purpose of raising the necessary revenue upon which to operate the government, balance its budget and bring its warrants back to par, therefore,

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky:

That it is the sense of the members of this General Assembly that an extra-ordinary session of the General Assembly is necessary for the purpose of considering legislation having to do solely with the financial affairs of the State Government, and to this end, the Honorable Ruby Laffoon, Governor of Kentucky, is respectfully requested and urged to call the General Assembly of Kentucky into extra-ordinary session, for the purpose of considering and enacting legislation relating to the following matters:

(a) To make a careful study and survey of the financial needs of every Department, Board, Commission and Agency of the State Government for the purpose of ascertaining the amount of money actually required to properly conduct the affairs of each such governmental agency upon a strictly business basis, and to enact the necessary legislation to secure the revenue with which to provide for the payment in cash of the cost of disclosed by such study and survey.

(b) To provide for the collection and for the proper distribution by appropriation of such revenue among the departments and agencies of the State Government in accordance with their actual needs.

(c) To create a Sinking Fund of at least $1,200,000.00 for the purpose of retiring outstanding State warrants.

(d) To enact such legislation as may be necessary to compel economy in and to safeguard the expenditure of any appropriation, whether now existing or which may hereafter be made by amending or repealing any law or part of a law providing an appropriation for any purpose.

(e) To repeal outright any law providing an appropriation, the purpose of which are deemed unnecessary.

Be it further resolved, that, we the members of the General Assembly do hereby pledge, obligate, and bind ourselves to balance the budget during such extra session and to vote and use all honorable means to enact legislation to obtain this result, either by adopting revenue measures or by the reduction of appropriations, to the end that the expenses of the government may be brought within its income, and as individuals, we solemnly agree to make every honest effort to carry into effect the purpose hereinbefore set out, to accomplish them and then adjourn.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

Last week we mentioned the fact that our debating team was preparing for the district debate tournament at Bellevue.

On Thursday afternoon they debated Cold Springs and even though they were defeated there was only a four point difference and our representative, Mr. Kirkwood, said that they performed very creditably and we feel quite proud of them and still have hopes in regard to their winning the county debate tournament which is to be held in the near future.

Last Friday Boyd Snow represented our school in Oration and Elmore Ryle entered in Extemporaneous Speaking in the district tournament at Bellevue. Boyd placed fourth and Elmore second, and they were highly complimented by the judges even though they didn't place first.

The Freshmen certainly showed great ability in presenting their chapel program Friday and it was enjoyed by everyone.

Toll's Drug Store

Located at end of Ft. Mitchell Car Line on the Dixie Highway Where a complete Drug Service is Offered—Have an Envelope Record To the People of This Section—For Drugs and Prescription Service—Carry a Complete Line of Whiskey and Wines.

Known thruout as among the reliable and progressive stores of the community is Toll's Drug Store. They have gained a large trade by their goods of quality and commendable methods. They are a modern drug store and carry a full line of famous drugs and remedies. Toll's is headquarters for world famous remedies which are compounded from prescriptions of renowned physicians. They always keep their stock in the best condition and a full line so that you can get what you call for. They are very careful in filling of prescriptions, and having had much experience, the pharmacists at this drug store are considered the best in this line. This popular Pharmacy also handles a complete line of druggists' sundries, perfumes, toilet articles, combs, brushes and all of the goods that are common to a first-class store of this kind.

It is especially in the day and age that prescriptions are filled by persons who are thoroughly versed in the profession, and we do not hesitate to advise our readers that at this establishment they will find in charge of pharmacists who have had wide experience.

During the course of their career they have witnessed marvelous changes in science, and being keen students of the times, are thoroughly familiar with every development. We desire to compliment this store upon its eminently successful career in the business and professional world.

In recent years, the old reliable stores where one can feel absolutely certain that the doctor's prescription which they are having filled is being done correctly and with the best ingredients, have been passed more or less to stores carrying a variety of articles, but not so with Toll's. While they are as modern as you will find in this section, yet they are proud of the reputation and standing they have in this section in that prescription work in their establishment is a dignified part of the business and one in which too much cannot be exercised and as the result Boone county people can go to this store and feel assured they are getting just what they want.

ENGEL'S RESTAURANT AND CAFE

Located at 16-18 Pike Street, Bromley. This is a very popular place and merits the large patronage it receives, for it is one of the cleanest, most sanitary places serving palatable foods of all kinds to be found. Very popular with the traveling public, as well as the adjacent territory.

This place has gained a name that has spread far and wide as a place of popular prices and where the local and traveling people can more than satisfy their demands in the manner of obtaining good food. The display of foods consists of not only the prime necessities of life, but many delicacies are offered that are inviting to the taste of the most fastidious.

Cleanliness is one of the outstanding features of this modern place and is not confined to the silverware and food that is brought to the attention of everyone, but extends to the kitchen where the dishes are all sterilized, and those places only frequented by the management and assistants.

The food is prepared in such a way that to the uninitiated the thought at once comes that there never was such a good place to eat. Poor eating places are not the exception by any means. Here is where you will find the best of fish any time you may happen to call. It is a pleasure to have such a modern and up-to-date place as this at which to refer the stranger as well as local people.

We take great pleasure to compliment this well-known place on the high order of the establishment and refer it to our readers without hesitation. A visit to this place will readily prove to you that it is the proper advantageous place to enjoy a good meal. This establishment and the men who direct its affairs are contributing in no little measure to the progress and development of this section of the state and especially to that portion within a radius of several miles around.

Good bottle beer and draught of the leading brands at all times. People of Boone and Kenton counties make it your practice to stop at this well known place and "you will not go wrong."

FISCAL COURT

MET TUESDAY OF THIS WEEK—NEW TRACTOR AND GRADER ORDERED TO BE PURCHASED—SEVERAL CITIZENS ATTEND MEETING.

The Boone County Fiscal Court met Tuesday of this week with all members present.

The court authorized the road department, under the direction of A. O. Rouse, to purchase a new tractor and grader, two articles of equipment that they have needed sadly for a long time.

It is said that this machinery will be delivered to them within a short time so that road work may proceed at once.

A number of citizens of the county attended the meeting of the court each of whom was interested in some road project. But no particular promises were made, the court merely saying that each road would be reached as soon as possible.

MASONIC LODGE

TO HOLD CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION SUNDAY APRIL 8—MINUTE BOOKS GO BACK TO 1834—PROMINENT SPEAKER TO BE PRESENT

Good Faith Lodge No. 95 F. & A. M., of Erlanger, will hold its Centennial Celebration on Sunday, April 8th. It will be exactly 100 years old on that date. It is the oldest Masonic Lodge in Kenton, Boone and Campbell counties. For many years this Lodge held its meetings in the old school house in Florence which was made famous by the stories of Prof. John Uri Lloyd. By mutual consent it was moved from Florence to Erlanger in 1892.

The old minute books which go back to 1834 reveal many things which are strange to the Masons of today. The Erlanger Masons will hold a religious service from 1:15 to 2:00 p. m. and open house from 2:00 p. m. to 5:00 p. m. All members of the fraternity have been cordially invited to attend. A beautiful souvenir history of the Lodge will be presented to all visitors on that occasion. Judge Richard Priest, Dietzman, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky, and a number of other Masonic dignitaries will be present.

CLAIMS TO HAVE RECORD

Herbert Snyder, former sheriff of Boone county, stated Tuesday that during his term of office he had conveyed forty prisoners to the state penitentiary. He also stated that there had never been less than one sentenced at each session of court in the past four years. Mr. Snyder claims it a record in Boone county.

Clint Riddell, of near Heron, was a visitor in Burlington Monday afternoon.

C. H. Blankenknecht, of Florence a member of the board of directors of the local bank was a business visitor here Monday.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

SECOND COMMUNITY

SIGN-UP DAYS AAA

CORN-HOG PROGRAM

Second community sign-up days in the AAA Corn-Hog program will begin this coming week, according to county agent H. R. Forkner. The date and place of these meetings will be determined by the county campaign committee in a meeting at Burlington Saturday morning at 9:30 a. m.

The sign-up days are held for the convenience of those farmers who find it difficult to come to the county agent's office. The sign-up has already closed in a number of states and is expected to close in Kentucky in the near future.

Many farmers are holding back until all evidence of sales of hogs are secured. This evidence should be secured at the earliest possible date and should be as complete as possible at the time of signing the contract.

The AAA Corn-Hog contract as with the tobacco is a voluntary contract. Each grower bears his own responsibility to sign-up with his government to improve the economic position of his own and his fellow farmer and to receive the 1934 benefits that are expected to bring the value of his 1934 corn and hogs up to a fair exchange value. While the processing tax is paid on all hogs slaughtered, only those farmers who sign contracts will receive benefits.

Those farmers who sign up at the earliest possible date greatly assist the county campaign committee and the county agent's office and will help prevent a last minute rush.

4-H CLUB MEETINGS

Boone county 4-H clubs are holding their regular third community club meetings on schedule according to county agent H. R. Forkner. New Haven "Boosters" and Constance "Cornercrackers" met the past week, Petersburg "Good Will" and Hebron "Norbeh Champions" on Tuesday of this week, Florence "X-L-Alls" and Hamilton "Silver Leaders" on Wednesday, Burlington "Blue Ribbons" on Friday. Next week "Waltonians" and Verona "Willing Workers" will meet on Monday and Grant "True Blues" and New Haven "Boosters" on Thursday.

The tobacco project members in most cases are reporting their plant beds sowed, poultry club members their project eggs set or chicks hatched, sewing club members their projects started or ready to start and other project groups getting under way in splendid shape.

Boone county 4-H clubs are going forward this year despite the rush of other work. Both members and leaders are living up to the old club saying "A quitter never wins and a winner never quits" and to the club motto, "Make the best better."

CORNERCRACKERS MEET

The Cornercracker 4-H Club of Constance met at the school Monday morning and had the second meeting of the club this year. No one has begun his project as yet, but all reported that they are ready to begin the year's work. Richard Kottmyer, Club Reporter.

INFANT SCHRAM

Infant Schram, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Schram, of Florence, Ky., passed away at Speers Hospital Tuesday morning. After a short service he was laid to rest in Florence cemetery Wednesday afternoon. Funeral Director Philip Talliferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hickman who have been making their home with relatives in Cynthiana, Ky. for the past six months have returned to Burlington for the summer months.

Attorney D. B. Castleman, of Erlanger, was a business visitor in Burlington Saturday morning.

Melvin Jones, of Union, was a welcome visitor at the county seat Saturday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cason, of Grant, were visiting in Burlington a few minutes Saturday morning.

REDMOND KELLY

Redmond Kelly, aged 85 years, passed away Monday morning at his home 120 Crescent Ave., Erlanger, after a short illness. The remains were removed to the Talliferro Funeral Home for preparation.

Funeral was from the late residence Wednesday morning at 8:30 a. m. with requiem high mass at St. Henry's church at 9 a. m. by Rev. E. Corby, pastor, after which he was laid to rest in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Kelly was a retired employee of the Southern railroad. He having served that company for 47 years. Had he lived one month longer he would have celebrated his 50th wedding anniversary.

He is survived by his widow Mrs. Anna McHugh Kelly, three sons, James, Andrew and Martin Kelly, six grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. Bridgett Walsh, of Ashland, Ky., and other relatives.

The pall bearers were Daniel McGuirk, Martin Noonan, John Corrigan, W. P. Gardner, Andy Scheben and Twyman Clutterbuck. Funeral Director Philip Talliferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

PLAY TO BE GIVEN

BY LOCAL P. T. A.

"The Man In The Green Shirt" will be staged at the Burlington high school auditorium Friday night, April 7 at 7:30 p. m. This play is said to be one of the best to be staged in this town. Admission 15 and 25 cents.

BOONE MAN

RAISES KOREAN SEED FOR SALE—VERY PROFITABLE ENTERPRISE, ACCORDING TO COUNTY AGENT H. R. FORKNER

The first Korean seed to be produced in Boone county for sale was raised the past year on the farm of Dr. C. G. Crisler, six miles from Hebron in the North Bend bottoms. Dr. Crisler reports that seventeen acres of a thirty acre field threshed for seed, the past fall yielded 4000 pounds of seed of excellent quality.

The seed was threshed by E. A. Martin, of near Idlewild. Dr. Crisler is selling the seed at six cents per pound and has around 3000 lbs. of seed left for sale. Korean at this price is returning around $15.00 per acre for seed and the straw is left for hay.

During the present rush in the tobacco, Corn-Hog and other AAA programs too little attention is being given to the importance of Korean, red clover, alfalfa, sweet clover, alfalfa, timothy, ed pot, orchard grass and bluegrass combined with soil improvement in the upbuilding of agriculture in the county. At least two legumes and two grasses should be put in most pasture mixture to secure even stands and maximum returns. While the AAA programs are expected to bring several hundred thousand dollars to Boone county farmers this year pasture and hay improvement alone could be made to double this amount.

Walter Vest of Walton, was a business visitor in Burlington on county court day.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Eddins, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert White were the Easter guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Bachelor and Mr. and Mrs. Furnish Pope, of the Burlington and Florence road. The occasion was in honor of Mr. Bachelor's birthday.

Geo. Kessler and son, of near Florence, were business visitors in town Monday afternoon.

J. C. Aylor, of the Bullittsville neighborhood was in town a few minutes Monday afternoon.

B. E. Aylor, of the Walper hills community and one of our most hustling farmers, purchased on Monday of this week from Albert White, of the Waterloo neighborhood, a fine pair of work mares.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Conner returned to Burlington Tuesday after a stay of several months in Florida. Mr. Conner raised his kennel of greyhounds at Miami thru the winter season with varying success. He plans to visit some of the northern track during the summer months.

SHORT TERM

EXPECTED FOR REGULAR APRIL SESSION DUE TO AGRICULTURAL WORK IN COUNTY—MANY CASES ON DOCKET

The April term of circuit court will convene Monday with Judge Vallandigham presiding and Ward Yager as prosecutor for the Commonwealth. This term is said to be one of the largest dockets for some time.

There are twenty cases on the Commonwealth appearance docket, 12 cases on appearance equity docket, 15 cases on appearance common-law docket.

John Herndon, who is charged with manslaughter, will be tried at this term of court. Herndon, who was operating a bus collided with E. J. Maddin on the Mud Lick bridge, killing both Maddin and the horse on which he was riding.

According to reports this session will be of short duration, owing to farmers being so busy at this time of year. However, cases will be tried rapidly and many on the present docket will be cleaned up.

The following is a list of grand jurors:

Earl McGilson, J. R. Conrad, Russell Finn, Eldridge Carpenter, J. G. Finnell, L. H. Congleton, Geo. Bradford, Alvin Dringenburg, Lon Wilson, R. Z. Cason, L. H. Rouse, Walter Gaines, J. C. Garnett, R. L. Green, H. L. Criger, Vernard Tupman, Allen Utt, J. H. Huey, H. F. Dressman, J. W. Grant, Volney Dickerson, Elmo Jergens, A. J. Ogden, Ezra Aylor.

The following were summoned to appear for petit jurors:

Warren E. Utz, W. T. Carpenter, Franklin Huey, J. S. Reffett, J. E. Hodges, John Delahanty, E. H. Clore, Jonas Stevens, C. W. Craig, F. J. Conrad, Bernard Sebree, Herman Ryle, Thelma Birke, Mrs. J. F. Cleek, J. K. Henry, M. M. Lucas, C. M. Burcham, Freddie Kleemeyer, C. M. Waller, W. R. Kenney, J. J. Myers, John Dye, Omer Aha, E. A. Martin, Elmer Elston, Clyde Anderson, W. T. Renaker, O. K. Powers, R. O. Rouse, Hazel Popham.

MRS PRATT MCKEE

Mrs. Pratt McKee, aged 50 years, passed away Monday at her home in Alexandria, Ky., after having been a sufferer with diabetes for several years. The remains were immediately removed to the Talliferro Funeral Home for preparation.

Mrs. McKee had a wide circle of friends in Boone county, having taught in the Union school. For the last seven years she had taught at Alexandria.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Ada Barton, Alexandria, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hedden Sr., Mt. Sterling, Ky., 1 sister, Mrs. T. B. Arthur, Mt. Sterling, Ky., two brothers, R. H. Hedden, Ashville, N. C., and J. W. Hedden, Jr., Mt. Sterling. She was a member of the Baptist church, of Alexandria, Ky., and Secretary of Northern Ky. League of Girls.

The remains were forwarded to Mt. Sterling, Ky., Tuesday afternoon and services were held at the home of her parents in that city Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, by the Rev. Olus Hamilton, Baptist minister.

Funeral Director Philip Talliferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

PLAY TO BE GIVEN

BY NEW HAVEN JUNIORS

A three-act comedy, "Dying to Live" will be staged at the New Haven High School Auditorium on Friday night, April 6th, by the Junior Class of that school. This play is said to be very interesting and everyone in the county is urged to attend.

TESTS CATTLE FOR T. B.

Dr. A. S. Barnes of the State Veterinary Department tested around 500 cattle in Boone county for T. B. on last Monday and Tuesday. Boone county is now a Federal Accredited T. B. free county. A retest is necessary every five years to hold this standing. Approximately 20 percent of the total cattle are tested on the retest. If the reactors run below a certain percentage the county is reaccredited. If it runs above a certain number the entire county must be retested.

President's Veto of Appropriation Bill Overridden by Both Houses; Farley Forces Shakeup in Air Companies; "Brain Trust" to Be Investigated.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

President Roosevelt

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S leadership received its first important setback when the senate, following similar action by the house, overrode his veto of the independent offices appropriation bill carrying the veterans' and federal pay provisions. The vote in the senate was 83 to 27, or three more than the required two-thirds. In the house the vote was overwhelming, 310 to 72, a margin of 515 to more than the necessary two-thirds.

The bill is now a law, and its passage is of high significance, as it throws the budget estimates out of kilter and adds greatly to the tax burden of the people. But of more importance is the evident fact that the President has lost his firm grip on congress. Fear of reprisals by war veteran voters in the coming elections proved a greater fear with many Democratic senators than the displeasure of the President.

Restoring two-thirds of a 15 percent pay cut voted for a million government employees, including military and naval personnel, in the economy act last summer, the bill also greatly liberalizes compensation and pensions to veterans of the World and Spanish-American wars.

The bill will cost the government an additional $210,000,000 annually. It eliminates retroactively as of February 1, 1934, one-third of the federal employees' pay cut and an additional third on July 1. The cost to the government under the provision will be $26,000,000 for the period from February 1 to July 1, and $126,000,000 annually thereafter.

While the President by executive order has restored many veterans to the compensation and hospitalization rolls, congress made mandatory awards estimated to cost the government about $84,000,000 annually and an additional $21,000,000 for the rest of the present fiscal year.

The increased amounts for government workers and veterans will come from the general revenues of the government.

AFTER weeks of exhausting negotiations, the threatened strike of the automobile industry was averted when President Roosevelt secured an agreement between executives and labor leaders. Representation for all employees in dealing with management was established, and safeguards were extended to all unions against intimidation or interference.

"It is my hope," said the President, "that this system may develop into a kind of works council in industry in which all groups of employees, whatever may be their choice or organization of form of representation, may participate in joint conference with their employers."

He hailed this as basis for a more comprehensive, adequate and equitable system of relations than ever has existed in a large industry.

The agreement avoids the licensing of the automobile industry, which labor threatened to invoke if there was no agreement. The American Federation of Labor is not recognized as such by industry except when its affiliates have the necessary votes on the collective bargaining committee.

One of the provisions of the agreement was that the NRA should set up a board, responsible to the President, to sit in Detroit and pass upon all questions of representation, discharge, and discrimination. Decision of the board is to be final upon all concerned. Three men will serve on the board, one representing labor, one industry, the third being neutral.

WEARY from the strain of close application to the affairs of state, President Roosevelt departed for a short vacation aboard Vincent Astor's yacht. He headed for the warm climates of southern waters to fish and relax for a week. It was an unprecedented move for the Executive to leave Washington while congress is in session, but with the same spirit of a year ago when he set out on the same yacht before taking the Presidential reins, the President greeted his cronies aboard ship and waved his hat to a rousing farewell from the folks on the dock at Jacksonville, Fla., where he boarded the yacht.

With carefree happiness he posed for the photographers and joshed the newspaper men. He chatted eagerly with his eldest son, James, who joined him here for the cruise.

For the next week or more, the President will be fishing and swimming, away from the heavy cares of office. He intends to return to Washington within the ten-day constitutional limit required for consideration of any legislation passed by congress.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT Monday called on congress to pass legislation with "teeth in it" for the control of the nation's stock and commodity exchanges.

He asked that the law be so severe "that speculation, even as it exists today, will of necessity be drastically curtailed." His demand was made in a letter to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Dem., Fla.) and Representative Sam Rayburn (Dem., Texas), chairmen of the congressional committees which are handling the pending stock exchange bills.

Charging the exchanges with organizing one of the most determined lobbies which has fought any of his legislation, the President said that the country would not be satisfied unless the exchange control message is drastic. People generally, the President said, blame the speculation on exchanges for the 1929 artificial boom and the resulting slump.

IN THE foreword of his forthcoming new book, "On Our Way," President Roosevelt says if his administration "is a revolution, it is a peaceful one, achieved without violence, without the overthrow of the purpose of established law and without the denial of just treatment to any individual or class."

The proofs of the foreword, given out by the publishers, the John Day company, read:

"Some people have called our new policy 'fascism.' It is not fascism because its inspiration springs from the mass of the people themselves rather than from a class or a group or a marching army. Moreover, it is being achieved without a change in fundamental republican method. We have kept the faith with, and in, our traditional political institutions."

"Some people have called it 'communism'; it is not that, either. It is not a driving regimentation founded upon the plans of a perpetuating dictatorship which subordinates the making of laws and the processes of the courts to the orders of the executives. Neither does it manifest itself in the total elimination of any class or in the abolition of private property."

"If it is a revolution, it is a peaceful one, achieved without violence, without the overthrow of the purposes of established law and without the denial of just treatment to any individual or class."

CHARGES made by Dr. William A. Wirt, superintendent of schools at Gary, Ind., that some of President Roosevelt's advisers wanted to lead the government into communism are to be investigated by a committee of the house of representatives. Doctor Wirt will be called before this committee to name the men or men who told him that President Roosevelt is merely the "Kerensky of this revolution" and that the radicals within the administration are seeking to foster a revolution by prolonging misery and destitution in this country.

Republican members of the house were determined that the inquiry will not be confined to the Wirt allegations alone, despite an apparent desire on the part of Democratic leaders to narrow the investigation's scope. Democratic members of the house were making an effort to confine the inquiry to the allegations made by the Gary educator alone. Under pressure from Republicans, however, it was agreed by the Democratic leaders that the men named by Doctor Wirt will have to be called.

The entire matter is being treated as a joke by members of the so-called "brain trust." They declare that Doctor Wirt has been made the victim of a practical joke by a mischievous member of the radical group. There were several different stories current as to the origin of the Wirt allegations, one version having it that the Gary educator mistook a newspaper man in New York for an official of the administration.

Twenty-five thousand school children in German cities will be separated from their parents and sent to the country for a year by order of the Prussian state.

This is in line with the Nazi policy of "reconciliation of urban and rural population" which will be fostered by sending every town child to the country for a year. The 25,000 will compose the first trial batch. The year in the country will be financed partly by the state of Prussia and partly by school organizations.

BACK again at the scene of his triumphs and his failure, after being a fugitive for 13 months, Martin Insull, brother of Samuel Insull, is in Chicago to answer a charge of embezzlement from the treasury of the Middle West Utilities.

Insull arrived in Chicago—where he had lived for more than 40 years—an alien, technically excluded from the United States but paroled to Lieutenant Johnson until the charges against him are disposed of. His arrival ended a sensational trip from Toronto, with the most extraordinary entry of an alien into the United States ever recorded in the busy Detroit immigration office.

THE number of individuals living on farms reached a record peak of 32,509,000 on January 1.

The bureau of agricultural economics, in a new study of farm population, attributed the increase principally to an excess of births over deaths, since more people left farms for cities, in 1933 in a continuation of the farm exodus of the past decade, than went from cities to farms. Persons who moved to farms last year were 951,000, while 1,178,000 moved away.

The farm-bond movement involved 1,544,000 persons in 1932 while those moving away numbered 1,011,000.

The bureau based its estimates on data gathered on 146,817 farms in all parts of the country.

MONTHS of political unrest in Estonia, Baltic nation of 1,121,000 inhabitants, have culminated in a dictatorship, according to advices from Tallinn, the capital.

Gen. Johan Laidoner, commander in chief of the Estonian army, and known as "Estonia's George Washington," has assumed supreme authority with the agreement of the president and parliament.

A COMPLETE shakeup in commercial air lines, using the return of the air mail to private lines as a bait, is being forced by Postmaster General Farley. Thirty officials in private aviation companies must be forced out of office, the whole air mail structure is to be rebuilt, and all the old companies carrying mails must reorganize if they wish to share in federal air mail subsidies in the future.

Both Republican and Democratic members of congress assailed the new order, denouncing the terms as too drastic. Steps for the return of the air mail to private lines were launched immediately by advertising for bids on 75 routes, comprising 17,826 miles. None of the companies which had their previous contracts canceled will be allowed to bid unless they completely reorganize and drop all officials suspected of fraud or collusion in past bidding. The new bids will be for three months only, but may be extended for another six months if necessary. They are intended to provide private flying of the mails pending the settlement of a permanent air mail policy by congress.

A new system for computing rates which are to be paid for carrying the mails was announced. The new rates will be based on the average load carried per mile over the route during the month.

AUSTRIA's new corporate constitution, as published in the official government gazette, gives the President powers similar to those possessed by the late Emperor Franz Josef when he ascended the throne after crushing a republican revolution in 1848.

The president will rule through the constitution, but may change it whenever he thinks an emergency demands. The constitution will be based on the principle that all power emanates from God—in contrast to the present one, which says all power emanates from the people.

But the people, nevertheless, will be given an opportunity to express their opinion at the polls whenever the government thinks this advisable. Popular initiative, however, is barred and the people will not have constitutional rights to elect their own government. All legislation must be initiated by the government, which will be advised but not controlled by four consultative bodies.

These will be the state council of 40 to 50 members appointed by the president; the federal cultural council, consisting of representatives of churches, religious societies and schools; the federal economic council, chosen from business, industrial, agricultural and financial circles, and the provincial council, consisting of governors and finance ministers of the various provinces.

RETENTION of the restrictions imposed on immigration by the present law was recommended by a committee of 48 men and women appointed several months ago by Secretary Perkins to study the problem.

Only minor relaxations were suggested. The committee urged proper provision for reuniting families separated by immigration and providing asylum for refugees from racial and political persecution within the immigration quotas.

Relentless war on aliens who commit crimes and on the racketeer and gangster was recommended. The committee proposed, however, that provision be made so illegal entrants who have proved themselves desirable citizens could legalize their residence. It opposed deportation of aliens brought to this country as children but who have never qualified for citizenship.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—One of the outstanding signs to be noted in the Washington political situation these days is the renewed courage and strength being gathered by the minority. There is no longer any doubt about it. The minority in the government, consisting, first, of dyed-in-the-wool Republicans and, secondly, of old line Democrats who cannot quite follow all items of the New Deal have begun to pull back. For the first time since President Roosevelt came in, there is at least a real "opposition party." As late students of politics and government insist it is a most healthy sign and that it will make for better government in the end.

There has been opposition to a great many of the Roosevelt policies heretofore, but a considerable portion of it has been just silent mumbling and grumbling. Most of them seemed to be afraid of the widely-advertised Roosevelt popularity throughout the country. Mr. Roosevelt is popular, more so, perhaps, than any President we have had in many years, but the support so represented does not appear to run to all of his proposals. It certainly does not apply in favor of all of his subordinates. The "opposition" now appears to have found out these facts and they are concentrating their attack.

I noticed the first signs of it in debate in the house of representatives and in the senate where a desire was, and is, plainly evident to call a halt. New Deal plans are not being swallowed without mastication any more. The most important phase of the trend, however, appears to be in the tendency of the opposition to question continued enactment of every kind of legislation under the guise of emergency needs. Everything up to this point has been pushed through with a loud cry of "emergency!" Some of it, if not most of it, was emergency legislation. But now everybody with a pet scheme is rushing in with it as "emergency" legislation, and it is an overworking of that word that has brought about concentration of the opposition forces, according to the consensus that I have been able to gather. From what I have been able to see, it is a re-enactment of the old story of giving the calf too much rope; it is choking itself to death.

The importance of this trend, perhaps, is best pointed out by the fact that there are dozens of units of the New Deal setup that are predicated wholly on the fact that they were proposed as a part of the general program for recovery. I think none can doubt that the depression has presented an emergency just as great as any arising under a war. But when any war was concluded the emergency was over, then and there, and emergency legislation was neither passed by congress nor sustained in courts. One might possibly conjecture a bit as to where the emergency ended in the fight to get the economic structure back on a prosperous footing, but the new developments certainly show a considerable number of leaders in congress and outside who are unwilling to have the emergency continue forever.

It might be natural to assume that the movement to halt enactment of emergency legislation had developed naturally from the fact that this is an election year for the 435 members of the house and some 35 members of the senate. Political analysts of long service and able judgment assure me, however, that this is not the whole case. They say that existence of a campaign probably has strengthened the backbone of some of the opposition but that the trend more properly represents the divergence of thought in the two schools of students of government. If that be true, as it appears to be, then we may expect to see more and more assaults on the Roosevelt position. Every time he slips with an error of judgment or on bad advice—and he is human and those slips have and will come—the opposition can be counted on to make the most of it.

For example, and as indicating how the lineup is changing, attention need only be called to the opposition that has been encountered in the house on new agricultural legislation. Most of these bills are designed to go further than the program laid down in the agricultural adjustment act, and to use compulsion where the present New Deal philosophy has been based on voluntary co-operation from agriculture, itself. There are half a dozen or more pieces of legislation, the nature of which need not be recounted here, that would give the federal government added control of farmers' affairs. One of them, for instance, would give the secretary of agriculture authority to tell a farmer what to do with the land taken out of production by his agreement to limit acreage of cotton, or wheat, or corn, or tobacco. Most observers here construe that legislation as giving the government absolute domination over the farmer, and I suspect that most farmers are not going to stand for that.

At any rate, this and other proposals are moved forward because there is an "emergency." But I have seen signs of a reaction among the farmers. They are signs that never fail. Representatives from agricultural areas have been getting mail from home and there are many of the house members who now insist it is time to call a halt. Frankly, I hear frequent sharp declarations that the professors in the administration have gone far enough. That means votes against the bills.

Yet the professors are hard workers. They never cease to turn out new plans, and the proposals continue to flow from the White House to the Capitol. Among the newer projects is one that proposes to establish a set of government banks to aid what the promoters describe as the small business. The plan contemplates creation of the regional banks much after the manner of the Federal Reserve banks, with the treasury supplying the initial capital to the extent of $140,000,000.

Here, again, is an emergency measure. It is pointed out, however, that the project is designed for permanent industry. It is, therefore, a move by which the federal government, through a step-child, would be put into the business of banking for industry, and, of course, once that happens, the system will hang on and on. It will hold so much commercial paper, representing loans, that there really will be no time when it can quit and retire from business.

I was talking with a rather well known senator about the plan, the other day, and he voiced his private objections most vigorously. He suggested that there was grave danger of the industrial loan system being strongly influenced by politics and that this condition surely would lead to the making of loans improperly secured, loans that sound bank would dare make.

"I will tell you just how far that thing could go," he added. "It could easily reach the point where, if a business man wants to borrow money, he would have to go into the bank on the arm of an office holder."

And this senator is a Democrat, a member of the senate for years! The incident is related here, however, because it shows the line of cleavage that has developed. It demonstrates, indeed, that no longer is legislation being put through congress just because the administration wants it.

Another piece of legislation that is going to have rough sledding is the Roosevelt tariff adjustment proposal. It says on the face of the bill that it is emergency legislation. Down in the text, however, there is a provision that any of the international tariff agreements reached under provisions of the bill may be renewed and that they will continue in force as long as one nation or the other, parties to the accord, do not give notice of cancellation. The opposition holds this to be a proposal for permanent legislation under the guise of emergency plans.

Some of the few Republicans left in the senate and house have been chiding the Democratic leaders about the tariff proposals of the administration because they would delegate to the President and the tariff commission more authority to revise rates upward or downward than now exists. The Republicans are recalling to their Democratic friends how the Democrats fought against this idea when it was proposed by President Coolidge and by President Hoover, although neither of those Presidents included international agreements with the rate revision idea. Quite a humorous situation has developed as a result.

Officials of the Department of Agriculture admit little about reported criticism they receive. They contend that criticism is to be expected and that, under the AAA laws being molded by Administrator Davis, the organization and rules are to be kept flexible. I understand, however, that there is quite a bit of objection reaching the department about the necessity for farmers allowing government agents to examine their records. The reports I get are to the effect that since most of the farmers have to be gathered by county representatives of the Washington government, many farmers do not like the idea of neighbors knowing all about their affairs.

I have inquired around to find out whether there is any way that such a condition can be corrected and have found no answer, except the statements of the high officials who argue that there is little examination necessary. The condition seems to be one that must be expected if the concerted effort contemplated by the AAA principles of crop control are to be effective.

The situation is one that obviously and naturally develops as the government wades further and further into private business. Most persons recall the circumstances that came with the inauguration of the income tax as a system of raising federal revenues. Business men objected vigorously to granting government agents the right to dig into their books and records, but their fight was to no avail.

EXPEDITION FINDS ANTIOCH HOUSE 1,600 YEARS OLD

Archaeologists have dug up a villa at Antioch that dates from 1,600 years ago. It has colonnades and mosaic pavements, along with domes decorated with colored glass and gold leaf. It was found at Daphne, or rather a suburb of that ancient place in Yafko, a modern suburb of Antioch.

The discovery was made by the Princeton university expedition. There is in the suburb a huge circus or stadium, three times as large as Palmer stadium at Princeton, that seats 55,000, and lead and terra cotta pipes were found in place, along with a huge bath. All were built, it is surmised, in 67-68 B. C. by Quintus Marcius Rex, proconsul of Cilicia.

Antioch goes back to 300 years before Christ, and was named after Antiochus by his son. It was the ancient capital of the Greek kings of Syria, and was located on the Orontes, some twenty miles from the sea. Its port was Seleucia. It is frequently mentioned in the New Testament, and it was there that disciples of our Savior were first called Christians. Syria was first conquered by Pompey and later captured by the Persians and made a heap of ruins. It was restored by the Emperor Justinian in 538. In the seventh century the Saracens took it and held it for 300 years. Now it is a poor town, manufacturing silks, leather and carpets, and producing goat's wool and beeswax.

FRIED CHICKEN BATTLE A DRAW

Breaded or Battered? Answer to Suit Yourself.

By EDITH M. BARBER

I HOPE you are not tired of hearing debates as to when fried chicken is fried chicken. It all started when a chef at a large hotel served a banquet to a group from Indiana and dipped the chicken in batter before frying it! All prepared speeches and everything came to a halt while one of the women guests went right out in the kitchen and showed them how to cook chicken Indiana style.

Since then the battle has raged through the press. Shall chicken be "breaded"—shall it be "battered"—shall it be fried in deep fat or sautéed in a little fat—shall it be fried in butter, bacon fat, lard or other shortening—shall it be fried on top of the stove or in the oven? Each person knows the right answer. It usually is decided by the way chicken was fried at home in the old town. I have had the best chicken I have ever eaten in Indiana, Maryland, in New York—and, of course, in Pennsylvania, in the home town. Once I was sure, and even now I am pretty sure, that the only way to fry chicken is not to fry it at all, but to bake it in a hot oven after it has been split in halves, covered with sliced onion and plenty of butter or bacon fat. And yet, just the other day, I watched a woman fry chicken in deep fat, saw it and tasted it later and admitted that it was a much better color than oven-fried chicken and that it tasted—well—almost as good as my old favorite. So there you are!

I have been collecting chicken recipes for a long time. Whenever I have been visiting—and that usually means being served with chicken some time or other, I have asked for the recipe, when it was especially good. I hardly dare print these recipes under the titles which I have given them according to the places of origin. I am sure that some one from North Carolina is going to rise in wrath and tell me that I have attached that grand old Southern title to the wrong method—and so on, down the list. I have had chicken—a delicious chicken—cooked by the method given in the indicated states.

Chicken gravy is always delicious if properly made. Two good recipes are attached. You may omit the milk and use all water or part water and cream if you like. Unless you are feeling very flush, you will probably dilute the cream called for in the "Maryland" recipe with milk.

A particularly good sauce to serve instead of gravy with chicken is made by cooking one minced onion, one minced carrot and six sliced mushrooms in a quarter of a cup of butter about five minutes. Then stir in one-quarter cup of flour and let brown slightly. Add two cups of boiling water and one-half cup of cream and stir until smooth and thick. One minced pimiento may be added for color. I don't know what to call this recipe because I worked it out myself. It might be "Sun" chicken.

North Carolina Fried Chicken.
Cut two young chickens in pieces for serving. Squeeze a few drops of lemon over each piece and season with salt and pepper. Beat two eggs and add one tablespoon of milk. Dip each piece in this mixture and then roll in flour. Brown the chicken in plenty of fat, then cover the pan and let cook over a slow fire until tender.
Cut into small pieces the chicken

Fails to Get Job After He Gets Wife

Sacramento, Calif.—Not only did a brilliant idea of a seventy-two-year-old CWA worker fail to solve the problem of keeping a job, but it placed him in a worse position than ever.

The man, whose name was not divulged, was discharged when it was found he was single and had no dependents. Two days later he reappeared at the CWA headquarters and demanded his job.

"I've been to Reno," he said. "I got married. I got a dependent." Informed that his action didn't help matters, he became indignant.

"If I'd known that, I wouldn't 'a' got married."

Mountain Lion Called

Coward, Not Jungle King

Hamilton, Mont.—They call him "cougar," puma, panther, painter and mountain lion, but by any name he's a coward.

Such was the disillusioning statement made here by Lloyd Thompson, former member of the United States biological survey, in discussing his experiences.

"The mountain lion has been called 'the king of the American jungle,' but I doubt if he deserves the title," Thompson said.

"Tales have been told of the cougar's ferocity and of the damage he works on live stock. The lion isn't so ferocious and he doesn't kill so many cattle in Montana any more."

Thompson has killed or captured more than 175 mountain lions, so he should know his subject matter.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

"Decked" With Diamonds

OFTEN there is inquiry as to the origin of the expression "decked with diamonds" or "decked in fin," and similar uses of the term.

This is one instance where a term which would appear to be of far-fetched or involved origin is very simple of explanation. For "decked" simply means "covered." It is derived from the very legitimate Danish "dekken," which is perhaps more familiar in German for "to cover."

Using it with "in" or as "decked out in finery" is merely taking a liberty with the term which is accepted by popular usage.

Rules on Working Hours

Prescott, Ariz.—Six mountain lion hunters appointed by the Civil Works administration in Yavapai county to the NRA pledge as to working hours, one of them treed and killed three lions, and had a fourth up a tree, when he looked at his watch and found that his work-week was over. He called off his dogs, shouldered his rifle, and went home.

Dogs in United States Involve $80,000,000

New York.—There are about 12,000,000 dogs in the United States and their value does not exceed $48,000,000. However, when the various food concerns, small animal hospitals, breeding kennels, and other canine industries are considered, the value of the animals rises to $80,000,000, says a pet magazine.

Scituate, Mass.—A bird known as the Dovekie, belonging to the auk family and rarely seen in this part of the world, was found by Mr. and Mrs. John Keterer.

"Talking Book" for the Sightless

A new aid for those handicapped by being deprived of their sight is the "talking book," a combination electric phonograph and radio set entirely contained in a single unit, which when folded may be carried in a suitcase. Developed by the American Foundation for the Blind, the instrument is equipped with various controls that allow for variation in speed of readings and tone of volume of both the radio and talking book reproducer. The Library of Congress will establish talking book libraries throughout the United States for the use of the blind.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Mary Sullivan, head of the women's police bureau, told of what to my mind is just about the meanest racket in New York. Lonely women who have saved a little money are the victims.

A woman pays a $50 registration fee in a matrimonial bureau. When she is introduced to a man she considers desirable, she pays another $50. A third $50 is due when the wedding occurs.

But the wedding never does take place because the man introduced is in cahoots with the owner of the agency and may be wooing three or four clients at the same time. Policewoman Sullivan has taken the matter up with the district attorney and maybe somebody will go to Sing Sing. Or, better yet, Clinton prison at Dannemora, which is known as Siberia because it's up in the Adirondacks so far from New York that visitors are few and where it does prisoners little good to try to escape, because if the guards don't get them, the weather and wild country do.

Speaking of prisons, John and Emanuel Hernandez pop into my mind. They are forty-five-year-old twins, listed by the police as incurable pickpockets. For a long time, the Hernandez boys worked a smooth racket. When one would be arrested, he would provide an alibi that couldn't be broken down because he and his brother looked so much alike, witnesses got all twisted up. But recently the police attained an ambition of years—they pinched the Hernandez brothers at the same time so the alibi racket is out.

Pickpockets make me think of Waxey Gordon, or rather Irving Wexler, which is his correct name. Waxey started out as a pickpocket, worked up to grand larceny and finally became such a big time racketeer that he was known as Public Enemy No. 1—all that within the space of 28 years. Then the government got him on an income tax evasion charge and he was sentenced to pay $80,000 fine and serve ten years. He's in Northeastern penitentiary now, the government having stepped in just as he was putting his affairs in order to retire with his wife and family to sunny California.

Conviction of Waxey Gordon carried with it more than a heavy fine and imprisonment for a term of years. Gordon's oldest son, a boy in whom he took great pride, was hurrying back from military school in the South to help his father. There was an automobile accident and the boy was killed. Waxey got the news in the Tombs—and wept. And he was sent to a prison in the same state in which his son lost his life. Possibly he'll do a lot of thinking behind the bars.

Passing along to something more cheerful, there is Geraldine Farrar. She comes to mind because I saw her going into the Metropolitan opera house the other evening. It was the first glimpse of the singer in years, and the whiteness of her hair was rather startling. Still it is becoming. She was laughing and chatting with a party of friends. At fifty-two, Geraldine Farrar finds life pleasant, indeed.

Miss Farrar retired from opera 12 years ago and from concert two years ago. She spends much of her time at her Ridgefield (Conn.) estate. Her father, the former baseball star, is with her. She has a half dozen or more dogs, plenty of books, and there are trees and flowers. She comes to town often and not infrequently attends the Metropolitan. When the opera was in money difficulties last year, her plea helped raise the $300,000 needed. Summers, she travels abroad.

Dropped into an uptown establishment where a polite young Greek makes my shoes gleam—and thanks me for a nickel tip. He wasn't on hand and the boss explained that he was over in Brooklyn collecting rents. "He owns an apartment house, you know," added his employer with a touch of admiration in his voice.

My Neighbor Says:

ALWAYS keep a roll of glued paper and a ball of twine in your kitchen, to use when tying and labeling bundles.

Toast will toast better and taste better if the slices of bread are placed in the oven a little while before putting into toaster.

To give a bright luster to your kitchen range put a few drops of turpentine in the blacking.

After putting the icing on a cake, set cake in a warm oven (not hot) for a few minutes. It puts a pretty gloss on the icing.

Mud Turtle's Heart Can Withstand Intense Cold

Pittsburgh.—The mud turtles probably smiled broadly as Americans suffered under temperatures of 50 or more below zero.

An experiment with liquid air at the University of Pittsburgh showed the living heart of a turtle able to withstand a temperature of 320 below zero.

Although the heart was immersed in the freezing liquid for ten minutes, it recovered fully within 45 minutes. In a previous experiment two goldfish were placed in the liquid for three seconds. When removed one was thrown against a wall and shattered like a piece of glass. The other was placed in ice water and within a half hour was swimming about normally.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lassing, of Nashville, Tenn. were recent guests of their aunt, Mrs. Joseph A. Huey.

Mrs. Hattie D. Terrell and Miss Josephine Terrell, of Erlanger were Sunday guests of their relative, Mrs. Nan Conrad.

B. L. Norman, Esq., who was quite ill the past week is now much better and able to be out again.

Mrs. Anse Godd is gravely ill at the family residence on Big Bone road.

Melvin Townsend, a former resident, but now of Miamisburg, O., spent the week-end with his daughter, Mrs. Lassing Huey and Mr. Huey.

Misses Dorothy May and Ella Marie Judge are ill with measles at the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Judge.

Mrs. B. L. Norman has as house guests, Mrs. Sallie K. Hicks and Miss Ann Herndon, of Owenton.

Mrs. Gaines Huey and Master Gaines Edwards Huey are in Walton visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Edwards.

Mrs. J. J. Garrison is home from a pleasant visit with friends in Erlanger.

Mrs. Katherine Hicks Rachal, of Walton, spent the week-end with friends in this village.

The New Haven lunch room, in charge of Mrs. Lora Mullins, closed Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Mullins, who have occupied the W. H. Smith cottage are moving in a short time to the N. S. Bristow farm, west of town.

Mrs. Tom Robert Huey was hostess Friday evening for her one table bridge club. The guests who enjoyed this pleasant affair were Miss Sue Katherine Bristow, Mrs. Harvey Hicks and Mrs. Katherine Hicks Rachal.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Brooks, of Cincinnati, spent several days last week with Mrs. Maggie Ross Clark-son.

The serious illness the past week of Miss Sara Madge Dickerson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Dickerson was a matter of grave concern to her host of friends.

It is with much pleasure that we welcome to the community our new physician, Dr. George Coe.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira H. Jones and Master Donald Joseph Jones spent Sunday in Walton with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hartman.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Clements were in Lexington March 13th to attend the horse sale at Tattersall farms. Mrs. Clements at this time purchased a three-year-old mare that carries all the marks of a Kentucky thoroughbred.

Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Jones moved Tuesday and are pleasantly located at the W. H. Baker farm on Big Bone road.

Miss Jane Shelton Bristow spent Easter in Alexandria with V. O. Williams.

Miss Lucy Ella Aylor of Covington is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sheets.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Barlow spent the Easter week-end in Cincinnati with their kindred, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Barrett.

Homemakers in Kentucky who have heavy old chairs can make them into smart reading chairs with a little attention. Refinishing should not be done, however, unless all broken parts are strongly mended. Upholster in a quiet color, with a "boxed" cushion.

Tobacco land should be plowed as early as possible in spring, where it was not broke in the fall. It is a mistake to allow rye or other cover crops to get more than 12 to 15 inches high before plowing. Disking at intervals keeps down grass and weeds.

RABBIT HASHINGS

BY NOEL WALTON

Not much this week. Too much of that early plowin' and what with our pen arm getting weary signing AAA's F. O. B.'s and mostly C. O. D.'s we can't quite get over all we want to say.

And the budding young Winchell down at the exchange, from what we hear has developed a remarkable longing for the third daughter of a certain large farmer around E. Bend. At least he plays quite a good brand of postoffice.

We extend hopes of a speedy recovery to Rev. Roy Johnson, who is seriously ill at his home in Covington.

We must be on the road to recovery—at least the papers say so, but like many others who have an intimate acquaintance with the so-called mysteries of the soil, we are inclined to be cynical toward this new agricultural deal. Where may we ask is all this money that the farmers are to receive coming from? Our idea is that the government is just puttin' its tax hand into the farmers hip pocket, removing the change, taking a cut for expenses and then handin' the rest back to him.

You can't trust yourself with a secret anymore.

Noticed Moss B. and a new gal out at B. and G.'s 'tother nite gettin' close to the church in two ways.

Col. Lute Bradford who engineered a sale in our neighborhood the other day told us one on himself. Coming in one night full of vim, vigor and—ahem, he said to his boy, "son do you want to be an auctioneer when you grow up?" "No papa," the boy replied, "I wanna be a nice man."

The Colonel sure cries a mean sale tho. He was resisted by Kirtley and Kirtley.

What's all this about Jack and Nan?

A new business is being concocted in the rush of the spring graduation at the local hi school—the Asbury Matrimonial Bureau.

Obviously the league, will give its play in the future.

When planning meals, special care should be taken at this time to obtain a balance, with no one group of foods predominating at a meal. That is, carbohydrates, proteins and fats should be in each meal. Iron is essential, and is contained in spinach, kale, chard, liver, egg yolk, lean beef, cabbage string beans, etc.

Sweep the side walls and scrape the floor of the brooder house and burn this material. Scrub the floor and at least 3 feet up the walls with boiling water to which lye has been added. Spray the house and equipment with disinfectant, and move the house to clean ground.

Lesson for April 8

THE CHILD AND THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:1-14;

19:13-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Suffer little children, and forbid them not to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven. Matt. 19:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Blesses the Children.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus and His Smallest Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Entering and Growing in the Kingdom.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Sin of Neglecting and Misguiding Children.

I. The Greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven (vv. 1-4).

1. The disciple's question (v. 1). The prominence given to Peter in connection with the announcement of Christ's purpose to build the church and the payment of tribute with the money in the fish's mouth, provoked jealousy on the part of the other disciples. Seeing that the kingdom was to come to realization despite the tragedy of the cross, the disciples thought it best to have settled their place of rank in the kingdom. Instead of entering into sympathy with Jesus in the dark hour of his passion, they were supremely concerned with the dignities to be conferred.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 2-4). Two vital truths stand out in his reply:

a. Condition of entrance into the kingdom (v. 3). He showed them that the great question which should concern them was as to whether they were really in the kingdom. Their behavior revealed the fact that they needed conversion before they could enter into the kingdom.

b. Those possessing childlike humility are the greatest (v. 4). It is highly important that we understand childlike humility. Doctor Morgan sets forth the following characteristics of childlike humility:

(1) Imperfection. The child is not only the emblem of imperfection but is subconsciously aware of it. Because of this it awaits instruction and correction in order for development.

(2) Simplicity. All the powers of the child's being express themselves freely, readily, and naturally.

(3) Submissiveness. While the child has inherited sin yet it yields to the touch of the skillful hand.

II. Jesus' Identification With His Believing Ones (v. 5-9).

1. Receiving the believer in Christ's name is receiving Christ (v. 5). Through faith in Christ we become God's children, and so completely is our life interwoven with his that he regards treatment of us as treatment of himself.

2. The awful peril of causing a believer to stumble (vv. 6-9). To cause to stumble means to give occasion for a moral fall. This particularly refers to the carnality and selfishness which were expressing themselves in the disciples' contention for pre-eminence. Their behavior was not only an injury but a stumbling block to others. Every Christian should solemnly inquire as to whether his life would help or hinder his fellow believers. Sinning against Christ's own will meet a sure and awful fate.

III. The Heavenly Father's Special Care for Believers (vv. 10-14).

1. They are under angelic guardianship (v. 10). So precious is the believer in God's sight that angelic messengers are provided (Heb. 1:10).

2. The Son of man came especially to save the lost (vv. 11-14). The heavenly Father does not will that anyone should perish. All are the objects of the Father's seeking love.

IV. Jesus Receiving Little Children (Matt. 19:13-15).

The setting of this text should be most carefully noted. Jesus had been speaking of the sanctity of marriage which is the bulwark of the home. Into the sacred enclosure of the home comes childhood to complete and ennoble it.

1. Children brought to Jesus (v. 13). Most likely they were brought by their parents. Parents naturally desire the blessing of the Lord for their children. Many parents who are careless as to themselves, desire to bring their children into touch with Jesus Christ.

2. Rebuked by the disciples (v. 13). They regarded children as too insignificant to engage the Lord's attention.

3. The disciples rebuked by Christ (v. 14). These words uttered by the Lord have placed a peculiar dignity upon children.

4. Christ laid his hands upon the children (v. 15). This action no doubt indicated his pronouncement of blessing upon them and his tenderness for them.

Our Duty to Make Enemies

To incur enmity is a necessary part of the life of triumph in Christ. Christians carry to men a message of death as well as of life; and men know it. If we speak and live the whole counsel of God we shall not sin by making friends among those who ought to be our enemies.

Knows What's Best

God is too wise not to know all about us, and what is really best for us to be, and to have.

Left-Overs Can Provide Many Tempting Dishes

In the larder or refrigerator of practically every home there will be found left-over vegetables after dinner, and frequently after lunch or a hearty supper. The housewife who can gauge appetites to avoid this is remarkable, or she is so close a caterer that some one goes without the extra serving that would be enjoyed. What to do with these odds and ends of vegetables is a problem, too often solved by a salad. It is well to know of many other dishes, some hot, some cold, which can use the bits. One excellent dish is scrambled vegetables.

To each cupful of diced vegetables of assorted kinds, use one egg. Season the cooked vegetables. Beat the eggs enough to have yolks and whites well mixed. Pour into a buttered frying pan or omelet pan, and when the eggs begin to cook, stir in the diced vegetables. Continue cooking until the eggs are done. Remove to a platter and garnish with parsley. A trim of radish roses and olives dresses up the dish attractively.

Good vegetables to combine are string beans, celery and cauliflower. By the way, don't forget to cook some of the delicate green stalks of the cauliflower with the flowers, unless you boil the head whole. Put the green stalk pieces cut 1 inch long, into the boiling salted water before the flowers, as the stalks require a little longer cooking to make them tender. Carrots, corn and sweet pepper, make another fine combination. But the housewife will have to use what she has, so these are but suggestions.

Thousands have Ended their Bowel Worries

by taking this advice!

Can constipation safely be relieved? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say the many thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not likely to cure your constipation with salts, pills, tablets or any of the habit-forming cathartics. But you can safely relieve this condition by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

THE LIQUID TEST:

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Simple, isn't it? And it works! The right liquid laxative brings thorough bowel action without using force. An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, and perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna, a natural laxative; the dose can be measured, and the action thus regulated to suit your individual need.

If there are children in your household, don't give them any fad form of laxative, but use a healthful, helpful preparation like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Its very taste will tell you it is wholesome, and agreeable to the stomach. Delightful taste, and delightful action; there is no discomfort at the time, or after. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, all ready to take.

A Frank Statement Concerning Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

We believe the use of pills and tablets containing mineral drugs is rapidly giving way to gentle regulation of the bowels with a liquid laxative.

We believe Dr. Caldwell's original prescription of fresh herbs, pure pepsin, and senna is the ideal family laxative.

And we know it is a safe preparation for children and expectant mothers because it does not cause bowel strain or irritate the kidneys.

OUTLAWS of EDEN

... By Peter B. Kyne ...

WNU Service.

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christened Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. He proposes to play Nate against Lorry, assuming that they are carrying on the old feud, in this way getting control of the key lands necessary to the project. Nate, however, has intention of carrying on the feud. He tells Lorry that he and Owen Kershaw, Lorry's brother, met in France just before Owen was killed. They became buddies, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do. Babson, determined to secure Lorry's lake-site and Nate's dam-site makes legal application for the allocation of flood waters to the Forlorn Valley irrigation district, which he organizes.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

Babson's face expressed a hypocritical concern. "That's much too bad, Henry," he replied. "I'm sorry about Rance. He was as hard as steel, but honest. You never had to guess where Rance Kershaw stood on any proposition." Secretly he could have given three long, raucous cheers. "I suppose the girl will have to liquidate now," he continued after a moment's thought. "She can't carry on with that business alone, and the estate is badly embarrassed financially. I'll be hanged if I see, Henry, how this bank is going to carry the Kershaw estate along to take a chance on getting its money back."

"So I thought," Rookby answered. "By the way, Nate Tichenor's come back to Eden Valley."

Babson started as if bee-stung. "Rance Kershaw owed the Bar H a lot of money on chattel mortgage for cattle he bought in 1920. Henry, he must owe the Bar H three or four years' rent."

"Undoubtedly," Mr. Rookby opined. "Nate Tichenor's let that steer have all the rope he wanted; now that the estate is in so deep it can't climb out, he's come back to give the Kershaw clan the final clout that will finish it."

"I wouldn't be so sure about that, Mr. Babson," And Rookby went on to describe Rance Kershaw's death in front of the gate leading to the Bar H headquarters; the summoning by Lorry Kershaw of Nate Tichenor in that hour of stress; the kind and neighborly action of Tichenor thereafter; the arrival of Rube Tenney to take over the job of riding boss on the Circle K; the apparent friendliness between Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw, as faithfully reported by Miss Lizzie Bachman to all in Valley Center who would listen to her eager recital.

"Lizzie was only up there with Lorry Kershaw three days and Nate Tichenor gave her fifty dollars for it," Rookby went on. "What's more, he paid her in advance. And he gave Bud Seamon and Jake Bacheller ten dollars each for digging Rance's grave."

"Liberal, ain't he?" Babson commented. "Henry, this is the most h—l cracking piece of news that's come out of Eden Valley since Taylor Hensley and Rance Kershaw had their rackus. Just the same, I'm banking Nate Tichenor's no softy in business matters; he's half Hensley and a grouch don't die easy in that breed. The Hensleys always did want all of Eden Valley, and now that Nate Tichenor sees a bully chance to get it cheap, together with the Kershaw cattle, he'll grab it. Has Lorry Kershaw been in here to see me since her father died?"

"In yesterday. Told her you'd be back last night so maybe she'll call today."

"How is she? Pretty well busted up?"

"Pert as they make 'em."

"I'm not surprised. Nothing weak about the Kershaws. Well, Henry, we shall see that which we shall see."

Two days later Lorry Kershaw came into the bank. Babson led her at once into his private office (usually he occupied a desk in a fenced-off corner of the banking room) and, with many protestations of sympathy for the loss of her father and regret that his absence from Valley Center had militated against his attendance at the funeral, begged her to be seated and inform him in what manner he could be of service to her. To his amazement the girl looked him over coldly.

"You should be sorry for father's death," she shot at him. "You killed him."

"If my dear Lorry, how can you say such a thing?"

"You wrote him a letter and he knew you were going to close in on him. You knew he had a weak heart—that—shocks were bad for him—yet you shocked him. You wanted to. You bought up our mortgage and called it our notes. You're a two-gun man, aren't you?"

"My dear girl, permit me to explain. Your father's notes had been renewed four times; they were overdue and the interest was in default, and the superintendent of state banks had jumped me about them more than once. I forgot your father should be spared shocks. The law forces us to protect the money of our depositors."

"Granted. But you bought our mortgage. Why?"

"For an investment and to save it from falling into the hands of your enemy?"

"Nate Tichenor." This was fast thinking and Babson felt a thrill of pride in his cleverness.

Her dark flashing eyes bored into his soul. "I think you're a contemptible liar."

He paled with anger, but controlled himself. "You will, of course, understand why I do not argue with you, my dear. You are under a strain—overwrought. Now I will repeat a query I made you when you first entered this room. In what manner can I be of service to the daughter of my old friend and revered customer, Ranceford Kershaw?"

"You Killed Him."

"You say you bought the mortgage as an investment. If I pay up the overdue interest, will you renew it for five years at the same rate of interest?"

"The present mortgage is at 6 per cent. It was made when money wasn't quite so tight as at present. I'm sorry, but a renewal will cost you 8 per cent. I'm getting that from others."

"Will you renew the unsecured notes and cut the interest on them to 8 per cent?"

"Perhaps. I'll have to have a statement of the financial condition of your father's estate first."

"The estate is land poor and cow poor and it hasn't any money. It's practically insolvent."

He threw up his hands and smiled wearily. "How like a woman to ask such favors in the face of such a statement," he sighed, then brightened suddenly. "However, we might strike a happy compromise. I was interested to note recently that your father made you a deed of gift to four thousand acres in the lower part of Eden Valley."

She nodded.

"I would be glad to entertain a proposition to buy that land from you, Miss Lorry. As agricultural land it is worthless, as grazing land it is very poor, but as a hunting and fishing preserve it is excellent. I know a man who would be willing to pay you a fair price for that land."

"How much?"

"Well, I'm pretty certain I can unload it on him at ten dollars an acre."

Investigating Effect That Beaver Dams Have on Streams Where the Trout Lives

That ingenious little engineer, the beaver, is due for a spanking at the hands of scientists who have been given the job of determining what effect, if any, its dam building operations have on trout fishing.

Preliminary examinations by the scientists tend toward condemnation of beavers' presence on trout streams if good fishing is to be maintained, and the acceptance of this only means that a hundred thousand fishermen will be clamoring for beaver hides, says a writer in the Detroit News.

So far the investigators have found that a trout won't jump over a beaver dam that obstructs its free passage to the headwaters for spawning purposes, but that it will drop over going down stream. So this doesn't let the female trout get back to its spawning beds once it passes a dam, and that is bad for the natural reproduction of trout. It has been discovered also that the backwaters of a beaver dam create good fishing for two or three I'll expect you to sell to me for nine, of course. I've got to have a profit."

"And if I agree to sell to you at that price, what?"

"That will enable you take up your father's unsecured notes and rehabilitate your credit at this bank. In return I'll renew your mortgage for three years."

"At 6 per cent?" she insisted.

"Can't possibly," he defended.

"Is that your final decision, Mr. Babson?"

"Absolutely. I dislike to appear harsh, but business is business and I permit sentiment to—"

"Please spare me your stereotyped and hypocritical maunderings, the girl interrupted angrily. "I'm not a fool and I see through you as if you were a window. Make out a satisfaction on of mortgage, sign it before a notary public and give it to me. In return I will give you a bank cashier's check for the exact amount due. Hand me those unsecured notes marked 'Paid,' and you shall have another bank cashier's check for the amount of them with interest. There are the checks," and she tossed them on the table before him.

He stared at them in frank amazement. "Why, where did you get all that money?" he demanded.

"That's none of your business," sir. You called upon my father to put up in five days or stand still. He's dead, but I'm obeying orders. Your bluff's called. Nobody has ever run a blazer on the Kershaw clan and got away with it. And you were trying to run a blazer, you know. Tried to scare me into selling you that land of mine."

He was desolated. "Do you mean to tell me you refuse the fine offer I have just made you?"

"I do. I'd rather give the land away than sell it to you."

He fled from her stormy presence and in about fifteen minutes, very Rookby pussy-footed in and he led her the canceled evidence of his father's indebtedness.

Mr. Rookby's eyes were round with wonder and resentment as he watched her climb into her battered old car at the curb and roll out Valley Center boulevard in the direction of Gold Run.

He knew she was going to the county seat to record the satisfaction of the mortgage.

"By George," he said to Babson, sycophantically, "that's certainly one salty dame, eh, chief?"

"She's a devil, Henry—a she devil on wheels. She's all the wild Kershaws rolled into one—and I'm a star-spangled jackass without brains enough to pound sand in a hole."

At three o'clock he went home, suffering from a violent headache, and solely to futile rage. But he was at all in danger of a nervous collapse now, for the fight was in the open, at last and he drew a subtle comfort from that knowledge. He knew now where Lorry Kershaw had gotten all that money. Undoubtedly she had sold her land to that mysterious pov company. Well, he was routed in a lower end of the Pan, but he would go to the attack again at the upper end of the Handle. And, despite the fact that his alternative proposition would save the district the cost of erecting a huge impounding dam, Babson would gladly have abandoned for it carried risks and almost the certainty of expensive lawsuits while it might so delay surface irrigation in Forlorn Valley as to ruin him and the Bank of Valley Center, even though at the last the valley should win the fight.

CHAPTER VII

Nate Tichenor was at the Circle K headquarters when Lorry Kershaw came in that night from her trip to Gold Run.

"Welcome, stranger," she greeted him, as she drove up. "Come out and help me admire my new car."

He came and looked the new car over soberly. "Aren't you a little bit reckless and improvident for a girl in your financial fix?" he demanded gravely.

"You talk like Silas Babson," she retorted gaily.

"Well, I'm not objecting, Lorry, but I greatly fear this new car will be regarded by Babson as an extravagance; it's bound to hurt your credit."

"Nate, Silas Babson can take a jump into Eden Valley creek for all I care. I'm washed up with him and his bank."

"No!" he cried simulating amazement. "How come?"

"I've sold my four thousand acres below the main ranch of the Bar H for four hundred thousand dollars—cash! And I've cleaned up Babson and his little red brick bank and have a hundred thousand dollars working capital left."

"Then God's in his heaven and all's well with the world. But why did you sell your land and keep the impending deal a secret from me? Somebody wants to put a dam in the gorge and they need your land for the reservoir. You know very well the Bar H owns the dam site; if we'd worked together we could both have sold, but now that they have your land they have a terrific advantage over me."

"But you're a low-down rascal, Nate Tichenor, to suspect I'd leave you holding the sack. I told that man I wouldn't sell for a million dollars unless they secured your dam site first."

"I suspected the sort of girl you are, Lorry, but I wanted to make certain. Forgive my little deceit. I took the liberty of deciding to sell your land and naming the price to the Mountain Valley Power company. I would never have sold my dam site to that corporation until assured there would be no argument with you over the price of your land. Did Babson try to trade you out of your land today?"

She related to him in detail her interview with the banker.

"I should say you gave Babson a poke under the heart. How did he assimilate it?"

"As if his world was crashing about him. Perhaps I should not have attacked him with such ferocity, but I have a temper, Nate, and when a lying, scheming, hypocritical, cold-hearted snake like Silas Babson crosses my trail I like to shoot his head off."

Nate smiled approvingly. He liked the fire in her. Here was no wishy-washy, clinging vine of a girl, dependent, selfish, and sex-conscious. A man's woman with a code of conduct like unto that of a very gallant gentleman.

She laughed, walking round her new car and admiring it.

"A carload of smooth two-year-old steers, averaging ten hundred and fifty pounds, sold for seven cents in the Union stock yards in Los Angeles today," he announced. "Things are certainly looking up for old Rance Kershaw's girl."

She turned on him with shining eyes. "How did you get the news so quickly?"

"My valet has a portable radio."

"Your valet?"

"My valet."

"Oh, Nate, I'm ashamed of you. A great, big, strong man like you, with all your heads and legs and arms and teeth! A valet! I know you had a chauffeur, which is bad enough, but you've kept the valet in hiding." Then she was suddenly tender. "Ah, Nate, you're a dear. I had thought Eden Valley would be unbearably lonely when dad left me, but it isn't."

"I had thought the same thing with respect to myself. It wasn't my plan to remain here more than a week—"

"But you're not going away so soon?"

"Why not? I've completed my business—all except renewing the lease on the Bar H to the Kershaw estate, its heirs and assigns. I suppose you desire to renew the lease?"

"Just because you know I have a hundred thousand dollars on hand you want thirty thousand of it." With this light banter she strove to hide the shock his announcement had given her. "Yes, I'll want a renewal. When are you leaving, Nate?"

"Tomorrow morning. Will you drive this shiny new car over to Gold Run tomorrow, lunch with me there and see me off on my journey?"

She shook her raven head. "No, No, I think not. Partings are little deaths—and we start our calf-branding tomorrow. There are only two men on the payroll who can rope a calf by the hind legs and drag him to the fire. The others are Indians—neck-ropers; so I have to take a hand at the branding done quickly."

His face brightened. "If you'll give me a horse and a rita I'll stay over a few days and help you. It's so long since I've worked in a branding corral—and I ought to keep my hand in."

They sat down on the running board of Lorry's new car and chatted until Mrs. Tenney called them in to dinner, served them and discreetly retired to the kitchen. For a long time Lorry was silent, then, with the impetuosity of her nature, suddenly she returned to her subject nearest her heart.

All Meteors Cold When They Reach the Earth

Meteor authorities, due no doubt to the readiness of ordinary folk to believe practically anything of stones from the sky, are among the most skeptical people on earth. Recently we reported their disbelief in claims about near-collisions between meteors and airplanes. Now it must be revealed that they also put no credence in yarns about houses, haystacks or other objects being set afire by them.

Dr. Charles C. Wyllie of the University of Iowa, writing in Popular Astronomy, says there has never been an authenticated instance of a meteor setting fire to anything. Moreover, the popular idea that meteors are incandescent when they strike the earth is likewise an error. Their surfaces may reach incandescence for a few seconds high up in the atmosphere, but they are soon slowed down so much that passage through the air cools rather than heats them. They stop glowing at an altitude of several miles, and are cold when they strike.—Literary Digest.

INDIAN MOUNDS THEORY

Belief that Indian camp fires are responsible for the puzzling mounds of hardened gypsum sand in the White Sands National monument, New Mexico, has been advanced by the Department of the Interior.

According to word received at the National Park service, the theory has been suggested that when the Indians camped and built their fires, the white gypsum sand was cemented. As the wind blew the soft sand from around these fire sites, the cemented sand remained. Other Indians following along the trail built their fires on the same elevations, gradually building up these formations.

Although archeologists have neither confirmed nor disproved this theory, ashes, broken pottery, arrowheads and other signs of Indian occupancy found around these mounds lend credence to the supposition.

"Two things I wanted—"

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood."

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, plump skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin."

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores...in two convenient sizes...the larger is more economical.

THE NEW FORD TRUCK

The first of the new Ford trucks with an 80 horse power engine and full-floating rear axle to be delivered in this community was received today by Ben Guystover, Erlanger. Local Ford dealer made the delivery.

The new 1934 Ford V-8 truck, just recently made available, incorporates a number of important improvements in design, operating efficiency and economy, according to C. W. Myers.

The 80 horse power V-8 truck engine is more economical in operation and delivers a greater power output per gallon of fuel than any other Ford truck engine every built," he said.

"And in addition to the advantage of a full-floating rear axle, increased strength has been built into the entire rear end design. In this new truck, the axle housings now carry the entire load, as well as all stresses and side thrusts, leaving the axle shafts to perform their intended function of driving the wheels.

"Body types to meet the widest variety of commercial hauling requirements are available. The range runs from the light pickup on the commercial chassis thru to the heavy duty express and dump trucks."

WHEAT REDUCTION SIGN-UP REOPENED

The College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, announces that wheat farmers again have an opportunity to sign reduction contracts and receive benefit payments.

Farmers who now sign contracts will receive the final benefit payment for the 1933 wheat crop and the 1934 and 1935 adjustment benefits.

Farmers who desire to sign reduction contract, but who have sowed more than their allotment of wheat, will be required to reduce their acreage by 15 percent before the summer inspection.

Farmers who planted wheat in 1932 for the first time are eligible to sign adjustment agreements in the reopened wheat program, according to a ruling of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This ruling allows these producers to use their 1932 acreage as a base for an agreement, and entitles them to full adjustment payments for all three years of the wheat plan, but bases these payments on an allotment approximately one-fifth as large as they would receive if they had planted wheat in all three of the base years.

Kentucky farmers who signed wheat contracts last fall have received a total of $164,212 in benefit payments, representing 20 cents a bushel on their 1933 allotment. A second payment of 8 cents a bushel, less administrative costs, is due when farmers have presented proof of compliance with reduction requirements.

DAIRY REDUCTION PROGRAM IS NEXT

The College of Agriculture at Lexington has been notified that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's dairy reduction program will be placed before farmers and dairy men beginning with a series of regional conferences in April.

The program, as now planned, provides for a reduction of 10 to 20 percent from the production in 1932 and 1933.

Producers who sign contracts will receive benefit payments at the rate of 40 cents a pound on the amount of butterfat reduced or $1.50 per 100 pounds on the fluid milk reduced.

Money to make benefit payments will be raised from a processing tax starting at 1 cent a pound on butterfat and increasing to 5 cents a pound.

Other features of the dairy adjustment program include the distribution of surplus milk to underfed children, the transfer of cows from surplus producing areas to needy families, and the elimination of diseased cows from herds.

The purpose of the program is to balance production with consumption and increase and stabilize prices to farmers.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Ten community organizations have been formed in Knox county to carry on the live-at-home program. These groups will promote the raising of more gardens and truck crops, better producing poultry and milk cows, increased 4-H club work, more canning and storage.

Several Warren county poultrymen had flocks able to be good layers, but heavily infested with lice. After applying "Black Leaf 40," sodium fluoride, and blue ointment the birds improved, and are now laying successfully.

Harlan county farmers have ordered 5,430 pounds of korea, lespedeza seed, to be sown this spring. J. H. Galloway is planning to sow 1,100 pounds of seed on 75 acres of land, some of which will be used as a combination pasture and golf course.

A. C. Burnette, agent in charge of extension work among Negroes, reports that in Jessamine county 13 junior clubs have been organized with a total membership of 77. This includes sewing, canning, garden and pig clubs.

Bell county potato growers are calling for certified seed for the first time, and one dealer is selling only that kind. Several growers are buying in groups to lower costs, and a large number plan to plant from one to five acres.

Forty-five Kenton county farmers attended the annual school for fruit growers. Spray practices for disease and insect control on fruit trees, strawberries, raspberries, etc., were discussed, and a pruning demonstration was held.

In many homes, flowers are used a great deal during the Easter season. To have good arrangement, let one kind of flower and one color predominate, and let the remainder add to the dominant. Small flowers that grow in grasses may be used in larger quantities than large individual flowers.

THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER

"THE CRO S ROADS NEWSPAPER"

VOLUME 59

Established 1875

BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY THURSDAY, APRIL 12, 1934

NUMBER 12

FOUR-H TOURS

PLANNED DURING SUMMER MONTHS—MEMBERS TO KEEP RECORD BOOKS AND CARRY ONE OR MORE PROJECTS.

Boone county 4-H clubs are planning project tours to study the work of members during the summer. Each 4-H member carries one or more agricultural or home economics projects and keeps a complete business record on his or her project. Both projects and record books will be inspected on the tour.

The dates of the tours in six of the clubs have been set as follows:

New Haven Boosters, Wednesday June 20th.

Grant "True Blues," Thursday, June 21st.

Hamilton, "Silver Leaders," Wednesday, June 27th.

Waltonians, Tuesday, July 10th.

Burlington "Blue Ribbons," Wednesday, July 11th.

Verona "Willing Workers," Tuesday, July 17th.

The other community clubs are expected to set dates for their tours in the near future.

MISS EMMA WILSON

Miss Emma Wilson, of Constance, Ky., passed away at the home of her sister, Mrs. Minnie Klassner, Friday, March 30, following a lingering illness.

She was 72 years old and had resided at the home of her sister for over 30 years.

She is survived by four sisters, several nieces and nephews and a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted at the home Tuesday afternoon, April 3rd, with burial in the family burying grounds.

Daniel Bullock, of Hebron had charge of funeral arrangements.

MRS. FANNIE TANNER

Mrs. Fannie Tanner, aged 88 years, passed away Friday night at her home in Florence, of complications due to senility.

Funeral services were held at the Hopeful Lutheran church, of which she had long been a member, Monday at 2 o'clock in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends, after which she was laid to rest in the nearby cemetery by the side of her husband B. C. Tanner.

Rev. H. M. Hutter, the pastor, conducted the services and six of her grandsons, Shelly, Louallen, Stanley, Guy, Harold and Robert Aylor acted as pallbearers.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. L. P. Aylor, of Florence, Ky., one son, Ben Tanner, of Savannah, Ga., seven grandsons and one granddaughter and 16 great grandchildren, besides many other relatives and friends.

Funeral Director Philip Tallafiero had charge of the funeral arrangements.

ALTHEA CLASS

The Althea class of the Florence Baptist church met at the home of Mrs. J. D. Lucas, April 3. Following the business session and devotion, Mrs. Lucas entertained in her usual efficient manner, and a very enjoyable evening was spent by all. The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Helen Graff's May 1st.

Sara Campbell, Pub. Chmn.

KENTUCKY HOMEMAKERS

TO HEAR LONDON WOMAN Mrs. Robert Mosley, American representative of the international organization for rural women at London, will be the guest speaker at a series of district conferences of members of homemakers' clubs in Kentucky April 22-28.

Other speakers will include Mrs. W. M. Oliver, Paducah, president of the Kentucky Federation of Homemakers Clubs, and Mrs. P. K. Holmes, assistant dean of women at the University of Kentucky.

Meetings will be held as follows: Mayfield, April 23; Madisonville, April 24; Bowling Green, April 25; Lexington, April 26, and Pineville, April 28.

Robert L. Graves, Burlington, son of Edgar S. Graves, is a sophomore this year at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. He is working on a four year course that leads to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Agriculture. Mr. Graves was prominent in 4-H club work; in 1928 he was state corn champion, and he also was one of the four Kentucky representatives to the national club camp.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Relating to the Corn-Hog Production Adjustment Program and Contract

The essential features of the plan for adjusting 1934 production of corn and hogs to available outlets which is offered to producers by the United States Department of Agriculture through the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is explained in other publications of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Producers have received copies of a brief circular entitled "What the Adjustment Program Offers Producers," and "Directions for Filling in the Preliminary Work Sheet Statement of Supporting Evidence." Community Committeemen and other workers who will conduct the corn-hog sign-up campaign have been furnished with complete directions for filling in the contract, and in nearly all cases producers will have the assistance of one of these workers when the time comes for them to fill in their contracts.

Many questions relating to the plan which may arise are answered in this paper. The answers do not in any way alter the terms or conditions of the Corn-Hog Reduction Contract or Administrative Rulings.

Putting the Plan Into Operation
Question 1.—Who is to put the corn-hog reduction plan into operation?

Answer.—Farmers themselves through local County Corn-Hog Control Associations under the supervision of the Corn-Hog Section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Question 2.—What is the County Corn-Hog Control Association?

Answer.—It is a county organization made up of corn-hog producers for the purpose of local administrations of the corn-hog plan.

Question 3.—How does a producer or landlord become a member?

Answer.—By signing a corn-hog reduction contract.

Question 4.—How is the County Corn-Hog Control Association organized?

Answer.—It is organized by contract signers who adopt uniform Articles of Association approved by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Question 5.—Are there any dues?

Answer.—No.

SCUDDER-BREEZE

Miss Esther Scudder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Scudder, of Warsaw, and Mr. Robert Breeze, son of Mrs. R. G. Breeze, of Covington, were united in marriage, Saturday, April 7th at 4 o'clock by Rev. Rively at Carrollton, Ky.

The only attendants were the groom's niece, Miss Frances Stevens, Verona and James Wm. Taylor, of Warsaw.

The bride and groom motored to Louisville for a short honeymoon. They will make their home at 2773 Madison Ave., Covington.

We wish this young couple many years of happiness.

The Burlington Blue Ribbon 4-H club met at the Burlington school Friday, April 5. Meeting was led by President, L. W. Voshell. Club captains gave reports of the different projects. The county agent, Mr. Forkner was there and gave a talk on how to use project circulars and record books.

D. I. Rouse, Pub. Chmn.

Mrs. Joe Berkshire, Mrs. Charles Hennessy, Mrs. Clint Blankenknecker, Mrs. M. L. Martin and Mrs. Virginia Goodridge spent Friday evening in Cincinnati at the flower show.

BURLINGTON SCHOOL NOTES

A few of the high school boys got ambitious this week and transformed the gymnasium into a first class tennis court. We are hoping to have some very interesting and enjoyable games before the school season closes.

Another phase of high school athletics was also begun this week when the "Tomcats" met to elect their 1934 captain. They elected Russell Ryle. The boys have been "warming up" for the past few weeks and look as if they might live up to the standard set by the B. H. S. baseball teams. Any high school team who wishes to compete with them will please notify them.

We are very sorry to hear that Margaret Walton, who had just returned to school, after having been absent for sometime with measles, is suffering from a relapse.

RED CROSS REPORT OF NURSING SERVICE FOR MARCH, 1934

General inspection of the children of the grades of the New Haven school was completed the first of the month and the scales were then moved to the Burlington school, where the weighing, measuring and inspection program has been completed in the grade rooms. Many minor defects have been found among the two hundred and forty-five children inspected, and the attention of children and parents called to these and their importance of their correction before they lead to serious physical conditions, and ere they cause irreparable damage to the child has been explained as forcibly as I possibly could do.

During almost nine years I have been carrying on this school health program and it has brought me much of satisfaction to see the gradual but increasing interest on the part of the children in our schools in matters regarding health there is a wholesome interest manifested now of which the teachers as well as I take cognizance.

Truly the ideal way to bring a better state is to "grow in stature and wisdom" and no place is the value of greater permanency than in the process of Health Education learning what to do in order to become strong men and women and why we do it, makes for intelligent behavior.

Thirteen children were given special attention by me, that is I personally obtained examinations, special treatment or operations for them as the cause needed.

Fifteen parents came to me with their problems pertaining to the health of their child, seeking advice and assistance in their behalf.

I attended a two day Red Cross Institute in Lexington, Ky., the first of March. This was especially of interest to chapter officials and I much regretted that I alone had to be Boone county representative, for the possibilities of service for the welfare and promotion of human betterment offered through the channels of a local Red Cross Chapter are extensive in many ways, and I wished greatly that many of our citizens could have been present at this institute, where representatives of the National Red Cross from Washington were assembled with representatives from some forty Kentucky counties, planning through the chapters of these county programs of service of varied activities to meet the social needs of varying localities.

—Eunie B. Willis, Red Cross P.H.

LADIES AID MEET

The Ladies Aid Society of the Florence Christian church met at the church Wednesday, April 4th for an all-day meeting. Quilting, business meeting and election of officers were the order of the day. The program was as follows:

Meeting called to order by the President, Mrs. Thomas McHenry. Song "Count Your Blessings" by society.

Scripture Lesson read 1st James, 1st Chapter—Mrs. Frank Bowers. Prayer—Mrs. Clint Blankenknecker.

Roll Call—Mrs. Earl Wilson. Secretary Report—Mrs. Earl Wilson.

Treasure Report—Mrs. Will Bradford.

Mrs. Clint Blankenknecker acting as chairman then took charge in her most pleasing and charming manner of the election of officers. All the officers of the past year, who have served so efficiently and graciously were reelected for the coming year except Mrs. Coby, who was vice president and having moved away, her place being filled by Mrs. Clint Blankenknecker. The officers elected unanimously for the coming year were as follows:

President—Mrs. Thomas McHenry.

Vice President—Mrs. Clint Blankenknecker.

Secretary—Mrs. Earl Wilson.

Treasure—Mrs. Will Bradford.

Mrs. Charles B. Hennessy was then appointed publicity chairman.

The society then adopted the following motto for the coming year:

Is it kind?

Is it necessary?

Is it true?

It also was decided to have the annual strawberry and ice cream social at the church in the early part of June, the date to be announced later.

In the most eloquent and beautiful words possible, Mrs. Clint Blankenknecker gave praise and expressed the appreciation of having Mrs. McHenry for President, for the past year and expressed joy of having her for President again this year. Mrs. Blankenknecker, in behalf of the society presented Mrs. McHenry with a lovely gift for the loyalty, faithfulness and wonderful work done the past year. Mrs. McHenry in return accepted the gift in a most gracious manner and expressed her appreciation and thanks for it.

The business meeting was adjourned and quilting was the order until late in the afternoon, when all departed feeling it had been a most joyous and prosperous meeting.

ANNUAL GRADE AND HIGH SCHOOL DECLAMATION CONTEST TO BE HELD

The annual grade and high school declamation contest will be held at the Florence high school auditorium Friday, April 13th. Music will be furnished by the school orchestra. Competent judges for the contest have been secured from the Shuster-Martin school.

This contest was scheduled for March 30th, but owing to illness was postponed.

Medals will be awarded winners in each division. Admission 10 and 15 cents.

PLAY HUGE SUCCESS

The play "The Man in The Green Shirt" staged by the P. T. A. of the Burlington high school Saturday night proved to be very successful in every phase. All parts were well acted and much credit is due to each one taking part in this performance.

FEEDING LESS GRAIN LOWERS DAIRY COSTS

How J. C. Peterson, a Marion county dairy farmer, reduced his feed costs and eliminated the purchase of large amounts of mill feeds is told by the dairy department of the College of Agriculture. Feed per cow in his herd last year averaged 730 pounds of grain, 2,400 pounds of alfalfa hay and 1,650 pounds of silage. Only 10 pounds of the grain was mill feed, the rest being crushed corn. The herd averaged 6,191 pounds of milk and 308 pounds of butterfat per cow.

Two years previously, Mr. Peterson fed an average of 1,500 lbs. of grain, 1,200 pounds of alfalfa hay and 3,200 pounds of silage per cow. The production then was 6,082 pounds of milk and 319 lbs. of butterfat per cow.

A comparison is made of four cows which were in the herd in both years. Many of the other cows were sold and heifers added. These four cows averaged 346 lbs. of butterfat in 1931 at an average age of slightly less than four years. On this basis, their mature records should average 372 pounds of butterfat; actually they averaged 344 pounds in 1933.

The highest producing cow of the four produced 434 pounds of butterfat at six years of age in 1933, as compared to 440 pounds in 1931. She received 960 pounds of crushed corn in 1933, as compared to 1,862 pounds of grain in 1931. Included in the 1,862 pounds of feed were 862 pounds of cottonseed and bran.

C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, was a business caller here Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Siekman had as guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. E. Aylor and Miss Velma Phillips.

PLAN PLANTINGS

ABOUT THE HOME Spring is a good time to make plantings around the home. Plan before planting, suggests N. R. Elliott, extension landscape specialist for the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

The plan need not be elaborate; a sketch or outline will do.

Study the plants to be grown. How tall will they grow? How much space will they require? Do they need shade or sunshine? What are their soil requirements? When do they bloom and what is the color?

A comparatively few plants carefully selected and correctly located will usually produce the desired effects.

One fault of planting without a plan is a scattered, spotted effect. This is found where the home owner always wants more plants, when in reality he does not have a place for them.

Plantings around the home should serve a definite purpose rather than be a collection of plants.

Here are some fundamentals to keep in mind in planting: Pack good rich soil around the roots and water well before the hole is entirely filled with dirt.

Place old leaves, straw or strawy manure on top of the ground after the plant has been set.

Make the ground level or slightly lower around the plant, so water will drain toward it rather than away from it.

Wrap trees with newspaper or burlap tied with string from ground to lower branches.

Cut 6 to 12 inches off end of branches, but do not cut them back to the trunk.

Supply plenty of water during the first growing season.

REGULAR SESSION

OF CIRCUIT COURT PROVES TO BE SUCCESSFUL IN DISPOSING CASES—WILLIAM DUBLE TO BE TRIED THURSDAY.

Circuit court convened here last Monday with several civil and few criminal cases on docket.

Up until Wednesday night, ten commonwealth cases were disposed of.

Edward Bourne was tried Wednesday on a charge of forgery. We are unable to give the verdict of this case, as the jury had not been given the case.

One of the most important cases to be tried in this court will be held Thursday, when William Duple, of Erlanger will be tried for rape. He was arrested several weeks ago and placed in jail to await action of the grand jury.

Judge, Vallandigham, Circuit Judge and Ward Yager, Commonwealth Attorney took their oath of office Monday, this being their first time to appear in court since their reelection.

It is expected that court will adjourn the latter part of this week due to the fact that many farmers are very busy breaking ground and getting ready for their crops at this time of the year.

HEBRON LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hutter, Pastor

Sunday, April 15, Bible School at 10:00 a. m. Mr. Edwin Walton, Supt.

Morning Worship at 11:00 a. m. Holy Communion is to be celebrated at this time. Subject of the sermon, "The Good Shepherd." Immediately following services will be a short congregational meeting.

The A-Capella Choir will meet for rehearsal on Tuesday evening, April 17, at 8:00 o'clock at Hopeful church.

HOPEFUL LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hutter, Pastor

Sunday, April 15, Bible School at 10:00 a. m. Mr. John Surface, Supt. A good attendance is requested, to hold an annual business meeting.

Luther League Devotional service at 8:00 p. m., under the leadership of Miss Helen Dixon.

The A-Capella Choir will meet for rehearsal on Tuesday evening, April 17, at 8:00 o'clock.

GOOD WILL 4-H CLUB

The meeting of the Good Will was called to order by President, Edgar Snyder, April 3, 1934. All member were present. Minutes were read and approved by Lola Antras, Secretary.

Mr. Forkner made a talk on the club work. We will hold our third meeting April 17, at 1 p. m. at Petersburg school.

Janet Walston, Pub. Chmn.

SO-CALLED NICOTINE

FREE TOBACCO TESTED

Eight strains of low nicotine or so-called "nicotine-free" varieties of tobacco, developed by Dr. Erwin Wilhelm Institute of Berlin, have been tested at the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky at Lexington.

The tobaccos are of the Cuba and Havana types and resemble the Havana tobacco grown in Connecticut, although the leaves are much smaller. It matures early, is resistant to black root-rot and fusarium wilt, and may therefore prove valuable as a "breeding stock," says the report of the station.

There is no evidence that the low nicotine tobacco can be grown to advantage in Kentucky. Studies of the strain will be continued at the Experiment Station.

W. W. Woodward, of Erlanger, was a business visitor in Burlington, Monday, and while here called at the Recorder office.

Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Forkner and son, of Winchester, were Sunday guests of their son Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Forkner and family.

Mrs. Josie and Arthur Maurer and family were Sunday guests of E. T. Sine and family, of Sanders Drive.

W. L. Baldridge, Floyd county, says that though he has used oil and coal brooders, he finds that brick brooders made by Experiment Station plans are the only ones providing adequate warmth, without firing.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

EIGHTY-NINE CORN-HOG CONTRACTS SIGNED

Eighty-nine Boone county farmers had signed AAA Corn-Hog contracts to receive parity benefits until Monday of this week according to county agent H. R. Forkner. A survey of county committeemen indicates that between sixty-four and eighty-nine more contracts will be signed inside the next two weeks.

The sign-up has been delayed in order that farmers may secure their evidence of sales before signing. A large number of these growers are now bringing their hog sale statements into the county office and signing contracts.

The Boone county and community committeemen met at Burlington on last Saturday and made plans for the completing of the sign-up as rapidly as possible. Mr. E. J. Aylor, of Hebron was appointed chairman and Charlie Hemphill, Jr., of Taylorsport, secretary of the county campaign committee. While this AAA program differs in some respects from the other AAA campaigns the committee wishes to stress the fact that only those who sign contracts receive payments and no farmer should expect to be solicited to sign a contract.

Second community sign-up days have been set for the benefit of those who cannot come to the county office. The county and community committeemen and a representative from the County Agent's office will be at each of these sign-up days to assist farmers in the completion of their contracts. The sign-up days will be held as follows:

Florence, Friday, April 13th at the Bank.

Hebron, Saturday the 14th at the Bank.

Hamilton, Monday the 16th at the school.

New Haven, Wednesday the 18th at New Haven School.

Walton, Friday the 20th, Walton Equitable Bank.

Petersburg, Saturday the 21st at the Bank.

The county campaign committee voted also to hold a meeting at Point Pleasant school, the exact date to be announced later.

All farmers, who for the past two years have averaged two or more litters of hogs and ten or more acres of corn are urged to fill out a work sheet on corn and hogs and turn in same to the County Agent's office. This is important whether they expect to sign a contract or not and will be a big help to the campaign committee.

4-H SPRING RALLY

The annual Boone county 4-H Spring Rally will be held at Burlington on Saturday, May 12th, according to Prof. D. H. Norris, chairman of the Boone county 4-H and Utopia Club Council.

The Annual Spring Rally is a get-together of Boone county 4-H leaders, officers and members to discuss 4-H problems, hold county 4-H demonstration team contests, 4-H sewing club girls style show contests and to select representatives to the state contests held during Junior Week at the University of Kentucky in June. Each club is eligible to take part.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Irate Senate Rebukes Huey Long, Then Gags Him; Jobs and Wages Highest Since 1931; Senate Rejects Higher Normal Income Tax Rate.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HUEY P. LONG, the vituperative senator from Louisiana, was soundly spanked by the senate Thursday. Their patience exhausted, Democratic leaders united in administering a sound rebuke for his conduct on the floor. The proceedings were without recent precedence in the senate. Following the blistering remarks hurled at the Kingfish, the senate clamped upon him temporarily a parliamentary muzzle that reduced him to silence.

Senatorial veterans could not remember a similar occasion when a senator has been subjected to the humiliation of such a public chorus of disapproval from his colleagues. The Louisiana's behavior in the senate has disgraced him in the eyes of the nation, Senator Pat Harrison (Dem., Miss.), told Huey.

The Kingfish screamed his protests. He shouted that Senator Harrison was the kind of man who "would stick a knife in a friend's back and drink his blood." This brand of abuse brought Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson (Dem., Ark.), Senator Bennett Clark (Dem., Mo.), and others to their feet and the senate rules were invoked to stop the mouth of the yelling Long. He sat down and gulped in his chair.

The senate has fumed for days as the excitable Long put on his typical exhibitions, shouting to the galleries. Thursday found almost the entire body in a wrathful revolt against these displays of temperance which have been hampering the consideration of important bills.

THAT Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the air corps, and others acted in "violation of the law" in connection with the proposed purchase of $7,500,000 worth of army airplanes, is the conclusion of a subcommittee of the house military affairs committee that has been investigating the matter. The subcommittee also found that Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war, had attempted to assure competitive bidding for the airplanes and thereby comply with the law and the intent of congress.

The transaction in question dates back to the first of the year. Army officers, asking a public works allotment to buy airplanes, made arrangements to purchase them from special companies without competitive bids. Woodring, the committee decided, intervened and demanded competitive bids be sought. Specifications were drawn and proposals submitted to the industry for bids. The army judge advocate general held the proposals did not assure competitive bidding.

The committee contended that in so far as it had been able to find, Woodring's every act was to assure free competition, yet his desires were thwarted.

It mentioned, in addition to Foulois, Brig. Gen. Henry Conger Pratt, chief of the army air corps' procurement division. It said Foulois gave testimony before the Rogers committee and an appropriations subcommittee which seemed to conflict.

Continued improvement in business activity during February and March and expansion of employment and pay rolls to the highest point since the latter half of 1931 were announced by the Commerce department in one of its most optimistic reports on business since 1930.

The average weekly wage was $19.31 in February, the highest since 1931. The hourly rate of 55.8 cents per hour was within 4.1 cents of February, 1929. The employment improvement was general throughout manufacturing industries. Seventy-seven of the 89 manufacturing industries reported increased employment in February and 79 reported higher total wages. When classified into 14 major groups only the food group did not make an employment or pay roll gain.

"SOAK the rich" forces were defeated Thursday when the senate rejected an amendment to the revenue bill by Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Republican, for a big increase in surtax rates.

The vote was 47 to 36. The party lineup showed 25 Democrats, 10 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite for the amendment, with 30 Democrats and 17 Republicans against it.

Estimated to produce $355,000,000 additional revenue, the La Follette amendment called for a boost in the normal income tax rate from 4 to 6 per cent, with surtaxes graduated up to 71 per cent on net incomes in excess of $1,000,000.

TO PREVENT extreme demoralization in the industry and not to create an artificial shortage, is the intent of the production control proposals submitted to the dairy industry by the farm administration, administrators asserted in an appeal for national support for the plan. The case for limiting milk supplies was presented in a series of articles prepared by the AAA.

Officials said it would be easier for them to let the dairy problem work itself out by natural processes, but it would mean starvation for the farmer.

They pointed out that the proposed plan would affect some 4,500,000 farm families, whose income had been cut in half during the depression and whose products had been selling at 40 per cent below prewar "parity."

It is proposed that dairymen limit their output to conform with sales quotas to be allotted under the program. For their co-operation they would be paid benefits derived from collection of an estimated $185,000,000 in processing taxes, $15,000,000 of which would be earmarked for even distribution among three supplemental relief plans, involving tuberculosis eradication, purchase of surplus milk to feed undernourished city children and transfer of good cows to poor farms.

THE house of representatives got busy Wednesday, suspended its rules and granted quick approval to three important bills dealing with widely divergent subjects. They were:

The administration sugar bill—subject of heated controversy for months—which slid through to final approval without even a record vote. It includes sugar as a basic commodity under the AAA, quotas domestic production of sugar beets and cane, and gives Secretary of Agriculture Wallace power to quota imports of Cuban and insular sugar.

The so-called Johnson bill, prohibiting foreign nations which are in default on private or national obligations in this country from floating their securities in the American market. The measure is the upshot of a senatorial investigation several years ago into the nature of foreign borrowings in the United States.

A resolution ordering a federal power commission inquiry into rates charged for electric energy by private power companies throughout the country.

IMMEDIATE comprehensive revision of the national railway labor act to expedite and enforce the settlement of disputes between the railroads and their employees and to safeguard the right of collective bargaining, was recommended by Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, in a letter to Representative Sam Rayburn, chairman of the house interstate commerce committee.

His outstanding recommendations were these:

The creation of a new national board of adjustment, divided into four independent parts, whose awards would be enforceable in the courts.

The substitution of a new national mediation board of three members for the present board of mediation of five members.

The inclusion of all companies which operate equipment or facilities or furnish service included within the definition of the terms "railroad" and "transportation" in the interstate commerce act.

Provisions similar to those in the temporary emergency railroad transportation act of last year, insuring "the complete divorcement of railroad employees and managements in the choice of representatives to deal one with the other" and providing adequate means for the enforcement of these provisions.

The national adjustment board would be divided into four independent parts to adjust disputes.

A "COMMON sense recovery plan" was laid before the country Thursday by France's aged premier, Gaston Doumergue.

The program, which was officially approved by a special council of ministers at Elysee palace, is comparable in scope with Russia's five-year plan and America's NRA. It reflects, however, the typical distrust of experiments by the French peasant. It is marked by the same simplicity and absence of ballyhoo which has characterized all of "Gastonnet's" actions since the dramatic February morning when he arrived in the Civil war littered capital.

The French program is based on the theory that if the government puts its own house in order and mends its own business, industry will recover by itself.

It all boils down to a question of restoring confidence, but the methods laid down for achieving this purpose are nothing short of revolutionary for France. The keystone in Doumergue's edifice of recovery is the leveling of government expenditures down to income, which means eliminating immediately the budget deficit of some $270,000,000.

GENERAL JOHNSON said at his first press conference in six weeks that he favored allowing the licensing provision of the National Recovery act to expire in June.

The general's attention was called to a report that the President favored extending the licensing arrangement, which had not yet been invoked in a single case, and he indicated that he would be at the service of the President for further discussion of the matter.

Inquiry in administration quarters concerning the recent report of the federal trade commission on the operation of the steel code, led to the information that General Johnson would reply to this report shortly. The general is said to hold views diametrically opposed to those of the trade commission respecting the regulation and supervision of business by the government.

ACTING under the power delegated to him by President Roosevelt under an executive order, National Recovery Administrator Johnson approved a amendment to the bituminous coal code imposing a five-day week of 35 hours and revising its wage scale upward, figured on a $5 base with differential on the entire bituminous coal industry. The amendment is subject to a hearing on April 9.

Authoritative sources in Washington agreed that the operators would accept the amendment, at least until after the hearing and that the threat of a strike is avoided at least until after that hearing by the action of the NRA head.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, issued a statement praising the action of the administration and promising the co-operation of the union.

THE liberal Spanish republic has discarded one of the major pillars upon which it was built. Marshaled by the nominally moderate Republican party that once was violently anti-clerical, the cortes in an uproarious session put 7,500 clergymen back on the payroll of the state for life.

For three hours before passage of the law, which directly violates article 26 of the republican constitution, Premier Alejandro Lerroux's supporters and the shrunken left opposition hurled insults and waved flags at each other. Left filibusters were ready with some 300 amendments, but the gag rule was voted before a single one was proposed.

SAMUEL INSULL, fugitive utility magnate, has learned that Uncle Sam has long arms. He thought himself safe aboard the chartered freighter, on which he escaped from Greece, anchored at Istanbul, but Uncle Sam's long arm tagged him and he was arrested by the Turkish authorities. The council of ministers immediately ordered his extradition to the United States. Two eminent Turkish lawyers on behalf of Insull filed an appeal with the supreme court of Turkey against the extradition order. But the appeal was denied.

ROME witnessed one of its most magnificent Easter in its long history as the capital of Catholic Christendom. To the usual imposing Easter ceremonies in St. Peter's cathedral were added this year, by special will of Pope Pius, the solemn liturgical rites canonizing Don Giovanni Bosco, humble Turin priest. Easter also ended the holy year proclaimed by the pontiff in commemoration of the nineteenth century of the crucifixion. Eighty thousand people pressed inside St. Peter's for the canonization ceremonies and the pontifical mass afterwards, and nearly 300,000 more were estimated to have crowded into St. Peter's square. Among the crowds were 100,000 on pilgrimages from many different countries.

THE Civil Works administration has gone out of existence, and its relief organization became the works division of the Federal Emergency Relief administration.

Under this title it will use some $600,000,000 remaining from its recent grant of $950,000,000 for the year 1935 to provide relief for states, which are in turn to pass the money along to cities and counties.

For a month district agents have been working to perfect the machinery for the change.

Meanwhile, administration officials made it clear that industry was not expected to take up the whole slack of unemployment, absorbing the former CWA workers, in a day.

REPRESENTATIVES of the flour milling industry decided to operate without a code of fair competition. Their rejection of the NRA and AAA marks the first refusal of an entire industry to accept the administration's recovery plans. The decision to go ahead without NRA affiliation came after nearly nine months of fruitless negotiations with the NRA and AAA officials.

Government officials were represented as considering a legal test if the millers do not reopen negotiations. There was some talk that the millers might be put under a license.

The millers contend that the code offered would have brought ruin to the industry and would have forced up prices of flour beyond the ability of consumers to pay.

Howe About:

Loafers Reign of Terror Owing Your Home

By ED HOWE

THE loafer who looks to his neighbors for more help than he is entitled to, has been troublesome throughout the long history of the human race. The social plan of the earliest family groups and tribes was communism, but certain ones were idle and troublesome, and refused to do their share, so the plan, after many trials, was in every case given up. From that day to this, loafers have demonstrated that communism will not do: Communists themselves are to blame for the long rejection of their plan.

In olden days (the history books say) all knew they must care for themselves, so the idle were not very numerous, and the industrious and worthy were able to regulate them.

If a man was especially annoying, it was permissible for anyone to kill him, with consent of the elders. A troublesome woman was whipped by other women. As late as the fine civilization in Athens a man who would not earn his own way was placed in charge of a more efficient and worthy citizen, and taught better manners. Loafers were looked down upon, and not allowed to vote; the more persistent were made slaves, and forced to at least earn their own keep on public farms.

There has been a great change in modern times; the idle have become so numerous and powerful that a part of every penny the industrious earn goes to the support of the shiftless.

When one looks over old history, life seems a continuing Reign of Terror.

Of nearly all the famous ancient cities it is said they were destroyed many times. The story runs something like this: In a far-distant time men discovered (say on the river Nile) a favorable site for a town, and made it into a prosperous city. This prosperity attracted the envy of rival tribes, and the city was utterly destroyed. In connection with much butchery. A long time after another city was built on the favorable site, and destroyed. This process of destruction kept up until the present ruins represent the ninth such catastrophe.

The same story comes from the Euphrates, the Tiber, the Aegean islands, and wherever men have been most active. But for this love of destruction we of today would be much more comfortable and advanced than we are; one Reign of Terror plunged the world into darkness for centuries, and then learned nothing new of value to pass on to their successors.

I recall a time when every man had an ambition to own his home. In these strange days men are letting their homes go on the mortgage, or paying rent, or demanding that the landlord give them more time. (I read of one landlord who succeeded in putting a tenant out after the tenant had paid nothing in twelve months, and this cruelty made the neighbors so mad they burned the house.)

Men will again have an ambition to own their homes, fix them up, and care for them. Men who can't rent houses somehow get rid of them, or the houses will fall down, and no new ones will be built. There is always finally an end to the fiercest battle; the drunkard sobers up, to meet the realities of life again. Men are noisily rattling around now, and refusing to pay their debts, as they expect a change which will render it unnecessary, but there will be no change in the old fundamentals; men must have a roof over their heads, pay their debts, make a living, and these things are easiest accomplished by sober, steady men.

I have long been very proud of a common plug of a fellow named Walter Williams. He was a reasonably good boy around home, and sent to school for a while, but never got his lessons very well; he didn't have much school education when he graduated from the grades into the world of work. . . . He became a good workman, and was promoted to foreman in due course. The neighbors liked him every year a little better, and in time people in neighboring counties heard nice things about him. He never went to college or high school, but took considerable advantage of the education offered in the school of experience. . . . The last I heard of him he was addressing an enormous audience of celebrities in Berlin. He never went to a university but is now president of the State University of Missouri. . . . I'm glad that an ordinary plug of a fellow is able to do that well in my country if he will half try.

They tell of an old man who, when reading, looked so uncomfortable and dissatisfied that some one finally asked him if he were ill. "No," he replied, "but I am so tired of literature."

What do I call truth? What I have found true all my life; what I have fully tested, experienced. I have traveled many roads and always found some kindly disposed person ahead of me has left a sign clearly indicating the shortest and easiest way. Such information has never failed me and I call it truth.

THE OLDEST PROFESSION

Three professional men, a doctor, an engineer, and a financier, were debating which of them belonged to the most honorable and ancient profession.

The doctor said: "Mine is easily the oldest. Don't you remember that in the beginning Eve was made out of a rib? Adam's side? Well, there's a surgical operation for you."

The engineer said: "Yes, but before that happened don't you know the whole world was made out of chaos in six days? Now, there's an engineering feat for you."

"Ah," said the financier, "but who made chi?"—Public Opinion.

"Two things I wanted—"

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-globin in the blood."

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin."

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-globin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores. . . in two convenient sizes. . . the larger is more economical.

"I found out my trouble"

Progress Ned—He claims his wife made him what he is. Ted—I'd never forgive her either.

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they are a drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system, or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem:

Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that's all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and its gentle laxative action comes from within. Parents are urged to use just the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem: Be sure bottle says "California".

When men in Spain mention the future that they have been on a cruise they may be met with suspicious glances. Some of Spain's new prisons are floating ones. ## Our "First Lady of the Air" Honored

Mrs. Ann Morrow Lindbergh became the first woman to receive the Hubbard gold medal of honor of the National Geographic society when that honor was conferred on her by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society. ## Chief Steward Is a Genuine Artist

It is generally believed that all of a chief steward's time must be concentrated upon the palate. However, here is one who pays some attention to the palette. He's Chief Steward Harry G. Moore of the Dollar Line's President Grant. Moore is an artist of no mean ability, as may be seen by his painting in the vessel's dining salon. It represents his impressions of Istanbul and is but one of many paintings he has done.

Now Ready to Be Good

Washington—Congress is showing every sign of wanting to be good boys and girls and play ball with President Roosevelt. It appeared when congress decided to slap the President in the face by overriding his veto of the veterans' compensation and government employees' salary question, that at last there was a definite and far-reaching breach. Many persons here thought the President had a recalcitrant bunch on his hands and that there would be plenty of trouble during the rest of the session. "Such is not the case, however, and, although there will be differences arising, the remainder of the session will show few cases in which the wishes of the President will be absolutely disregarded."

The reason for this sudden change is simple. An election campaign confronts all of the members of the house and 35 members of the senate. As the thing has been explained to me by numerous representatives and senators, they were in a political situation where they felt they would rather slap the President than the veterans. The President can scold or spank them, it is explained, but the veterans have votes that are a good deal rougher than a spanking by the Chief Executive, from the standpoint of politics. Now that the potential candidates can go before the veterans of their respective districts and point with pride or something to a vote to restore the compensation, the campaigning members feel they are sitting in a good seat. They are ready to be good.

I am told that Democratic leaders in the house and senate have had innumerable visits since the veto vote from members of their party who wanted to assure the administration that they are "regular" again and will stay that way. Having obtained what they thought they had to have to insure their re-election, they will now vote according to direction once more. Then, when they start speech-making in their home bailiwicks, they will talk loudly and long about supporting the President in one speech and in the next, if it be in a strongly organized veterans' area, they will shout about their friendship for the former soldiers, sailors and marines. From which it ought to be apparent that the whole thing was just a part of the great game of politics.

Just Playing Politics

Democratic bolters could not have overridden the President by themselves, and that fact gave the Republicans an opportunity to play politics as well. The Republicans in the house and senate saw a chance to embarrass the President. They nudged the Democrats from every angle to override the veto and joined with the bolters on the vote just because it would put the Democratic leaders on a hot spot and would be offensive to the President. That is the way the game of politics is played. If one looks back over the records during the Coolidge and Hoover administrations, plenty of instances are shown where the Democrats, then in the minority, joined the bolting Republicans and so-called progressives in votes that were embarrassing to the President.

As a matter of fact, there still is some doubt in the minds of many observers here whether Mr. Roosevelt had sound reason for his veto. He charged that the bill, as passed before the veto, would add $228,000,000 to the regular budget of the government. That is true. But I cannot help recalling that there are two budgets, now. One of them is the regular budget and the other, many times larger, is for emergency expenditures. At least some of those Democrats, who broke with the President on the question, are asking why the government has to cut down on its regular budget while it expands and "throws money away like water" from the emergency budget. It does cause one to pause and think about it.

In other words, the thought of those men is: why is it such a crime to spend about one-fourth of a billion dollars the way congressmen want to spend it when the administration is spending some five or six billions the way it wants to spend that tremendous sum.

Further, I cannot help recalling that, when the economy act was passed during the extra session last spring, I reported to you that the curtailment of expenditures for veterans and for several other purposes under the regular budget, was to be short-lived. I said at that time that it would be given back in pieces. Two acts of congress since have restored a total of 75 per cent of the amount taken away from the veterans, and the last act of congress restored one-third of 15 per cent pay cut to the government workers and will give them another one-third beginning July 1.

There is trouble brewing for President Roosevelt in another political direction. It is not a More Trouble direct result of the overriding of his veto. That fact does appear to have accentuated the difficulties, however, according to most of my informants. The question that is before the administration and leaders of the Democratic party is: what is the attitude to be toward the progressives and other insurgents. It is known, of course, that there are members of the house and senate, elected as Democrats, who have no more right to call themselves Democrats than some of the radical group of the minority can claim to be Republicans. They are insurgents. There is no other proper label. They have not, do not and will not stand hitched to any program for any great length of time.

President Roosevelt and "Big Jim" Farley know full well that the Democrats must have the help of the so-called progressives and the radicals in some parts of the country. This is especially true in the Middle West. But the administration cannot turn against the militant and fighting young Democrats who have fallen into line solidly behind Roosevelt and the New Deal. If it snubs them, "it scorns the steps by which it did ascend" and that is never good politics. The younger group of Democrats take credit for the smashing victory of 1932 and Mr. Roosevelt cannot ignore their clamoring for recognition.

Like a ghostly shadow across the path, however, floats the forms and faces of numerous powerful men who broke away from Hoover and supported the Roosevelt candidacy. The Roosevelt blessing already has been bestowed upon Senator Hiram Johnson, a Californian, who was elected as a Republican but who supported Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy. Senator Johnson is up for election this year. On the other hand, there is young Bob La Follette, of Wisconsin. Surely, he was a liberal all the way. He supported Mr. Roosevelt as against Mr. Hoover. But young Bob has had no such blessing from the administration. Indeed, "Big Jim" Farley has strongly intimated that he wants to see Wisconsin elect Charles Broughten, a regular Democrat. And so it goes.

When President Roosevelt announced settlement of the labor controversy between the Wolman Not automobile industry Real Neutral and the American Federation of Labor, and proposed creation of a board to adjudicate the questions, every one here thought naturally enough that he would select a representative of the industry and one of labor, with the third man being neutral. The natural conclusion was that the third member of the board would have no ties with either capital or labor. There was much surprise, therefore, when he named Dr. Leo Wolman, of Columbia university, New York, as the neutral member. From what I can gather around Washington, the appointment of Doctor Wolman was a bit disappointing to those who wanted a real neutral to sit as a member of the board. Frankly, the President did not meet legitimate expectations in the Wolman appointment, except, of course, among those who sympathized wholly with labor's contention in the controversy.

Doctor Wolman's knowledge of labor questions cannot be denied. He has demonstrated his ability and his capacity to understand the problems. The objection that I hear, however, does not run to that phase of his ability. Doctor Wolman has been associated directly or indirectly with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for many years. However he may desire to be impartial, however basically honest he is, the thought in many places in Washington is that Doctor Wolman cannot be neutral as that word is accepted by the general public. He is human and he has sentiment. Those two factors make it appear to many observers that the settlement of the automobile-labor controversy amounts to nothing more than a postponement. It will flare up again, but probably will not take place until after the middle of June when the President will not have a law in effect that will permit him to license the industry.

The week's best laugh: Federal Home Loan board regulations require that applicants for loans submit with their applications, first, a "close up" photograph of the property and, second, a "street scene" that will show a little of adjoining property. These photographs have the purpose and the value, of course, of providing a general knowledge of where the money goes.

But the headquarters office of the loan system was not quite prepared for two photographs which it received in connection with one application that came from a colored man in a little southern town. In complying with the requirement that a "close up" photograph be submitted, the applicant overlooked the fact that it was of the property and sent in a picture of himself, a photograph that disclosed the wrinkles and gray hair of his age as well as two exceptionally large eyes. For the street scene, the applicant had himself photographed in his best bib and tucker, namely, his lodge uniform. And he was riding a bicycle along the street.

HIGH TAX ON LIVING

The taxpayer is the forgotten man of today. The taxpayer, you, I and everyone who owns, buys or sells.

When business boomed and a decent price could be had for every commodity, the even then staggering tax bill left the man who worked hard and managed well, a profit. But now when the great majority of the industrial and agricultural world is barely able to meet operating expenses and the increased wages for less work prescribed by the NRA codes, that tax cost becomes just the push necessary to shove already tottering industry into bankruptcy.

Excessive taxes hinder recovery, and destroy initiative. Excessive taxes have been the cause of every revolution since time began.

In the face of which our legislators continue blithely on their way, in their treasure hunt for more, bigger and better taxes. Someday the forgotten men will say stop!

Thou our voice will be in all faithfulness unheard and unheeded, we frankly do not believe that our governmental structure will stand the continued strain. In plain words, if this orgy of tax gathering and spending continues, we are bound to crash.

In the face of the above frivolity may seem unwarranted, but life is made up of all kinds.

Seems as tho we've about succeeded in quieting down the boys and gals, at least nothing ever happens any more.

Now Mr. S.—you shouldn't be quite so rough. Just temper your rage with a little humor.

If the gals wear their skirt any shorter and pap wears his old clothes any longer all of 'em will be ready for a good sun tan this summer.

We forgot to mention that at Craig's sale the other week, one gal waited all day to bid fifteen cents on the proprietor, but they didn't put him up.

Lesson for April 15

JESUS TEACHING FORGIVENESS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:15-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors—
Matt. 6:12.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Helps Peter
With a Hard Question.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Lesson in Kindly Conduct.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Why Practice Forgiveness?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT
TOPIC—What Is True Forgiveness?

This lesson touches a most vital subject, a most practical one for our everyday lives. We are always surrounded by wicked men. Ill-treatment we shall most surely receive, for all who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution (II Tim. 3:12).

1. How to Gain an Erring Brother
(vv. 15-20).
To bring a sinning brother to a knowledge of his sin and restore him to fellowship with his Lord and to fellowship with the saints is to gain him. Therefore the transcendent aim should be to win him. The method to be used is

1. Personal (v. 15). Go and tell him his fault alone. The aim in this personal effort is not to charge him with sin but to bring him to see his sin.

2. The help of a comrade (v. 16).
"Take with thee one or two more."
The presence of one or two Christian brethren helps in making known his fault.

3. Tell it to the church (v. 17).
Sometimes the church can accomplish that which the individual and the one or two brethren fail to do.

4. The binding authority of the church's decision (vv. 18-20). When the church follows the instruction of the Lord, gathers in the name of Jesus Christ and is actuated by the Holy Spirit, its decisions are final.

II. The Limit of Forgiveness (vv.
21, 22).

1. Peter's question (v. 21). From Christ's teaching as to the efforts to bring about reconciliation in case of offenses between brethren, he knew that the spirit of forgiveness would be required. The rabbi taught that one, two, or even three offenses should be forgiven but the fourth should be punished. Peter disposed to be gracious inquired, "Till seven times?" showing his readiness to forgive his brethren not three times merely but twice three times and a little over.

2. Jesus' answer (v. 22). This answer astonished Peter. Jesus said "not till seven times but until seventy times seven," showing that willingness to forgive should be practically limitless. The Christian should be so filled with the love of Christ that he will forgive whenever being called upon to do so.

3. Christ's principle of forgiveness
(vv. 23-35). This principle is illustrated by the story of the two creditors.

a. The gracious creditor (vv. 23-27).
The king in this parable represents God. The servant who is greatly in debt represents the sinner—any sinner, every sinner, you and me. We were hopelessly in debt to God. Ten million talents are equal to about $12,000,000. To meet this obligation would be an utter impossibility. This man's plea for time, promising to pay all, resembles man's vain imaginations that he can pay his debt to God; that by his future good works he can atone for his past grievous sins. The law says, "Pay all," but Christ forgives all. By the justice of God's law we are hopelessly doomed. By the grace of God we are freely pardoned.

b. The cruel creditor (vv. 28-35).
The man who was forgiven so much found the man who owed him a small sum, about $17. He shut his ears to the man's entreaty to be patient with him, flew at his throat and cruelly put him into prison. The great mercy shown him did not touch his heart, so he refused to be merciful. Every one who is unforgiving shows that the forgiveness of God in Jesus Christ has not been experienced. Being set free from so great a debt as our sins against God, we should make God's act of unlimited forgiveness toward us a standard of unlimited forgiveness toward others. In dealing with others we should always keep before us

(1). That we constantly need the forgiveness of God. When we pray, "forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," let us be sure that we have put away all thought of things held against others.

(2). There is a day of judgment coming and at that day we shall be treated as we treat others. No mercy will be shown to those who have not shown mercy. God's action toward us should be the standard of our action toward others.

What Union Means

Union with God in Christ wraps up every blessing. You cannot go beyond this. It is the summum bonum, containing all, and more than all, that heart can desire, or imagination can fathom.

The Glory of Our Christ

We can never add anything to the honor or glory of Jesus' name. All the works of the holiest people of God since time began and through all eternity can never add to his glory.

For Ever-Popular Canapes

Delicacies Accepted as Almost Indispensable Part of the Pre-Dinner Hour Offer Little Difficulties in Their Preparation.

Canapes—only a few years ago we were asking each other how to pronounce the word, and now they are an accepted part of every woman's food program. They add entertainment as well as savor to the half hour before dinner and everyone enjoys looking at a tray of attractive canapes, as well as eating them.

They take time to make, and disappear in a moment, but I think they repay us for our effort when we see our guests appreciate them so much.
I find that the easiest way to make them is to cut the crusts from the loaf of bread and to spread it lengthwise with flavored butter. Perhaps I will use ketchup or pimiento butter for the first slice, anchovy butter for the next, watercress or parsley butter for the third, and cheese for the fourth. This gives a contrast of color as well as flavor. I then cut these large slices into finger lengths, squares, diamonds and rounds, or occasionally with fancy cutters into more interesting shapes. I arrange them on a damp cloth and then garnish each one with a different combination of contrasting garnishes.

I have the garnishes ready—thin slices of pickles, green peppers and pimientos, or slices of anchovies, stuffed olives and hard-cooked eggs, minced egg whites and strained egg yolks, tiny (capers) birdseye onions and lobster claws. I take just a few moments to arrange these garnishes in simple designs. On the finger length strips I may put an overlapping row of stuffed olives, or the same around the edge of a round.
The strips of green pepper can be crossed or arranged in a simple design—the egg slices put in the center, the egg-whites, well seasoned, used as an edging, the egg yolks to sprinkle in the center or around the edges. Just the least change of arrangement will make every canape individual. Sometimes I use with these a simple canape—just spread with butter and sprinkled with chutney or some other mixed pickle.

There is also another sort of can-ape which makes a good first course at the table. Either bread, toast or fried bread is used as its foundation and it is spread first with a flavored butter and then covered with slices of tomato, cucumber and hard-boiled egg, and garnished with mayonnaise, stuffed olives sliced, or sliced ripe olives or truffles. A hot mushroom canape is also delicious. This is made by sautéing the mushrooms, arranging them on the bread and covering with a mushroom, and a slice of grilled tomato may be put under the mushroom. Sometimes a more elaborate canape such as salmon eggs, for which I am giving the recipe, is used. Another interesting combination is made of larded anchovy fillets or cheese spread. You may like to use small baked tomatoes on toast and cover them with a cheese sauce. A stuffed egg garnished attractively is another suggestion. Stuffed raw tomatoes or slices of green pepper stuffed with cheese, garnished with pimientos, is another savory choice. Frozen cheese cut into squares, served on a slice of tomato or a bed of shredded lettuce is another suitable appetizer.
Crab or lobster salad on a bed of cucumbers is another suggestion for a cold canape. This should be served on buttered bread and garnished with green peppers or capers.

We certainly have gone much further in our canape preparation than the dictionary—"A slice or piece of bread fried in butter or oil, on which anchovies, mushrooms, etc., are served."

Tomato Surprise Canape.

6 tomatoes
1 cup chopped celery
1 Philadelphia cream cheese

¾ cup chopped nuts
½ cup capers or chopped olives
Lettuce

Skin six firm tomatoes and place in refrigerator. Mix celery, cheese, nuts and capers together, adding tomato pulp taken from tomatoes thoroughly chilled. Before scooping out tomatoes cut off small piece of top and insert through a slit in this a small lettuce leaf, to represent a handle. Place on lettuce leaves and serve with mayonnaise or french dressing, whichever is preferred.

Cornucopia Canape.

Toast bread, cut in finger-lengths, spread with mayonnaise and chop egg yolk. Fold a slice of dried lettuce into a cornucopia, fill with onion-pea-soned cream cheese, and lay on toast.

Shrimp Canape.

Mix chopped parsley with creamed butter, and spread on small squares of bread. Top with a shrimp, and fill center with seasoned minced egg yolk and pimento.

Quick Meal.

Clam juice cocktail
Asparagus with poached eggs
Lettuce and tomato salad
Ice cream with crushed strawberries
Cookies
Coffee

For the quick meal today, I am suggesting an asparagus debauch, which any devotee of this vegetable likes to have as soon as it gets within a reasonable price. It makes a delicious main dish served around poached eggs on toast. It should be dressed with brown butter and grated cheese or with hollandaise sauce which goes so well with both eggs and asparagus. With this a mixed tomato and cucumber salad with a french dressing will go well. For dessert we might have ice cream with crushed strawberries or fresh pi-apple.

To go back to the beginning of the meal, if the night is warm, a chilled clam or tomato juice cocktail will be refreshing.

Order of Preparation.

Shocks Explode Brain

Evidence that people killed by lightning or by shocks of high voltage electricity die because their brains or blood vessels have exploded has been reported by Dr. McDonald
Crichtley, London nerve specialist.
This is believed to be why shock victims who recover report the shock sensation as like a violent blow.
Nerve tissue taken from people who have been shocked has been found to be shredded or ballooned, as though an explosion had occurred inside them. Blood vessels in the brain were found to be burst open so the blood ran out much the same as in apoplexy. Hollow spaces in the brain tissue frequently look as if they had been burst by violent explosions inside them. On the other hand, signs of burns are seldom found in the nerves themselves, for they would be if these nerves had acted as conductors of the current.—

Electricity in Human Body a Potent Force

That human beings are really electric batteries, discharging sometimes as much as a half a volt of current, is suggested by Prof. Fred Vies of France. By attaching electrodes, worn by different people, to a delicate recording apparatus, he was able to get the voltage emitted by each, and to note the personal changes in electrical characteristics.

A person in perfect health generates the most current, but even that falls off in gloomy weather; while ill health is always indicated in the same way.

Dr. George Crile of the Cleveland clinic, in a speech bearing no relation to Professor Vies' findings, advances the theory, backed by experiments of his own, that the working of the mind is an electrical process, and that current for this is generated by 4,000,000,000,000 individual dynamos hitherto known merely as cells.

The living brains of both man and animals, he has found, emit short-

Mr. COFFEE-NERVES in trouble again

I SURE SPOILED
THAT SHOW FOR HIM! NOW TO GET HIM TO START AN ARGUMENT WITH HER!

NO—IT WAS TERRIBLE!
BURN PHOTOGRAPHY—HAM
ACTING—NO PLOT—EVERY-THING ABOUT IT WAS PUNK!

WASN'T IT A SPLENDID PICTURE?

IF YOU'D STAYED
AWAKE PERHAPS YOU'D HAVE HEARD MORE!

OUR SEATS WERE TERRIBLE! WHY DIDN'T THAT USHER PUT US
WHERE WE COULD SEE AND HEAR BETTER?

THAT—BLAM! YOU
BECAUSE YOU
CATCH UP ON THE 3-4
YOU LOST LAST NIGHT

CAN YOU IMAGINE
BECAUSE YOU
CATCH UP ON THE 3-4
YOU LOST LAST NIGHT

BUT YOU'RE GETTING TO BE AN AWFUL Grouch, JOHN.
WHY DON'T YOU GET COFFEE
FOR 30 DAYS AND DRINK POSTUM
INSTEAD?

CURSE THE BLASTED LUCK! I CAN'T STAY
HERE IF POSTUM COMES INTO THE HOUSE

SAY—I'M SICK AND TIRED OF HEARING ABOUT IT! SO
I'LL TRY IT—IF IT WILL KEEP YOU HAPPY!

30 DAYS LATER

YOU BET! I'M RARIN' TO GO! I FEEL GREAT SINCE I SWITCHED TO POSTUM—
I SLEEP LIKE A TOP—AND GET A KICK OUT OF EVERY-THING I DO!

HOW ABOUT A MOVIE TONIGHT
DEAR?

MANY people, of course, can safely drink coffee. But there are thousands and thousands of others who cannot. Maybe—without realizing it—you are one of these.

If, for any reason, you suspect that the rug caffein in coffee is undermining your nervous system, upsetting your digestion, or robbing you of sleep, switch to POSTUM for 30 days.—It is a delicious drink—and it may be a real help.
There is nothing in Postum that can possibly harm you. A product of General Foods.

FREE—let us send you your first week's supply of POSTUM free. Simply mail the coupon.

LOWER GUNPOWDER

Mrs. Edna McCubbins and Miss Elizabeth and Thelma Hodges visited their sister, Mrs. Melvina McCubbins Sunday.

We are glad to report that Bro. Johnson was able to be back with his people Sunday at Big Bone.

There seems to be a musical generation coming in this community.

Little Walter Shinkle is quite a fisherman, as he caught fifty fish

Saturday, so they say.

Mode Hodges has improved wonderfully in the last few weeks.

Little Henry Etta Black and Mrs. Oren Edwards and daughter Connie Mae have the measles.

Mrs. Helen Black spent Sunday morning with Mrs. W. M. Shinkle and family.

Mrs. Schwenke and family entertained guests from Cincinnati, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Townsen and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ryle spent Sunday afternoon with Melvin Moore and family.

Herbie Hodges spent Saturday night and Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Carrie Ogden.

Mrs. Ed Shinkle's brother spent several days with them the past week.

Administrator's Notice

8,000	93%	82%
16,000	81%	36%

Supertwist Cord—a Good-year patent—stretches, absorbs shocks, and comes back strong! Thoroughly rubberized to resist heat, it gives lasting blowout protection in every ply. Ask us to demonstrate!

The super-soft tires the new 1934 cars are wearing can be easily applied on most 1933 or 1932 cars. Ask for our special offer on the GOODYEAR AIRWHEEL.

Any good new tire is pretty safe from blowouts—but how safe is it after thousands of miles? Think over those percentages above! Remember, the public finds that Goodyears stand up longest—that's why more people buy Goodyears than any other tires. Since Goodyears cost nothing extra, put them on your car!

The famous Goodyear Pathfinder—blowout protected by 4 FULL PLYS of Supertwist Cord insulated with heat-resisting rubber. Also, the Goodyear Speedway—a blowout protected—yet costs as little as $4.10 up.

107 FARMERS

SIGN AAA CORN-HOG CONTRACTS IN BOONE COUNTY—CLOSING DATE SET FOR MONDAY APRIL 30—BENEFICIAL TO ALL SIGNERS

One hundred and seven Boone county farmers had signed AAA Corn-Hog contracts up until Saturday night, April 14th, according to county agent, H. R. Forkner. The sign-up has been progressing rapidly with April 30th set as the final date for receiving contracts. This date will not likely be extended, due to the fact that five of the seven months of the contract have already passed and other year have already passed and other states have closed their sign-up approximately a month ago.

The Corn-Hog payments represent the most beneficial of all AAA programs with many hog producers with as low as one sow receiving upwards of $50 in parity payments. The corn rental payments in most cases will vary from $6.00 to $15.00 per rented acre which in most cases represents a much greater profit than could be secured even though no deductions were made for the labor involved in producing.

The program as with other AAA programs carries an element of co-operation with ones fellow farmer to help all farmers receive a more fair price for their product. Many farmers and most folks not engaged in farming do not understand the dire and serious situation agriculture is facing at the present and has faced in a major way for the past four years and in a general way for the past fourteen years. The government for the first time in history is giving to the individual farmer the same protection held by majority industries to curb production when production has reached the point beyond which additional production can be secured only as a destructive loss. This help has come only after fourteen years of destructive prices.

The reduction programs in no way connects with lack of initiative or extra time for the farmer but offers an opportunity to start work on some of the neglected farm lands, farm buildings, fences, farm machinery, pasture and hay improvement and hundreds of other important jobs that have been put aside in the hard fight to make ends hold close to an existence.

The farmers who signed contracts that reached the county office up until noon Monday include the following listed by 1929 magisterial districts:

Community sign-up days are scheduled for New Haven school on Wednesday, the 18th; Walton, Friday the 20th; Verona Bank, Saturday 21st; and Petersburg Bank, Saturday 21st. Contracts may be signed at these community sign-up days or any day at the County Agent's office in Burlington.

ERLANGER MAN SENTENCED

Winchester, Ky., April 13—State penitentiary guards planned to return Irvin "Tubby" Anderson to Edwylville today, with another 20-year term added to his sentences.

Anderson and Frank Miller, alias Marion Yelton, of Erlanger, were convicted of holding up L. C. Callahan, Winchester school teacher, last January at Flanagan Station. Both men took their sentences lightly. Anderson said the trip to Winchester had been "a vacation."

A. E. Lindenschmidt and little granddaughter, Anna Mae Sahlfeldt, of South Ft. Mitchell, were callers in Burlington Tuesday, and while here made the Recorder a very pleasant call.

APPOINTMENT

OF MASTER COMMISSIONER MADE BY CIRCUIT JUDGE VALLANDINGHAM LAST FRIDAY—CUSTOM OF APPOINTING CLERK OBSERVED

Pursuant to the custom that has been in vogue here for many years, Circuit Judge J. G. Vallandingham appointed A. D. Yelton, Circuit Court Clerk, as his Master Commissioner this week.

The appointment of Mr. Yelton was announced by the Judge just as court opened last Friday. Judge Vallandingham explained in making the appointment that the April term following the qualification of the Circuit Clerk on January 1st, has been the customary time to appoint this officer.

This term witnessing the retirement of R. E. Berkshire, who held the office for the past 12 years, six under Judge Sidney Gaines and six under Judge Vallandingham. From 1913 to 1922 the office was held by the late Charles Maurer.

Mr. Yelton was elected Clerk last November, after having been nominated in August. The custom of appointing the Clerk as Master Commissioner was inaugurated in this county because the Clerk's office alone is not sufficiently remunerative.

MRS. ALICE GADD

Mrs. Alice Gadd, aged 68 years, passed away Wednesday at her home in the Big Bone neighborhood, after a long illness.

Funeral services were conducted at the Big Bone Baptist church, of which she was a member, at 11 o'clock Friday by Rev. Roy Johnson, pastor, in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends, after which she was laid to rest in the nearby cemetery by the side of her only son, Joseph, who died almost 25 years ago.

Mrs. Gadd is survived by her husband Anderson Gadd, one brother and one sister, besides other relatives and friends.

The pallbearers were Harry Sheets, Bernard Jones, Jule Brissetow, John Acree, Burgess Howard and Russell Garrison.

Funeral director Philip Tallafiero had charge of the funeral arrangements.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Kirkpatrick of near town was the scene of an old fashion shower, given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William Walton. Many useful gifts were received by this young couple. Those attending follow: Mrs. Edna Eddins, Mrs. Bess Rouse, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Norris, Mrs. M. A. Yelton, Mrs. Hubert Rouse, Mrs. Ora Ross, Mrs. Myrtle Offit, Mrs. Jess Eddins, Mrs. Franklin Huey, Mrs. Windell Easton and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kirkpatrick.

Harry Herbstreit is at home for a week's vacation from Washington, D. C.

LUTHERAN CHOIR

The Lutheran A-Capella choir of thirty voices, composed of young people of the Hebron and Hopeful Lutheran churches, and under the capable direction of Rev. H. C. Hauter, has been very successful this season in the presentations of the Easter cantata, From Cross to Crown, by Judson.

This beautiful cantata will be presented again for your enjoyment at the Burlington Baptist church Sunday, April 22, at 8:00 p. m.

The choir has begun preparation on a program which will last an hour, being composed of Sacred numbers, semi-classics, folk songs, and Spirituals. It is the intention of the choir to go on a concert tour in the late summer or fall.

We join in wishing the choir and its director much success in their undertaking.

MRS. ALICE SNYDER

Mrs. Alice Snyder, passed away on April 10th in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mattie (Arpenter) in her 79th year, following an illness from pneumonia.

Funeral services were conducted from Burlington Baptist church on Thursday at 2 p. m., of which she was a member, by her pastor, Bro. Walker, assisted by Bro. DeMolesey a former pastor, in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends, after which her remains were laid to rest along side of her husband, D. M. Snyder, who preceded her some years ago in the I. O. O. F. cemetery, of Burlington.

She leaves to mourn her going, two daughters, Mrs. Minnie Carpenter, Mrs. Virginia Gaines, two sons, Grover Snyder, of Madison, Ind. Cleveland Snyder of Northside Ohio, four grandchildren, one sister and other relatives and friends. Pall bears were Earl Smith, Hubert Brady, Herbert Snyder, Lester Guiley, Carroll Cropper and Emil Shearer.

The funeral arrangements were in charge of Chambers & Grubbs.

INFANT JONES

Infant Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Jones, who live near the Commissary on Burlington and Bellevue road, passed away after a few days' illness from pneumonia, at the age of 21 days, on April 18. He was laid to rest in the I. O. O. F. cemetery on April 10th. A brief service, conducted at the grave by Bro. Walker assisted by Bro. Smith.

Funeral director Wallace K. Grubbs was in charge of the burial.

J. S. Surface and Rev. E. M. Hauter, of Florence, were business visitors in Burlington Tuesday, and while here made this office a very pleasant call.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

COMPLETE AAA CORN-HOG SURVEY NON-SIGNERS

A complete survey of all AAA Corn-Hog non-signing Boone county farmers who produced in 1934 two or more litters of pigs and ten or more acres of corn in 1933 will be made the latter part of this week and the first part of next. The survey will be made by the county campaign committeemen assisted by community committeemen.

Each farmer coming in the above class who has not signed a contract will be visited by a committeeman who will assist in explaining the program. If the farmer then wishes to sign a contract he will come to the county office. Following this visit a survey of each non-signer will be made listing the number of pigs and acres of corn produced in each of the base years. Where the grower refuses to give this information the information will be secured from neighbors and marked information refused.

The cost of making the survey will have to be borne by the local Corn-Hog Production Control Association. Those farmers who will fill in the desired information on the work sheet will greatly assist the committeemen and at the same time will lessen the cost on the fellow farmer who is cooperating in the program. The supplying of the above information does not in any way obligate one to sign a contract. The information will be used to check on the percentage sign up in the county and as a check on the allotment for the county. The full cooperation of all non-signers will be greatly appreciated in this work.

The Boone county AAA Corn-Hog Committee are S. B. Sleet, Beaver; Chester L. Tanner, Florence; Howard Huey, Petersburg; Karl Rouse, Burlington; Edward Rogers, Grant; August Trapp, Hamilton; E. J. Aylor, Hebron; J. A. Harris, Verona; Charles Hemphill, Hebron; L. L. Weaver, Union; C. W. Cleek, Walton. These committeemen are assisted with from two to five community committeemen. If you do not know who your community committeemen are, please supply this information.

FLORENCE UTOPIA GROUP PLANS APRIL PROGRAM

The Florence group of Boone County Utopia Club No. 22 will present a special program at the home of Miss Lucille Taylor, one mile south from Florence on U. S. 25 on this Thursday evening, April 19th at 7:30 p. m.

The Florence group is one of the most wide awake of the Utopia Club groups and a good program is expected.

The Utopia Club members are sponsoring a drive for new members interested in agricultural and home economics improvement. Two groups have been organized in the drive. The group receiving the largest number of new members will be the guests at the August meeting of the opposing group.

FORMER SENATOR

RICHARD P. ERNST DIES AT JOHN HOPKINS HOSPITAL, BALTIMORE FRIDAY—WAS VICTIM OF PARALYTIC STROKE.

Former U. S. Senator Richard P. Ernst, 76, Fourth and Garrard streets, Covington, Ky., died at Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, Friday at 3:30 a. m.

The former senator was taken to the hospital two weeks ago after he had suffered a paralytic stroke on board the steamship California en route from Colon, Panama, to New York.

Senator Ernst improved steadily at the hospital until Tuesday when he suffered a relapse and went into a rapid decline. Pneumonia followed the stroke.

The former senator's son, William Ernst, and his daughter, Mrs. John O. Darnall, both of Cincinnati, were at his bedside when he died. His widow, an invalid, has been confined to their Covington home for many years.

Funeral services for Senator Ernst were held at the First Presbyterian church, Covington, of which he was a life-long member, Saturday at 10 a. m. The body was received by Swetnam Sons, undertakers, and taken direct to the church. Burial was in Highland cemetery.

ALL DAY MEETING AT BELLEVUE

On Sunday, April 29th there will be a Dedicatory and Consecration service at the Baptist church.

Dedication of the new interior decoration of the church and the closing of the 3rd anniversary of our present pastor Rev. Raymond Smith.

The pastor will have charge of the morning services as usual with Rev. W. A. M. Wood, field worker and Rev. E. D. Davis, pastor of Ludlow Baptist church, who will speak in the afternoon.

A male quartette from Cincinnati Gospel Mission will furnish special music. Everybody is invited to attend this service. A great day is expected in the Lord's service.

TRUE BLUE 4-H CLUB

The True Blue 4-H Club opened the 4th meeting with a club pledge April 12th. Thirty-four members answered the roll call. Project captains gave reports on their groups. The program this month was a declamation by Mrs. Juanita Fyfe and Clayton Clore. The meeting adjourned with a club yell.

ATTENDS NURSES' CONVENTION

Miss Eunice B. Willis, Red Cross Public Health Nurse, left April 21 for Washington, D. C., to attend the Biennial Nurses' Convention. She, with Miss Jo Smith and three nurses from the Children's Convalescent Hospital, Cincinnati, made the trip in Miss Willis' new car.

Miss Willis will remain after the convention closes to have conferences with some of the officials of the National Red Cross, who wrote to her asking that she do so. She will be in the National Capital about a week, in all.

She was asked to remain for the following week to attend the National Red Cross Convention which will be held in the same city, and to make a talk to the delegates. However, she felt that her duties in Boone county were too pressing and she will return after the conference, to continue her good work here.

KENTUCKY PIONEERS GIVE PERFORMANCE

The Kentucky Pioneers, the old-time fiddler's band from Hebron will appear in person on the stage of the Broadway Theater, in Covington, Ky., Saturday, April 21, in three performances, 3:30, 8:00 and 10:00 p. m., E. S. T.

This popular band has been featured and were successful at the Liberty Theater in the contests which were featured there a short time ago.

FOUR-H CLUBS

CONTINUE TO GIVE GOOD REPORTS ON THEIR PROJECT WORK—SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY FOR BOONE CLUBS TO STUDY AGRICULTURE.

Boone county 4-H club members the past week continued to give good reports on their project work according to county agent H. R. Forkner.

The tobacco project groups of the "Waltonians," Verona "Willing Workers," "Norbeh Champions," Grant "True Blues" and "New Haven Boosters," 4-H Community Clubs all reported 100 percent of their tobacco projects started. The poultry and other project groups also reported splendid progress being in the getting of their project work started.

Four-H club work gives the boy or girl a splendid opportunity to study under and with his or her parent, adult 4-H leader and fellow 4-H club members on the important problem of agricultural and home economics improvement. The practicability and advancement of this work to a large extent on the full cooperation of the above in the four fold development of the Head, Heart, Health and Hands in the working for the future progress of the county.

CHAMPION SPELLER TO GO TO LOUISVILLE

Kenyon Clore, of the Constance school, left Wednesday for Louisville to represent Boone county in the State Spelling Bee sponsored by the Courier-Journal.

Kenyon won the Boone County Championship by spelling down other school champions in both oral and written spelling in the county contest held recently at Burlington.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Rouse are the proud parents of a baby born, April 7th.

ERLANGER MAN

IS SENTENCED TO TEN YEARS IN STATE PENITENTIARY FOR ATTACK UPON AN ELEVEN YEAR OLD GIRL FRIDAY IN BOONE CIRCUIT COURT.

A ten-year prison sentence was imposed on William Doble, 48, disabled World War veteran, of Erlanger Heights, Boone county, by a jury in Judge J. G. Vallandingham's Boone Circuit court, Thursday. Doble was found guilty of attacking Doris Garrett, 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. George Garrett, of Erlanger, late in February.

Mrs. Garrett swore to a warrant against Doble on March 24, after learning of the incident, which it was stated; occurred on Kentonbo avenue, Erlanger, in a dividing line between Kenton and Boone counties. He was indicted by the Boone county grand jury a few days ago. Doble's attorney, Irvin Bramlage, filed notice of an appeal to the Court of Appeals. His bond was fixed at $5,000 which he was unable to make. Unless he gives bond soon it was stated that Judge Vallandingham would order him to the State prison at Frankfort to await action on his appeal.

A jury in the same court imposed a two-year sentence on Edward Bourne, 33, of Owenton, Ky., indicted for forgery. Bourne is alleged to have forged nearly one hundred checks in Northern Kentucky counties. He was convicted of having forged a check drawn on the Sugar Creek creamery, of Louisville, Ky., for $3.95. The warrant for his arrest was issued by D. E. White, owner of a filling station on U. S. Route No. 25, near Richwood.

It was claimed that Bourne had a book of blank checks belonging to the creamery company, which he used in the forgery.

Hon. J. G. Vallandingham, Judge of the Boone Circuit Court.

We, the grand jury of the Boone Circuit Court for the April 1934 term, have been in session 5 days, have examined 25 witnesses and returned 4 indictments.

Investigation has been made of all cases referred to us by inferior courts of Boone county and indictments returned in such cases where evidence seemed to us sufficient.

We have dismissed the case of Commonwealth of Kentucky vs. Henry Bauer on a charge of kidnapping for lack of sufficient evidence.

The courthouse and jail are in excellent condition and well kept by Mr. Elmer Kirkpatrick, jailer.

We recommend an increase of the fiscal court to make the following repairs at the county infirmary: A new roof on the building; repair the plastering in the rooms; new window sashes and new flooring where needed. There is now a shortage of water at the infirmary and we urge the building department to connect by tile with the cisterns, which will provide more water. The light post over the garage is in bad condition and should be replaced.

There should be a line fence built between the county property and the property of Mr. Hubert Gaines to keep his stock from grazing on the county property.

The inmates seem contented and well cared for by Mrs. O. S. Eddins. It is our opinion that these repairs should be made at once and we respectfully urge the fiscal court to give the matter prompt attention.

Investigation shows that 1730 dogs were listed with the Tax Commissioner and that only 557 have been licensed for 1934. We urge the Sheriff of Boone county to immediately check the list of all dogs listed and all licenses paid, and cite into court by not later than May 15, 1934, all persons owning or harboring unlicensed dogs.

Having completed our labor, we ask to be finally discharged.

Respectfully submitted,

J. K. Conrad, Foreman.

Attest: L. H. Congleton, Clerk.

Wirt's Red Plot Story Flattened Out by Investigators—
Senate Votes for Extra 10 Per Cent Income Tax—Auto and Coal Troubles.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

DR. WILLIAM A. WIRT, the really eminent educator of Gary, Ind., told his story of a "red plot" to overthrow the government of the United States, so far as the Democratic majority of the house investigating committee permitted, and the general opinion throughout the country was that it was "not so hot." The Democrats declared it was utter bunk. The Republicans, who had hoped to find good political material in the affair, asserted that gag rule had been enforced.

The revelation of the alleged scheme of the radicals, said Wirt, came to him at a dinner given by Miss Alice Barrows at a country house near Washington. The other guests were Robert Bruere, David C. Coyle, Miss Hildegarde Kneeland and Miss Mary Taylor, all, like the hostess, connected with the government, and Lawrence Todd, chief of the Tass, official Soviet government news agency in the United States. From their conversation, Wirt said, he gathered that men high in the councils of the administration were plotting the overthrow of the American social order and that they considered President Roosevelt as another Kerensky to be followed by another Stalin.

The six men named by Wirt were Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace; Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture and recognized head of the brain trust; Prof. Milburn L. Wilson, head of the subsistence homestead division of the Department of Interior; Dr. Robert Kohn, head of the housing division of the public works administration; Dr. Frederick Howe, consumers' counsel for the agricultural adjustment administration, and Henry T. Rainey, speaker of the house of representatives.

The most serious charges made by the gentleman from Indiana were directed at Professor Tugwell; but his basis for these, as for practically all of his story, was hearsay, second-hand information and vague statements by some of his fellow guests at the dinner. In that lay its weakness, though there are many serious-minded Americans who insist that there should be a real investigation of any government officials seeking to undermine the present form of government.

The committee, having heard Wirt, adjourned for some days with the intention of calling as witnesses those who attended the country house dinner. Some of them already had denied flatly or belittled the statements made by Wirt.

LOTS of bickering resulted from the Wirt case, and in this some of the Democrats concerned did not make a good showing. Chairman Bulwinkle of the committee, for instance, asserted that Wirt was imprisoned at Gary during war times for pro-German activities, and this was indignantly denied by numerous persons who were in position to know its truth or falsity. Secretary of the Interior Ickes accused Doctor Wirt of having sought to obtain public work money for a "Fairland" project in the Indiana dunes by which Doctor Wirt was to sell 2,000 front feet of dune land along Lake Michigan at $50 a foot, a total sale price of $100,000. The project was disapproved by the Public Works administration as "visionary and impractical," Mr. Ickes said.

Doctor Wirt issued a denial of Secretary Ickes' tale, explaining that he had no connection with the proposed project and that the company with which he was connected had held the land in question for 12 years to preserve it for park purposes. Representative McGugin of Kansas, Republican member of the investigating committee, was "gagged" when he tried to make a speech on the case in the house, but managed to get it inserted in the Congressional Record. At the same time the Department of Justice was seeking to revive a five-year old matter in which McGugin appeared as a lawyer for Mrs. Barnett, wife of the wealthy Indian Jackson Barnett.

DESPITE the opposition of the house leaders and the doubt of its approval by the President, Senator Couzens persisted in his effort to put through his amendment to the tax bill calling for a flat 10 per cent increase in all income tax returns. Chairman Pat Harrison of the senate finance committee had approved it as an emergency measure and showed no disposition to reconsider.

When the Couzens amendment was first voted on in the senate it was defeated by the bare majority of 46 to 44, the Michigan senator changing his vote to the negative so as to move a reconsideration. He got busy among his fellow senators and was successful first in having the vote reconsidered and then in the measure's adoption by a vote of 43 to 36. It was certain the proposal would be firmly opposed when the revenue bill went into conference.

Under the Couzens proposal, a person subject to a normal tax of $100 on his 1934 income would pay $100. Next day the senate adopted the La Follette estate taxes amendment to the bill, thus adding nearly $100,000,000 more to the tax load of the country. The amendment puts a tax of 1 per cent on estates of $40,000. This percentage is increased rapidly until 60 per cent is levied by the government upon estates of $10,000,000 and more. Under the present law, estates up to $50,000 are exempted from the tax.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S fishing trip on the Nourmahal ended with the arrival of the yacht at Miami. Friends advised against his landing, remembering the attempt on his life there two years ago, but he laughed at their fears. However, he and Secretary McIntyre drove directly from the pier to the train and the President was back in Washington on the next day.

General Johnson, Donald Richberg, Secretary McIntyre and some twenty White House correspondents and their wives narrowly escaped death as they were going from Coral Gables to meet the President at the water front. A big combination automobile trailer in which they were riding got across the railway tracks just in time to avoid by inches being struck by a speeding train.

JUST before he left Washington for Miami to meet the President and accompany him back to the Capital, General Johnson decreed a radical reorganization of the NRA along lines similar to those of the army. The most important part of this shakeup was the appointment of Lieut. Col. G. A. Lynch, an infantry officer of the regular army, as Johnson's right-hand man.

Col. G. A. Lynch, whom the administrator describes as "the most advanced thinker in the United States army," is given full jurisdiction over all matters not otherwise assigned. He has complete authority to approve codes, orders, amendments and other modifications, and may sign codes that do not require the signature of the President. The NRA administration no longer will be a one-man affair, and indeed, the ground is now laid for the retirement of General Johnson, which has been predicted for some time.

LABOR conditions in the Detroit area, mostly affecting the automobile industry, remained in chaotic condition, despite the partly successful efforts of government mediators. The strike at the plant of the Motor Products corporation, which had caused a shutdown of the factory of the Hudson Motor company, was settled when Edward P. McGrady, assistant to Gen. Hugh Johnson, laid before the strikers terms that had been accepted by the corporation. The workers agreed to the terms, which called for a 10 per cent increase in pay and arbitration of disputes over piece work pay rates. This enabled the Hudson plant to reopen.

The 1,700 employees of the Campbell, Wyant & Cannon foundry at Muskegon, Mich., struck. The concern makes castings for automobile builders. The 4,600 employees of the Nash Motor company still were on strike at Kenosha, Wis.

The Mechanics Educational Society of America, an organization of tool and die makers, had voted to strike unless executives of jobbing plants met their demands for a 20 per cent pay increase and 36-hour week.

There was a strike by 800 employees of the Detroit-Michigan Store company who demanded a 20 per cent wage increase, and pickets attacked men who approached the plant to work.

Industrial plants in Connecticut were involved in numerous strikes and labor disputes. The attitude of the workers was expressed by John J. Egan, secretary of the Connecticut Federation of Labor, who said: "No company should declare any dividends until the 1929 wage level is restored."

SAMUEL INSULL, fallen utilities magnate, is on his way home to be tried for his alleged misdoings in connection with the bankruptcy of his financial empire. Turned over to the American authorities by the Turkish government, he was taken from Istanbul by coastal steamer and train to Smyrna and there put aboard the American export liner Edina. He is due to land in New York about May 20.

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN completed the formation of the committee which will investigate the army air corps and its tragic attempt to carry the air mails. Newton F. Baker, war-time secretary of war, accepted the chairmanship of the committee which was declined by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. The other civilians named to assist the military members are Dr. Karl Taylor Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Dr. George W. L. Vis, director of aeronautical research for the national advisory committee on aeronautics; Clarence D. Chamberlin, noted transatlantic flyer; Maj. James H. ("Jimmy") Doolittle, widely known flyer and aeronautical engineer; and Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Motor Car company.

BEFORE the criminal court in Washington Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Church South, and Miss Ada L. Burroughs of Richmond, his aid in the anti-AI Smith campaign of 1923, were finally arraigned to answer to charges of having violated the corrupt practices act. If convicted they would face a possible term of two years in prison or a fine of $10,000 or both. The specific charge is that only $17,800 of the $65,300 contribution made by Edwin C. Jameson of New York to the anti-Smith movement was reported by the anti-Smith Democrats' headquarters committee.

It was indicated that the defense would contend that Miss Burroughs did not have to report the $48,800 in question, arguing that it was spent within the confines of Virginia by the state anti-Smith committee.

IF HENRY A. WALLACE has, his way, Arthur W. Cullen, millionaire member of the Chicago wheat pit, will be barred from future trading on grain exchanges. The secretary of agriculture summoned Cullen to appear before the Grain Futures administration in Chicago on May 14 to answer charges of failing to report his trades, as required by the grain futures act, with making false reports, and with concealing his trades through false entries, dummy accounts and other collusive practices. The alleged offenses were committed in 1930 and 1931.

OFFICIALS of the Public Works administration were flustered by a report received from the F. W. Dodge corporation which indicated a pronounced spring increase in job contracting building activity in which the federal public works program was a leading factor.

Reporting on the volume of contracts awarded in March for both public and privately financed building in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains, the Dodge corporation informed the PWA that $179,163,000 of contracts were awarded last month compared with $96,716,000 in February. Publicly financed building accounted for $126,210,000 of the March total, and privately financed building for $52,953,000.

The $126,210,000 of publicly financed work contracted for last month is about five times the amount contracted for in March of 1933 and nearly three times the amount contracted in March of 1932, according to the report.

FRANK WALKER, chairman of the President's national emergency council, made announcement of the next step in the administration's recovery program, the financing of housing projects all over the country with federal funds. New homes are to be built; old homes are to be repaired, remodeled, spruced up. Money is to be given on generous terms, with interest low and payment permitted over 10 and 20 years.

All of the activities of the government related to housing—such as the subsistence homesteads plan, the Home Owners' Loan corporation, the home loan bank board, the farm credit administration, the Department of Agriculture's program of new housing for farmers—are to be co-ordinated under a single authority.

There is both an emergency and a permanent program in the scheme, the temporary program as content planned will be a rousing campaign, with citizens, real estate men, building contractors, union leaders, and laborers all being exhorted to join in a patriotic movement toward the restoration of the still slumbering construction industry.

BECAUSE of reports that Colombia had hired 24 American aviators and was seeking to give contracts to 50 more through its consul general in New York, the Department of State issued a notice saying: "The United States disapproves of American citizens taking service in the armed forces of any foreign government and, if Americans do so, it is on their sole responsibility and risk and they cannot look to their government for protection while in such services."

WILLIAM WALLACE McDOWELL, of Butte, Mont., the new American minister to the Irish Free State, collapsed and died of heart disease during a banquet in his honor given by President Eamon De Valera in Dublin castle. Mr. McDowell was responding to congratulatory speeches when he fell back into his chair and expired almost instantly.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—As the political pot begins to reach the boiling stage throughout the country, it is apparent that, instead of a dearth of "issues" over which candidates can harangue, there will actually be many of them. A few short weeks ago, political leaders here either boasted or moaned about the lack of issues for the campaign, according as the booster or the moaner was a Democrat or a Republican. The Democrats felt President Roosevelt had been such a huge success that Republicans could not find a vital or vulnerable spot to attack. Republicans, whether they said so out loud or not, felt much the same way. In the interim, however, all of this has been changed and there surely will be a red hot campaign during the coming summer and fall months.

Looking over the situation, one sees as probable points of controversy, such things as the air mail contract cancellation; the charges that the "New Deal" has overridden the Constitution of the United States; the devaluation of the dollar and the profit-taking in which the treasury thereafter engaged through seizure of all gold; the encroachment of the federal government upon business itself through NRA and the scores of administrations and commissions that have been set up; the proposal to revise the method of electing the President, and the use of taxpayers' money in development of such plans as the Tennessee Valley authority, to mention a few of them.

But it seems to me that the most important issue of all is only now coming to the surface. Succinctly, it is whether the voters desire to have the various New Deal items made a permanent part of our national governmental structure.

It is to be recalled that virtually all of the items of the New Deal have been put through congress as emergency legislation. Some of them have been tested in courts on a constitutional basis and have been upheld as emergency laws. But it is necessary to think of the pronouncements by President Roosevelt almost directly asserting his intention to make them permanent. Otherwise, they would expire in June, 1935, a little more than a year from now. The expiration date furnishes the basis for the issue that appears to be so important.

The 435 members of the house of representatives and the 35 senators who are up for election this fall will have been re-elected or defeated eight months in advance of the time when the decision must be made on continuation of the New Deal items that were enacted as emergency laws. Congress, made up of the re-elected or new members, will convene in the first week of January, 1935. That will be the congress to decide what the course shall be. It cannot dodge the question. If the President requests that the emergency laws be made permanent, and he says he will, the new congress either will do his bidding and re-enact the laws he desires or it will kill them off by its refusal to act.

So the candidates this summer and fall must be prepared to answer whether they will support a continuation of the New Deal or will work against it. That puts the question up to the voters. It is closely akin to a referendum. For the farmers, for example, it will require a decision whether they want to go on into the future with a centralized functionary in Washington like AAA, telling them how much corn or wheat or cotton they can grow, how much milk, or eggs, or fruit, or cows, or sheep, or hogs they can produce. For the manufacturer, the issue will require a decision whether he wishes to go on with production under the codes, likewise directed from Washington. For all taxpayers, it will require a decision on the question of the type of expenditures that have been and are now going on out of the federal treasury. It strikes me as about the most important set of questions presented to American voters in many years. Upon their decision rests the future policy of this nation.

I have frequently expressed the opinion in these columns that things have happened so rapidly under the "New Deal" that most of us here cannot keep up with them. Frankly, as an unbiased observer without political affiliation of any kind, I have been unable sometimes to reach a conclusion for myself regarding many of the New Deal projects. They have been thrust upon us at such speed that it has been utterly impossible to study all of them. And that is the unfortunate part of the forthcoming campaign. If we, who are in the front rows of the theater, are puzzled, what then must be the state of mind of those who are far removed from the stage and can judge only by the few favorable or adverse effects that reach them as individual citizens?

There will be quite a bit of water go over the dam before the votes are cast in November. It may be, therefore, that a better understanding of the plot of the play can be disseminated to the country at large. I hope, so, because the decision to be made is momentous. I hope, too, that the campaign will be the hottest we have had in generations. Otherwise, the questions, the issues, will not be thoroughly debated. If they are not thoroughly debated, thousands upon thousands of voters are going to cast their ballots as Democrats or Republicans just because they have always been Democrats or Republicans. The coming campaign is not of that structure.

The best indication I have seen of a probability that all phases of the economic policies evolved from the New Deal will be thoroughly discussed is the greater freedom of debate in congress. All of us remember how bills were sent to the Capitol a year ago and earlier in the present session of congress, and passed without debate, or with very little. There is still too little debate on much of the legislation, but that which is going on serves to enlighten the public on the subject matter proposed. This ought to be. After all, congress and the administration are only representatives of the people who pay the bill and whose citizenship make up our nation.

Figures have just been released here showing that the federal government has approximately 650,000 officials and employees on its payroll. That is the highest point reached since the post war days of 1920. It represents a good many hundreds of millions in dollars for salaries of wages. And the increase has been brought about despite the economy laws that were forced through congress last year, some 20,000 of the increase having occurred since January 1, 1934.

The figures I have given do not include the members of the house and senate, nor their employees, nor do they include the scores of workers that make up the staff of the house and senate and the employees of the Capitol. The country's federal judges and their staffs are counted in the totals, but the army, navy and marine officers and enlisted men are not included. Almost 400,000 men who are enlisted in the Civilian Conservation corps also are omitted.

If one figures the average family for four persons, the federal payroll provides a livelihood for at least 2,600,000 persons, although I am assured by the Civil Service commission that five persons is a better average than four, in which event government pay checks sustain about 3,250,000.

I do not make these statements in criticism. Ours is a vast country and a population of perhaps 127,000,000. But it seems important to me that there should be such a vast number of persons living on government pay checks.

I mentioned in an earlier paragraph in this letter that one of the issues about which argument is likely to be heard in every state this fall is the proposal to revise the method of electing the President. It is proposed, in effect, to amend the Constitution of the United States so that the method of electing a President of the United States would be accomplished by a division of electoral vote in each state proportionately with the division of political party strength as shown by individual ballots. For example, and as a better way of explaining what is proposed: a state may be allowed twenty votes in the electoral college. At present, all of those electoral votes are cast for the Presidential candidate who receives the majority of the individual ballots. It is a unit rule. Now, the Constitutional amendment that is projected would force a division of those electoral votes so that, assuming the party votes were so divided, eight of the electoral votes would be cast for one candidate and twelve for the other.

The authors of the proposed amendment are Senator Norris of Nebraska, and Representative Lea of California. It is the charge of the Republicans that the move is designed to give the Democrats perpetual control of the Presidency. They are not making that charge out loud yet. They want congress to pass the resolution proposing the amendment to the states, so the Republican speakers can argue about it all over the country this summer.

The point the Republicans are making is that the so-called solid South will continue to vote nearly all of its electoral ballots for the Democratic candidate. The case of Mississippi is cited. It has nine electoral votes. The Republican party is virtually nonexistent there. The result would be that certainly eight, and maybe all, of the nine votes would be cast for the Democrat, just as they are each four years under the present system. Add to the electoral votes of the South, the gains that would come from such normally two-party states as New York, and the Republicans assert the result would be permanent control of the government machinery by the Democrats.

Representative Lea says, however, that he thinks a virulent two-party fight would develop in every state in the Union. Representative Martin, a Massachusetts Republican, argues that the Republicans "won't have a chance." And there is your issue.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a perfect movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good. A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and is given the youngest child. Member N. R. A.

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife names Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter, Lorry, are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. Nate tells Lorry he and Owen Kershaw, Lorry's brother, met in France. Just before Owen was killed. They became buddies, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do. Babson, however, determined to secure Lorry's lake-side and Nate's dam-site, makes legal application for the allocation of flood waters to the Forlorn Valley irrigation district, which he organizes. With money advanced by Nate, Lorry clears up her indebtedness to Babson. Nate finds he is falling in love with Lorry. Babson discovers Nate is behind a power project which threatens to ruin the banker's schemes.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

He was possessed of a warm feeling of elation as he motored up to the Circle K and in a field below the ranch house found Lorry with her cowboys working in the branding corral. She wore the traditional boots, overalls, shirt, and hat of a cowman. She carried a four-strand thirty-foot calf rope of braided rawhide and bestrode a buckskin horse that knew his business.

Tichenor climbed up on the fence and watched her work; he thrilled with professional pride as her small loop went under the belly of each victim and curled up and over the legs of the calf as the little animal went forward; he observed how gently she laid him down, saving undue strain on her riata, and dragged him through the soft loose dirt to the fire. Rube Tenney, working a calf along the fence below Nate, said out of the corner of his mouth as he passed:

"Ninety-two calves so far today and she hasn't missed her cast yet."

It was long since he had sat on the top rail of a corral fence, comfortable in his shirt-sleeves, and looked at good stock! Long since he had done any shooting and fishing, long since his knees had gripped anything save an academy-trained horse.

He resolved definitely not to give it up. When the world wearied him he could always come back to Eden Valley and enjoy the society of people who had mastered the great art of silent companionship.

Lorry had waved her riata at him as he took his seat on the fence; thereafter she paid no attention to him. She was busy. So he sat on the fence for an hour, dreaming, remembering, planning. Finally he saw a horse standing, with drooping head, outside the corral. A riata was coiled on the saddle.

"My horse, Lorry?" he called to the girl.

"Whenever you get your job of dreaming done with," she called back. He climbed down, cinched the saddle tighter, and swung aboard. "Ride him, cowboy," Lorry cried joyously, and as if by a signal, the horse went into action. Tichenor stayed with him for six jumps, then sailed off into space and lit on his hands and knees in the soft dirt; whereupon everybody laughed long and joyously at his discomfiture. A dozen feet away the horse was standing, gazing curiously at him.

Lorry rode up to the fence and looked at him. "What happened?" she asked sympathetically. He picked himself up, furious with embarrassment and glared at her. "I can't grip 'em like I used to," he mumbled, and caught up the horse. The brute tried to throw him again, but this time Tichenor stuck, and the horse, deciding he had had the worst of the argument, jogged sedately away to the corral gate, swung into it for Nate to slip the wooden latch, pushed it open with his shoulder, pushed it shut again and sidled humbly up to the latch for his rider to slide it home again. Tichenor shook out his loop, found an unbranded calf and roped it neatly around the hind legs. Lorry smiled her approval and before her smile his anger and embarrassment melted and he smiled back.

"Nate, I bet Rube a hundred dollars you'd ride him straight up and stay with him. You rode him straight up but you didn't stay with him—so you lost a hundred dollars for me."

"Why didn't you bet Rube another hundred I'd miss my first calf."

"I did," she confessed sadly. "I'm out two hundred on you."

"Go bet him two hundred more I can rope him straight."

"Taken," the superintendent yelled back. "And another hundred he misses one calf in the first five."

"Take it," Tichenor urged. Lorry took it and he won both bets for her.

"First time I ever knew a man to lay off ropin' nine years an' come back with his old-time skill," Rube Tenney complained.

"Once a year, for six years past, I've roped daily for a week in the rodeo held at Madison Square garden," Tichenor confessed. "The first time I tried it was on a private bet. I was in a box with a lot of society wasters and there was a rich smart Aleck there I didn't like. So I boned him into a bet of ten thousand dollars I could rope and hog-tie a calf in twenty seconds."

"Why, that's slow. I can beat that," Lorry challenged.

"Not on a borrowed horse, with a borrowed rope and an educated calf, Lorry. The crowd thought I was part of the show when I rode out in a top hat and dress clothes and tied the critter in fourteen seconds."

"Did you collect the ten thousand?" the practical Mr. Tenney queried.

"I did."

"I'll bet you ten thousand I can beat your time. We're about finished with this bunch so we'll let all but four out of the corral and haze the others with their mothers down the field about a hundred yards. Then Rube shall open the gate and we'll start a calf from the other end of the corral straight for his mother. The gate shall be the dead line, and the second the calf is through it he's yours to rope and tie. I noticed the other day you carry a stop-watch. How about it, neighbor?" Lorry asked.

"Give me a tie rope," was all he said, and handed his stop-watch to Rube Tenney. The calf, a husky youngster about two months old, then went out the gate for all he was worth.

Tichenor Stayed With Him for Six Jumps.

Forty feet beyond the gate Tichenor's rope settled over his head and stopped him; even as he stopped, the man was going out of the saddle; crawling up along the rope, he flopped the calf, tied him and rolled him over; then Rube Tenney inspected the tie and pronounced it perfect. "Fifteen and a fifth," he announced. "Good fast work, Nate."

They rode back into the corral and watched Lorry haze her calf out. As his tail cleared the gate post she snagged him; like Nate she lit running, flanked the calf expertly and tied him. Tichenor came down and rolled the little animal over twice. "Nothing wrong with that tie," he announced. "By crickey, you're strong."

"Give the lady ten thousand dollars," Rube Tenney ordered. "Fourteen flat. An' you've traveled a long way for a lickin', mister."

Nate Tichenor, using the flat of his saddle for a desk, wrote out the check. "Thanks," the girl said casually, and waved the check to dry the ink. "Easy

Colors of Male Birds and Lizards Serve to Frighten Off Their Rivals

It's long been a popular idea that in the animal world the gay coloring of the male is bestowed upon him to attract a mate. This isn't really so, says Dr. G. Kingsley Nobel, curator of experimental biology at the American Museum of Natural History, for the brilliance of his dress serves rather to frighten away rivals than to attract the lady of his choice.

These conclusions reached through laboratory research, differed so widely from the views of Darwin and the majority of scientists that Doctor Nobel deemed it desirable to re-study the problem under natural conditions. The United Clay Mines corporation, through its vice president, C. W. Hall, generously offered to help his field studies by placing at Doctor Nobel's disposal a house in the New Jersey pine barrens, where the fence lizard, Sceloporus undulatus, was abundant. The male of this species bears on either side of his body a handsome stripe of blue which is nearly continuous with a spot of the same color on the throat as distinguished from the female which has little coloration. "The males, as the season progresses," writes Doctor Nobel in Natural History Magazine of the American Museum of Natural History, "becomes extremely pugnacious and establishes himself in a definite territory. If another male is dropped into that territory, the first tenant either goes into a full display, compressing his sides until his gorgeous blue stripe stands out in shimmering brilliancy, or else he dashes forward in most violent attack. If the trespasser is a female the male never displays. This difference in behavior observed at frequent intervals shows that the bright colors of the male fence lizard are employed to bluff possible rivals into withdrawing from a fight. The adornment of the male is not wedding finery but a gladiator's vestment."

Lucky Reptiles

The teeth of serpents and crocodilians as a rule are perpetually renewed, new ones growing out to replace the old as fast as they are worn out and disappear. This is believed to be largely responsible for the remarkable longevity of some of these creatures.

"So was my mother."

"I've never been invited to a party or a picnic or a dance or a barbecue, even by the people who come up here to picnic and fish and hunt on our ranch. I want no credit from those people, Nate."

A break in her voice caused him to glance sharply at her. Tears were rolling silently down her cheeks.

He gazed moodily down Eden Valley and watched the last rays of the sun gliding the crowns of the scattered pines. Yes, the people of Forlorn Valley had always been free to use Eden valley for a playground.

"They can't come to Eden Valley any more," he decided aloud. "I'll put a sign up on the gate that leads from the open country to the Bar H." The mountaineer was speaking now. "I wouldn't have truck with your enemies, Lorry."

She leaned over, put her arm around his neck, drew his face down and kissed him. "I do love you, Nate. And you're sufficient unto ourselves, aren't we?"

He held her so close to him she could hear his heart thumping with the fierce joy that possessed him. He was happy at last; the thought came to him that never again would he be lonely. Nevertheless, he had dreamed big dreams and he recoiled from the prospect of abandoning it.

"We needn't be friendly with them, darling," he resumed, "but we can sell them water, make a lot of money out of them and save them a lot of money. And it's not altogether their fault that we've been ostracized. You've got to limit us weren't a wholesome crew."

"We'll ruin them," she cried, passionately, "and when they've been ruined we'll run cattle over their farms, Nate."

She was still recalcitrant, for she had been wounded deeply, and women do not forget their wounds as readily as men do. "I'm not interested, Nate. I am not my brother's keeper."

"I rather thought you might urge me to be nice to them," he complained a little sadly. And he went on to sketch the situation as he had conceived it, the girl listening alertly and agreeing to interrupt him. At the conclusion of his statement she said:

"Very well, Nate. I'll get religion and love mine enemies; they've struck me on one cheek, but for your sake I'll turn the other. But I'll not forgive Silas Babson. Nate, he killed my father just as surely as any Hensley ever killed a Kershaw or any Kershaw ever killed a Hensley. You said a moment ago you wouldn't have truck with my enemies. Well, that Babson is my enemy. Are you going to have truck with him?"

"I do not see how I can very well avoid that, Lorry. Forlorn Valley will have to form an irrigation district to get the water and you know Babson's their bellwether. He'll run the show."

"He mustn't run it with you. You'll run that show. I'll not have you playing second fiddle to a man that isn't to shine your boots. That's final."

"Well, how are you going to prevent a splitfire?"

"If you do I'll not marry you."

"Threatening me, eh? Don't you realize none of my clan has ever been driven?"

She dodged that terse thrust. "I'll compromise with you. Be nice to the Forlorn Valleyites, if you wish, but smash Babson. I want him smashed," she added with quiet vehemence.

"But if I humor you, little wildcat, I'll have to smash the Bank of Valley enter, and when the bank's smashed the depositors will be smashed with it."

"You don't truly love me," she chided him, petulantly.

"I can give up my love. I've lived twenty-nine years without it and I can live some more."

Again she put her arms around him and drew his face down to hers. "Why, we're feuding again, sweetheart," she murmured softly. "Have it your own way. I'd rather have you than the scalp of Silas Babson"—and she sealed that pronouncement with kisses.

"You win, Lorry. You can lead a mule to water, but you can't make him drink. I'll smash Babson for you. And I have an ancient grudge against that rat Henry Rookby, too, so I'll knock him out of the best salaried position in Valley Center."

"What's wrong with Henry Rookby?"

"Once, when I was about sixteen years old, I walked around the block in Valley Center to avoid coming face to face with your brother Owen. Rookby saw me do it, so he followed me and twitted me about it. I implied I was afraid of Owen. Then he went back and talked with Owen and I saw the pair of them smiling in my direction. So I didn't avoid the meeting after that. Rookby would have liked to see a killing, I imagine, just to vary the routine of his dull life. So I bent my gun over his right shoulder—up between the shoulder and the neck—and knocked him flat on his back. And I said to him: 'Rookby, if you want a killing, say so and I'll kill you. I'm not looking for Kershaw—yet.'"

"And what did Owen say?"

St. Brendan Led by Vision

Legend Has Persisted That on His Famous Voyage the Irish Saint Made a Landing in America; Told in "Book of Lismore."

The arguments for and against the claim that St. Brendan in the course of his wanderings discovered America has been so frequently argued that there is nothing new to be said on the subject. It is certain, at any rate, that the legend exercised considerable influence on the minds of serious geographers down to a comparatively late period, and contributed to subsequent explorations, including the voyage of Columbus. Over a number of years the Spanish government sent out vessels in search of St. Brendan's Island. The last of these was sent as late as 1721. In the treaty of Evord, by which the Portuguese ceded the Canary Islands to the Castilians, the island of St. Brendan is mentioned as one of the islands that had not been found. Leslie G. Glasslough, reputed to be a man of judgment and enterprise, purchased a patent grant of this island from Charles the First of England, and expended a great deal of money in expeditions for the discovery of it.

That Eden, where the immortal brave dwelt in a land serene— Whose towers beyond the shining wave At sunset o'er are seen.

And dream too full of sadning truth! Those mansions o'er the main Are like the hopes I built in youth As sunny and as vain.

In the "Book of Lismore" the origin of St. Brendan's voyage is thus explained: "At his ordination the words 'every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters for My Name's sake, shall receive a hundred fold, and shall inherit everlasting life,' produced a profound impression on him. He earnestly prayed that God would give him a land, secret, hidden, secure, delightful, separated from men. Full of his desire, he went forth by night on Brandon hill, and looking out on the mighty ocean he seemed to see in the distance the island he prayed for, with angels hovering over it, and he resolved to go in search of it."

Of the discovery of the beautiful land, the following extract from the old legend gives a glimpse: "The mist passed away and the saw the fairest country that a man might see—clear and bright, a heavenly sight to behold. All the trees were loaded with fruit and the herbage with flowers. It was always day, and temperate, neither hot nor cold; and they saw a river which they durst not cross. Then came a man who welcomed them, saying: 'Ye are now joyful, for this is the land ye have sought. So lade your ship with fruit, and depart hastily, for ye may no longer abide here. Ye shall return to your own country, and soon after die. And this river that you see here parteth the world asunder, for on that side of the water may no man come that is in this life.' Then St. Brendan and his monks took of the fruit, and also great plenty of precious stones, and sailed hom into Ireland, where the brethren received them with great joy, giving thanks to God, who had kept them all those seven years from many perils, and at last brought them home in safety. To whom he honor and glory, world without end. Amen!"

In modern times, and with the authority of distinguished historians and scholars, the voyage of Brendan is interpreted into a journey to the American coast.—Montreal Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Tantalizing

Seeing all this gold pouring into the country and not being permitted to handle it without going to jail is as annoying as gazing at the jam jar on the top shelf in the pantry with no way to get at it.—Boston Transcript.

"Two things I wanted—"

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-globin in the blood."

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin."

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-globin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores—in two convenient sizes—the larger is more economical.

WHO GETS THE DOLLAR?

Who gets the dollar that is spent for printing? Analysis of disposition of the dollar spent for printing shows that more than 70 per cent of it is paid for labor, and remains at home to benefit the butcher, the baker, the clothier and every line of retail trade.

The dollar expended with the local printer is of greater value to the community than the dollar spent for merchandise.

The local merchant who buys printing outside of his own community is robbing his own cash register. A good many retail merchants need education along this line.

The only source from which they will get this education is the local newspaper.

It has taken years for people to come to some understanding of the fact that the tourist dollar, for instance, is of direct benefit to the entire community.

The dollar spent for printing is the most loyal dollar in your community. Don't let your local merchants forget that fact.—Wisconsin Press.

RABBIT HASHINGS

BY NOEL WALTON

Somehow we don't quite find all the time we'd like to have for these little efforts, so won't you all please excuse the lack of quality and bear with me just the same.

A representative of a large farm implement company told me yesterday that due to the contract signing trend, his organization was putting a new piece of machinery on the market, a repeating fountain pen for busy farmers.

One of our friends who just moved to the country from town writes us thus: "What should I do in order to get ready to keep chickens?"

Well pal if we was you and wanted to KEEP chickens, we'd buy a shotgun and learn to use it.

Being of an inquisitive nature, we have a question to ask.

In view of the fact that all over the county, quite a number of people have had to save and sacrifice to put their children thru four years of high school. Who is responsible for this unnecessary ruling, requiring every student to pay a sizable sum for rental of cap and gowns for use on only two nights, when that same sum would buy them, probably in many cases some much more needed, and more useful clothing?

It seems to me (and from the opinions of a number of patrons, it must be so) that since the cap and gown is a collegiate institution that those responsible have stretched things a bit too far in adding this unwarranted expense to the already over-burdened parents of these children. What do you other patrons think?

Obviously Nan is preparing for a very important affair sometime soon, from all those new clothes.

And one little gal and another one not quite so little are having a time over possession of a certain guy. We can tell you now that the boy himself will be the one to come out ahead, gals.

Since the gent from Bellevue folded up that Model T with his Plymouth last week, another tomato can is crying for its can.

Now we couldn't guarantee this to be true, but we heard that one time, long ago, our portly news gatherer down around the school-house was in somebody's hen house, when the owner came out and yelled, "hey, who's in that hen house?"

"Nobody, boss, jest us chickens" our friend replied.

In our precinct lives a young man (with a family) who is a war veteran. When he had health and hope this soldier asked nothing of his country. Now he is broken in health and unable to do a man's labor, and is in a position where he is forced, unaided to try to support his family. In view of the fact that others in far better health and circumstances than he, are drawing pensions, it seems to me that he should have aid. If someone with any influence or knowledge of the necessary procedure reads this will not he or she write me for this soldier's name and do something in his behalf. He is another forgotten man, a farmer.

S'long,

—Hasher.

A. B. Renaker, secretary-treasurer of the Boone county National Farm Loan Association, received word today from Wm. I. Myers, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, Washington, D. C., that Federal land bank loans and land bank commissioner's loans will be made in the future through the Federal land bank in bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, which bonds are guaranteed by the United States Government both as to principal and interest, which will be at the rate of 3 1/2 per cent per annum for the bonds to be issued at this time. These bonds will take the place of the cash distribution in the disbursement of the unclosed loans previously approved by the Federal land banks.

The bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, according to the statement by Governor Myers, will have behind them not only the unconditional guarantee of the Federal Government as to both principal and interest, and the capital of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation amounting to about $200,000,000, but also the consolidated bonds of the Federal land banks issued in exchange for the bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation and the mortgages accepted by the land bank commissioner as security for loans.

Governor Myers assured Secretary Renaker that the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds will be an attractive investment. "They will be as readily marketable as bonds of the United States Government and they will be quoted in all of the principal markets," he continued. "Holders who have to dispose of these bonds should not sell them without first ascertaining their real market value."

The Governor particularly stressed the fact that country bankers probably will be large investors in these securities since the creditors of farmers who are being refinanced may not all be in the position where they can hold the bonds so acquired and will find it necessary to sell them. Secretary Renaker states that these bonds, which will be tendered to farmers' creditors in payment of the refinanced indebtedness, are "exempt from all Federal, State, municipal and local taxation, except surtaxes and estate, inheritance and gift tax."

They are lawful security for fifteen-day borrowings by member banks of the Federal Reserve system. They are also lawful investments for all trust, public and fiduciary funds of which the deposit or investment is under the authority or control of the Government. The payments of the interest on these bonds and the repayment of their principal are guaranteed by the United States, which means that if the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation should ever be unable to meet the payments on the bonds the Treasury will assume such payments.

"These bonds will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000. However amounts less than $100 will be disbursed in cash. For

OFFICE IN FLORENCE

Mr. Stanley Powell has recently opened a Law Office in the Florence Post Office Building.

Mr. Powell attended school at Berea College and the University of Kentucky at Lexington. He received his L. L. B. Degree from the Law School-University of Kentucky in 1930. Since that time he has been in the employment of a working his way through school.

Law Book Publishing Company, St. Paul, Minn., and the U. S. Department of Justice. He opened his Covington office at 3rd and Greenup Streets in October, 1933.

Mr. Powell was born and reared on a farm in Jackson County, Kentucky, and has had a variety of occupational experiences while Mr. Powell served in France during the World War and has had four years experience in teaching and High School Administration. His hobby is the study of domestic problems and the comparison of Divorce Laws in the several states.

Mr. Powell will be in his Florence Office in the afternoons on Tuesdays and Thursdays and all day on Saturdays.

example, a loan of $965 would be made in a $500 bond, four $100 bonds and the rest in cash. In addition, to provide for certain debts, such as taxes which cannot be paid in bonds, cash covering the required amounts will be provided.

"Loans which have been applied for and approved, but on which the cash has not been paid out, as well as those approved by the bank in the future, will be financed on the above basis. This arrangement in no way disturbs or alters the other provisions of the loans. The interest rate on new loans will continue to be 4 1/2 per cent for the emergency period when made thru a national farm loan association and 5 per cent when made directly by the bank."

Mrs. J. U. Campbell, a Christian county homemaker, helped the C. W. A. visiting housekeeper to give lessons on foods to Negro women. They were taught to cook wheat and make cabbage and carrot salads, etc. Low cost but adequate grocery orders were shown.

RULINGS PERMIT

MORE FEED CROPS

Recent rulings of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration permit the growing of more feed crops by farmers signing adjustment contracts, says an announcement from the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

One ruling says that oats cut green for hay well before maturity need not be included in the total feed crop acreage permitted, on farms under an adjustment contract.

Another ruling allows the planting of certain feed crops on abandoned clover acreages. Where clover or other hay or pasture crops planted in 1933, for use as hay or pasture this year, were killed by drought or weather conditions before a corn-hog reduction contract was signed, the land may be planted to oats, barley, soybeans, field peas or cowpeas, for use only as pasture or for hay but green well before maturity. This may be done even though the total acreage of feed crops planted in 1934 may thereby be higher than 1933 or 1932.

The corn-hog adjustment contract now being signed by Kentucky farmers provides benefit payments for reducing corn growing by 20 percent and hog raising by 25 percent.

Present plans call for completing the corn-hog sign-up by May 1.

The Maude County Farm Bureau is advancing $50 to repair the rock crusher furnished by the state and used by farmers in crushing limestone. The users have to pay only the cost of oil and gas for crushing rock to 60 tons. Two cents more per ton will be charged until the $50 is paid.

Union county farmers contracted the produce of 2,085 cows to the Kraft Cheese Co. for a trial period of 90 days, and a cheese factory will be opened at Morganfield. The Illinois Central Railroad and county agent H. K. Gayle cooperated in getting the factory in Union county.

NOTICE!

The provisions of the Banking Act of 1933 prohibit the paying of interest by any bank on certificates of deposit after maturity. We respectfully request your cooperation in presenting your certificates for renewal promptly at maturity in order that you may not suffer loss of interest. If your certificates are past due please present them at once for renewal.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Catharine Crigler Delahanty, beloved wife of James A. Delahanty, passed away at her home in Ludlow, Ky., Wednesday morning, March 28th. She has been an invalid for eight months.

Always hopeful of getting well, looking forward to spring time, when she could get out again, for she loved life.

She was a gracious hostess, extending true Kentucky hospitality to the many guests within their door. Mrs. Delahanty was widely known; she was an Eastern Star, an active worker in the Women's Democratic Club, and on the election board for several years.

She was also a member on the board of directors of the Harvest Home in Boone county. Mrs. Delahanty was affiliated with a number of social groups. She had a happy disposition, which endeared her to all she came in contact with.

The many beautiful flowers was a symbol of the high esteem in which she was held.

On Saturday afternoon in Allison and Rose funeral parlors, the services conducted by Rev. Runyan were very impressive, the quiet dignity, the beautiful casket, laden with flowers, beautiful in death as she was charming in life.

We followed our friend and neighbor to her last resting place in Hebron cemetery, among her forefathers.

She leaves her husband, James A. Delahanty, her parents Dr. C. H. Crigler and Mrs. Crigler, a brother, Henry H. Crigler, and a host of relatives and friends, who will miss her sunny smile and cheerful greeting.

As we turned away, with saddened hearts and tear dimmed eyes, we bowed our heads and thanked God for bright beautiful spring day.

Whatever my lot

Year to Live, He ## Gets 360-Day Term

Washington.—William McCourt, thirty-three, of New York, has but one year to live. The last five days will be all his own—the first 360 he'll spend in jail.

McCourt and Joseph Kelley, thirty-seven, were arraigned charged with passing bad checks. McCourt told the judge he had a brain tumor and had only a year to live. Court ruled: "Three hundred and sixty days."

PREMONITION FOILS ATTEMPTED MURDER

Wealthy Lithuanian Was to Be Killed by Gas.

Kovno, Lithuania.—How a premonition of his own approaching murder, coupled with a speedy police work, saved the life of a prominent Kovno notary was revealed here with the arrest of the notary's stepson and a friend credited with being the master mind of the intricate plot.

K. Skema has had a flourishing practice for years. He gradually built up a fortune, and the safe in his office was temptingly full. A short time ago there were 3,000,000 litas in it consigned by clients to Skema's care.

The eighteen-year-old stepson, Vадja Gallevitch, was blessed with a good allowance and the best of clothes, but that was not enough. Allegedly at the instigation of Algirdas Puljda, twenty-four, he began to look longingly at the safe.

The police say the two planned long and carefully. They rejected a scheme to mask themselves and shoot Skema. Gas, administered in some cunning and romantic way, was much better.

Equipped with all necessary paraphernalia, the two youths broke into the notary's office one Sunday night. Two glasses of chemicals were set on the desk and attached to the door handle with string.

The idea was simple. Skema would open the door, the glasses would tip over, and the fluids mingle, forming a gas which, according to calculations would kill the notary within five seconds. Armed with gas masks, the pair was to enter, nullify the gas with another compound, and place a glass of prussic acid in the dead man's hand, to simulate suicide.

Police, however, had been warned by Skema of his premonition and caught the would-be murderers just after they had set their trap.

Bull Falls Into Silo, Fights Off Rescuers

McKean, Pa.—Whether every man's house is his castle or not, Wesley Weaver, a farmer living at McKean, can certify that every bull's silo is his fortress.

A Holstein bull owned by Mr. Weaver got loose in the barn and fell from the barn floor into the silo through the opening used to get the silage out. Although the fall was some 15 feet, the silage at the bottom broke the animal's fall and the bull was none the worse for his experience save that his temper was aroused. All attempts to get the animal out of the silo pit failed, the bull charging furiously at every one who attempted to enter the silo to fasten a sling around his body so he could be hoisted back to the barn floor again.

It looked as if the bull had a permanent home which he was willing to defend against all comers. Not wishing to tear down the silo walls in order to extricate the animal, straw was thrown into the silo and gradually the silo was filled until the straw was level with the opening into the barn. After which the bull was driven back to his box stall and peace reigned in the barn.

Police Teletype Locates Owner of Lost Gloves

Boston.—The police teletype has been turned into a lost and found department wire.

A pair of gloves, with the name J. Hrones inside, was found by a policeman in Connecticut. Perusing a newspaper, the officer noted that a man by that name played on the Massachusetts Institute of Technology hockey team.

By teletype, he asked Boston police to ascertain Hrones' address. The information was sent back by teletype, and Hrones is wearing his gloves once more.

Howe About:

Using Soldiers Destroying Our Nation John D. Rockefeller

© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

WE HAVE a good many professional soldiers who live in considerable magnificence and idleness. In our expensive forts cavalrymen devote much time to fancy riding not required in war; army posts are the mainstay of the aristocratic game called polo.

Since we pay an enormous soldier tax, why not make some sensible use of soldiers? Why not distribute squads of them over the country and require them to get exercise by chasing highwaymen, bank burglars, the radicals who bomb peaceful and useful business institutions, and beat up peaceable workmen? Why not a thousand soldier camps instead of a few dozen luxurious ones like the Presidio, a show place in San Francisco? Why not use the fighting men we employ at such terrific expense in maintaining reasonable order in a thousand different communities?

There is a man named Oswald Spengler whose writing one hears a good deal about. His book called "The Decline of the West" is an attempt to prove that the United States is going to the devil, and that nothing can stop it. Mr. Spengler does not specially criticize us for throwing our cookstoves and beds away, and going back to campfires and brush piles, except that his statistics seem to show that while nations always destroy themselves with dissension and false progress, our pace is rather more rapid than has been the rule in national destruction heretofore.

Civilization, Mr. Spengler declares, always destroys itself because people demand too much of it. After a man gets one bath room, and is fairly comfortable in his home, he demands two or three; it was lately charged against a prominent citizen of Texas he had nineteen. Now he has lost not only his nineteen bath tubs, but his house, and the fortune that supported it. His neighbors who had but one bath room took after this aristocrat, and caught him. They are all going to the creek for bathing now but they had an enjoyable fight.

Mr. Spengler believes the special speed we have displayed in going to the devil is due more to our editors than to any other cause. The American newspapers, he charges, have thrown away the brakes and pursue a wide open policy; they drive as fast in everything as their readers drive their new automobiles, and wrecks will inevitably destroy us a little earlier than has been the rule in older civilizations.

A few conservatives are begging for reasonable delay in traveling the road to destruction; for at least as much moderation as the Greek and Romans displayed, but ours is a fast age, and probably we shall continue to step on it.

Considering the many bad things I have known other men to do, I conclude John D. Rockefeller is an exceptionally good man. His father was a runaway, and deserted a good wife and her little children, but John was a good boy, and took care not only of his mother and his younger brothers and sisters, but looked up his father, and helped him, too.

When John had children of his own, he had family prayers, and tried to bring them up right.

The Rockefeller foundation, the greatest philanthropy in the history of the world, is still on its feet, although possibly staggered a little by the recent depression. At ninety-three old John is still pursuing his policy of saying little, and doing much.

In moral conduct, finance, fairness, common sense, his average is higher than that of any other man I know from reading the papers. Of course he has been rich a long time, but this is the most excusable of faults, since every one is trying to be guilty; and I predict that after he has been dead long enough for gossip to get around to the truth (which it always does) his monument will be a little higher than those of Goethe, the poet, Hannibal, the general, or Plato, the philosopher.

After all, it is the Butter and Egg Man who is in position to most influence and better the world by making a high average in the practical things.

Writing a bit of poetry, winning a fight, or tossing off a philosophical gem, are small matters compared with the daily Butter and Egg struggle; in this John D. Rockefeller has long been a master, and made an exceptionally high average from a boy of fourteen to an old man of ninety-three.

There is a bold, merciless thing called Right. Opposed to it is a timid thing making explanations called Wrong.

I have never known anyone not willing to go too far in publicity. President, king, senator, matinee idol, bride, hero, farmer who has killed a wolf, poor boy who has become a prominent business man, always consents to be photographed beyond the point of modesty when the newspapers take after them.

A man cannot always be a gentleman; there is too much of the devil in him, but he can always hope to be a little more gentlemanly tomorrow than he was yesterday, and profit by it.

PERPLEXED MEMORY

"I'm beginning to wonder," said Farmer Cori tassel, "whether I'm not getting symptoms of this ailment they call amnesia."

"Can't you remember your previous identity?"

"Only in part. I can't remember I am the same old farmer who used to have a market for more crops than he could raise and nobody comin' around asking for work."

Bouncer

A safe deposit box holder, while signing the card for entrance to his bank's vault, said to the attendant: "Your rubber goods department, please."

"Why, what do you mean?" was the response.

"I want to go where you keep for me the coupons which, after they are deposited, bounce back like rubber balls," was the comeback.—Vancouver Province.

BRIEF CASES

BY BAREFAX

Again my dear people we are gathered here to witness the trials and tribulations of approximately thirty-two (seventeen, when it rains) very fickle young students. Although this is considered an off season for elopements, shirt-gun weddings and eligible bachelors, we have been able to uncover several cases which we believe should be revealed to the public for the said public's approval, censoring, or what would you say. Here's mud in your chassiss:

CASE NO. 1.

Students vs. School

The students of—hereby put in an application for a steel bar to secure the library door from the inside. (This device will save many a boy from an awkward position, especially in the pre-Easter rush!)

CASE NO. 2

Another high school romance was ended yesterday when Judge Wm. Walton granted a decree divorcing Paul S— from Mrs. Dora Mae S—. Mrs. S— was granted the degree on extreme mental cruelty as she asserted that Mr. S— continually "bragged" of his ability to play baseball.

CASE NO. 3

Sophomore vs. Unknown

A breach of promise suit was dismissed in today's court because of the unwillingness of a comely sophomore to reveal the cause of that breach of promise on April 7, 1934.

CASE NO. 4

William O. H.—vs. County. For $6,000 as damages. W. O. H.—maintains that he scratched his neck on a county fire plug while walking up the unlighted Coon Hollow Highway, causing him to have a severe pain in the neck

CASE NO. 5

Susan R. vs. B. R. Divorce

Mrs. R. told the court that Mr. R. continually talked of other women in his sleep Mrs. R. was given her divorce and the custody of her six children.

CASE NO. 6

Molly Moe vs. Haystack Mattress Inc., for damages which the plaintiff received while sleeping upon a hay stack.

CASE NO. 7

L. J. vs. W. W. A. for slander. L. J. told the court that W. W. A. slandered his good name in the presence of his fiancé E. T.

CASE NO. 8

J. S. S. vs. John Doe, for damages inflicted upon his house by a crowd of lawless bums on the night of April 3, 1934. J. S. S. was awarded a carton of molasses kisses.

Court adjourned.

—Barefax.

NORBEH CHAMPION CLUB MEET

The third meeting of the Norbeh Champion 4-H club was held at the school house April 10.

JOHN URI LLOYD

FORMER CITIZEN OF BOONE COUNTY CELEBRATES HIS EIGHTY-FIFTH BIRTHDAY—REARED AT FLORENCE AND PETERSBURG.

Professor John Uri Lloyd, scientist, inventor, business man and author, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday Thursday, April 19, in California, where he is completing his work on a new book he will publish this year.

At 85 Professor Lloyd, one of the most widely known personalities in Cincinnati, keeps as busy as he did when at 14 he started as a drug-gist's apprentice boy the career that led him to the presidency of Lloyd Brothers, pharmacists, one of the largest laboratories of its kind in the world.

That career carried him through the chairs of professor of chemistry at the Cincinnati College of Pharmacy, professor of chemistry and President of the old Eclectic Medical Institute. It took him into extensive studies in the field of chemistry, for which he received five gold medals and caused him to found with his brother the Lloyd Library of Science, which draws students from all parts of the world.

Better known to Cincinnatians as an author than a scientist, Dr. Lloyd considers his fiction writing a form of recreation. He writes of people and places he knows best, and Boone County, Kentucky, has become nationally known as a result of his "Stringtown on the Pike" and other "Stringtown" books, "Warwick of the Knobs," "Red-head," "Scroggins" and "Felix Moses, the Beloved Jew." Although his "Eldorpha, the End of the Earth" had a great success, his best-known work remains "Stringtown on the Pike."

Professor Lloyd will return soon from California to his laboratory, where he will direct its various activities, read proofs of his new book, "Our Willie," and entertain visitors with tales of his boyhood days in Kentucky, to which he returned when but a few months old, following his birth in New York in 1849.

SPLENDID MEETING

Boone County Utopia Club No. 2 enjoyed a splendid meeting last Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, of near Florence. The club was the guest of the Florence group which conducted a well organized business and recreational program. Thirty-five members were in attendance.

The next meeting of the club will be held May the 31st at the home of Wilton, Alvin and Zelma L. Stephens of near Burlington. Burlington group will be in charge of the program.

1933 TOBACCO

CROPS TO BE APPRAISED BY GOVERNMENT GRADER—AP-PRAISAL TO BE FREE OF CHARGE WHERE MORE THAN 10% OF CROP IS HELD.

Tobacco growers who have signed reduction contracts but who still have part of their 1933 crop on their farms, may now have it appraised by government graders, J. B. Hutson, chief of the tobacco section of the AAA has informed the College of Agriculture at Lexington.

Where there is more than 10 per cent of the 1933 crop on hand the appraisal will be made free of charge. If there is less than 10 percent, a charge of 40 cents per 100 pounds will be made with a minimum charge of $2.00 and a maximum charge of $5.00.

The government appraiser will be accompanied by a member of the county control committee. County agents or members of the control committee have been asked to report the names of farmers desiring appraisals.

Since the first benefit payment will be based on the value of the 1933 crop, unsold tobacco will require appraising for value and weight. All Boone county farmers desiring to have appraisals of tobacco on the 1933 crop should notify the county agent's office immediately.

BURLINGTON HIGH SCHOOL TO HAVE BASEBALL TEAM

The Burlington high school will have one of the best baseball teams in many years according to reports. The local boys have been practicing for the past few days and are rounding into shape. Every position on the diamond and in the field seems to be capably filled this year. Any team to challenge this club will find they have a strong opponent.

Most of the players have been on regular line-ups for the past two years, and are showing better form this year than in past performances.

BELLEVIEW BALL CLUB TO PLAY BOB AND GENE SUNDAY

The Belleview nine will entertain the team known as the Bob and Gene nine next Sunday at Belleview ball park. This game is expected to be very interesting.

The Belleview team has been entered in the Lowe and Campbell League and at the end of the season prizes will be given to the best team in the league.

Some of the players are as follows: Sebree and Voshell, of Burlington; Hitchfield, Deck and Rogers of Petersburg; Hualpha Rogers is the manager, and is said to be a very efficient one.

The Belleview boys will meet the Heller Birds, who are a member of the Lowe and Campbell League in a fast game at Belleview Sunday, May 6th.

HEBRON AND PETERSBURG TO DO BATTLE SUNDAY

According to all dope received by this paper quite an interesting base ball game is scheduled at Hebron when Hebron and Petersburg tangle Sunday, April 29th at the base ball park. The game will be called at 3:00 o'clock fast time. No admission will be charged for this game.

HUGE BIRD IS SHOT BY FLORENCE MAN AFTER HALF-HOUR BATTLE

It is an eagle or a fish hawk that was killed Thursday by Edward Carpenter, R. R. 1, Florence, Ky.

The huge bird, with a wingspread of more than five feet, was killed by Mr. Carpenter after a half-hour battle on his farm.

Mr. Carpenter, it was reported, shot the bird through the neck as it sailed along some 25 feet above the ground, a fish in its talons. It put up a stiff battle on the ground before it finally was killed.

Residents of Florence believe the bird is an eagle. Its color is brownish gray, with a white breast. Local authorities, however, believe it might be a big fish hawk, or osprey. This type of bird is not common in these parts, it is said.

HEBRON LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hunter, Pastor
Sunday, April 29, Bible School at 10:00 o'clock. Mr. Edwin Walton, Supt.

The monthly business and social meeting of the Luther League will be held Thursday evening, May 3, at the church.

Choir rehearsal Wednesday evening, May 2, at 8:00 o'clock at Hopeful church.

Mrs. Robert Aylor, of Hebron neighborhood, completed a quilt for Mrs. Lavina Kirkpatrick, of Burlington, one day last week that is pronounced a very beautiful piece of work. It contains 3800 half squares.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Kirkpatrick entertained her sister, Mrs. Ruth Aylor, of near Florence, last Sunday.

TOURNAMENT

TO BE HELD THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY OF THIS WEEK—ALL EVENTS TO BE HELD AT HEBRON WITH EXCEPTION OF ONE

The annual Boone County Tournament will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Thursday evening at 7:00 P. M. will be the contests in elementary Declaration. Friday at 9 A. M., the Scholarship tests will begin and continue until finished. Also the debate preliminary will be held during the day Friday.

Two new features of the Tournament this year are the debating and extemporaneous speaking. The Final contest in these two events will be held at Florence Friday at 7 P. M., Saturday evening at 7 P. M., the High School music and Declaration will be held.

All events will be at Hebron except the Friday evening program which will be at Florence. The Tournament barely paid expenses last year. The admission price will be same as usual, 25 cents. 10c for children.

HOPEFUL LUTHERAN CHURCH

Rev. H. M. Hunter, Pastor
Sunday, April 29, Bible School at 10:00 a. m. John Surface, Supt.

Morning Worship at 11:00 A. M. Subject of the sermon, "The Church, an Organization."

The monthly business and social meeting of the Luther League will be held Tuesday evening, May 1, at the home of Mr. Joe Dringenberg.

Choir rehearsal Wednesday evening, May 2, at 8:00 o'clock at the church.

Boone County Farm Notes

By H. R. Forkner, County Agent

MONDAY FINAL DATE

IN CORN-HOG SIGN-UP

The AAA Corn-Hog sign-up will close Monday, April 30th in Boone county and Kentucky according to instructions received by county agent H. R. Forkner. The Boone county AAA Corn-Hog campaign committee met at Burlington on last Friday night and voted to use every effort to inform farmers on the program before the closing date Monday.

One hundred and fifty-one Boone county farmers had signed contracts up until Monday night of this week and the total before the close of the campaign is expected to exceed the two hundred mark.

County and community committees have been appointed to visit all non signers with two or more sows and 20 or more acres of corn in 1933 and explain the advantages of the program. However, it will be impossible to visit every possible contract signer and all who are interested should make application for a contract at the county agent's office this week or not later than Monday.

There are two big points to the program that every eligible signer should consider; first, this is the most consecrated and largest effort in American history for farmers to organize for their common good to improve their economic position; second, $5.00 per head on the allotment or $15.00 per head on the reduction plus 30 cents per bushel for corn on rented acres represents more net profit than could be secured under any system of farming under present economic conditions. Many farmers are expecting marked improvement in prices but improvement can be expected for some time and then only if producers unite in working together.

The program to date is strictly a voluntary program and no one should expect or need expect to be asked to sign a contract. Those expecting to sign a contract and receive parity payments should do so before next Monday.

Those farmers who have signed AAA Corn-Hog contracts are:

Hebron, Burlington, Bullittsville: Mrs. J. H. Bartley, Ed. Berkshire, George Gubser-Jake Freeman, H. M. Holladay, M. M. Lucas, J. W. Sebree, Holt White-Mora Souther, B. C. Stephens, Wilford Rouse, Karl Rouse, R. B. Huey, V. W. Gaines, W. C. Arnold-Geo. E. McGlasson, E. J. Aylor, Flora Y. Tanner, Mrs. C.

DISTRICT OFFICES

FOR PROMOTION OF REEMPLOYMENT SERVICE TO BE ESTABLISHED—TEN OFFICES CONTEMPLATED—PERMANENCY IS GOAL OF AGENCY.

Plans and study are being made at this time for the creation and establishment of district offices throughout the state of Kentucky, for the promotion and advancement of the Reemployment Service program.

This new arrangement is in keeping with the system that is being adopted throughout the entire nation, and is consistent with the policy of developing convincingly an organization of growing value to private employers and to the public generally.

The ultimate goal of the Reemployment Service is that of becoming a permanent agency, highly professionalized and of equal dignity and quality of any other business office in the community which will be of distinct value and benefit for furnishing capable and competent and qualified office staffs.

The result of the adoption of this system in Kentucky is the abandonment of the present arrangement, whereby one or more offices are being maintained in each of the counties of the state. While the present set-up has been extremely valuable for the purpose of referring workers during the CWA program, it is at the same time effective and cumbersome for the advancement of the ultimate purposes of the Reemployment Service.

The present plans contemplate the establishment of ten district offices in the state of Kentucky. The boundary lines of the districts are being governed by the geographical limits of the various industrial sections of Kentucky. The location of the office of each district will be determined through the consideration of various factors such as accessibility to the outlying sections of the district, the necessity of referring workers to various public works and road projects either now under construction or soon to begin in the district, the ideal and practical position of a operating point, and most particularly, the existence of future work opportunities in private industry in that community.

The persons selected as employees in the district offices, shall be chosen from those who are now, or were formerly associated with the reemployment offices presently existing in the state. Their selection shall be made entirely upon the basis of qualification, ability and training to do the work required.

The Reemployment Service distinctly is not a relief agency, and while in the case of two persons, equally qualified to do the work, such position will naturally be given to the one who is more in need of employment at the present time generally speaking, the question of need is not considered in selecting competent assistants and employees in the service.

In a later press release, definite information will be given as to the territories embraced in each district, as to the exact location of the district offices and as to the arrangement and system of each of these offices.

SINKING RAPIDLY

As we go to press we learn that Mr. George Blythe, who has been very ill for some time, is sinking rapidly. Practically all hope for his recovery seems to have been abandoned.

AYLOR—ROGERS

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Wilma Lucille Aylor to Walton Ryle Rogers, on Saturday, March 3, 1934. Rev. W. H. Cardwell, Methodist minister united the couple at his home in Williamstown, Ky.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Aylor, of East Bend vicinity. She is a senior of Hamilton High School.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rogers, of Belleview. Their many friends wish them much happiness.

NEW HAVEN P. T. A. TO MEET

The New Haven P. T. A. will hold its regular meeting on Monday night, May 7th. All members are requested to be present at this time as new officers are to be elected. Anyone desiring to submit a bid for lunch room for next year, please have same in hands of President, Mrs. Anna Smith, before this meeting.

L. W. Bentler and Atty. Russell Victor, of Erlanger, were business visitors to Burlington, Monday. Mr. Bentler formerly lived in Burlington, his father, J. W. Bentler being a blacksmith at the same building Calvin Cress is located.

W. Dringenburg, of Florence precinct, called on the Recorder Monday. Mr. Dringenburg was looking for a carpenter. He said most of the carpenters near him were busy.

Elbert Rouse, of Ft. Thomas, was mingling with friends in Burlington Saturday afternoon.

Virgil Kelly, of near Florence, was a caller at this office Saturday. Mr. Kelly is one of Boone's prosperous young farmers.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramey Graff, of Florence spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kirkpatrick.

F. H. Rouse and wife and Clarence Tanner and wife spent last Saturday and Sunday at Herrington lake fishing. They landed quite a few nice ones and enjoyed the trip very much.

C. J. Hensley and Russell Smith, of Petersburg, were business visitors to Burlington, last Saturday, and while here made this office a very pleasant call.

BELLEVIEW EASTERN STAR TO GIVE PLAY

The Eastern Stars are giving a play "The Wild Oats Boy" at the I. O. O. F. Hall Friday evening, April 27th. Everybody come and have a good hearty laugh.

ROTARY CLUB

OF COVINGTON ELECTS CHARLES RANSLER, FORMERLY OF WALTON, AS PRESIDENT—GROUP TO HONOR PAST PRESIDENTS

Covington Rotary Club Friday elected Charles Ransler, Covington real estate dealer, President for the ensuing year. Other officers chosen were: Vice President, Dr. Walter Bledsoe; Secretary, Oscar T. H. Schmidt; Treasurer, Benjamin F. Pugh; Directors, A. L. Heger, Rev. William G. Pendleton, H. P. Day and Dr. L. C. Hafer.

Tuesday at noon a meeting for Past Presidents of the club was held at the Fort Mitchell Country Club. John W. Menzies, Clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati, presided. Tribute was paid to the late Past Presidents, J. Robert Kelley, William H. Harton and Rev. James D. Gibson.

Other Past Presidents are: Mr. Menzies, Harry L. Demm, Dr. James A. Ryan, Dr. John E. Sullivan, Harry M. Penny, John Hanauer, Charles H. Willenborg, Glenn O. Swing and Benjamin F. G. Keam.

President elect Ransler was installed at the meeting by the present head of the club, A. L. Heger. Following the meeting members played golf.

Mr. Ransler is a former citizen of Walton, and is widely known in all parts of Boone county.

REAL ESTATE

Two beautiful pieces of real estate changed hands last week, one of the sales being the house and lot owned by Charles Shields, of Florence, and the other being the farm of C. J. Tanner, located on the Walton and Nicholson road. Both of the sales were negotiated by Col. R. G. Kinnman, of Erlanger, and sold privately. Prices received for this property were not made public.

TOBACCO PAYMENTS

EXPECTED WITHIN NEXT THREE WEEKS

The first AAA tobacco payments to be made Boone county farmers is expected in the next three weeks according to the county agent.

The Boone County Control Committee the past week finished checking the contracts of 700 growers and have submitted their report to the State Board of Review. If this report passes the state board the contracts will be forwarded to Washington for rental payments.

C. L. Gaines and family, of Florence were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kirkpatrick.

DEMONSTRATION

TEAMS TO HOLD CONTEST MAY 12TH—WINNERS TO BE SELECTED TO REPRESENT BOONE COUNTY—ALL CLUBS BUSY TRAINING.

The Boone county 4-H Spring Rally and 4-H demonstration team and style show contests will be held at Burlington Saturday, May 12th. The winners of the contests will be selected to represent Boone county in the state 4-H contests held during Junior Week at the University of Kentucky.

Two scholarship trips to Junior Week have been offered the winners. One is awarded by the Early and Daniel Feed Company, of Cincinnati and the other by the Kenton Loose Leaf Warehouse, of Covington.

Most of the clubs are busy training entrants in the contests. The demonstration teams are being trained under the supervision of local leaders.

Allen Rogers and family, of Belleview, were Sunday guests of W. W. Green and wife.

C. W. Myers, of the Ford Motor Car company, of Florence, was a business caller at this office Tuesday morning. When asked as regards to business he cheerfully replied: "Splendid." Mr. Myers is remarkably active for one of his years and is enjoying good health.

President Tells What He Wants Congress to Do—Mussolini Tries Another Restoration Method—France to Quit Armament Negotiations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a series of conferences with congressional leaders, made known his desires in the way of immediate legislation. First, he told them he would soon submit a new request for $1,500,000,000 for relief purposes, as was indicated in his January budget message. This bill will include several provisions—namely, a housing program and $500,000,000 for the public works program to aid employment. The relief will be made a part of the usual deficiency measure.

Next, Mr. Roosevelt wants a stock market regulation bill with better teeth than those in the much modified Fletcher-Rayburn measure. He desires, too, passage of reciprocal tariff, general revenue, municipal bankruptcy, and federal insurance on bank deposits measures.

In order that congress may get through and adjourn by the middle of May, the President is willing to side-track some of the administration measures, including the permanent air mail legislation and the Wagner bill to eliminate company-dominated unions. He was reported also to have expressed opposition to measures to create a central monetary authority.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI of Italy has his own ideas of the way to restore prosperity, and they are utterly at variance with those of President Roosevelt. By his direction the council of ministers issued a series of decree laws designed to make the cost of living commensurate with the purchasing power of the lira.

The Italian lira now stands at 3 to 1 in purchasing power with reference to pre-war values, it Duce declared. The cost of living on the other hand is 4 to 1 with reference to pre-war prices. The two will be equalized, Mussolini and his ministers declared, and here is what they did:

Slashed the pay of members of the government 20 per cent.
Cut the pay of state and public employees on a scale ranging from 6 to 12 per cent.

Slashed various supplements and indemnities granted state employees and others from 10 to 50 per cent.

Ordered every landlord in Italy to reduce rents by 12 per cent in cases of individuals and societies, and 15 per cent in case of businesses and shops.

Reduced prices in co-operative stores and military co-operatives by 10 per cent.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, British chancellor of the exchequer, introduced in parliament a prosperity budget showing how far the country had gone toward recovery in two years, reducing taxes and restoring the pay of government employees and the dole for the jobless. The chancellor reported a surplus in the treasury of almost $100,000,000 and held out bright hopes for the future. This prosperity of the British, however, isn't going to be of any direct benefit to the United States. Mr. Chamberlain said:

"Neither last year nor the year before did I make any provision for payment on the war debt to America nor for the receipt of war debts or reparations by ourselves, and in the absence of any further development I propose to follow precisely the same line this year."

DISARMAMENT negotiations under present conditions are futile, in the official opinion of the French government, and it will have nothing more to do with them, returning instead to its old plan for national security founded on armaments and allies. This is the gist of a note delivered to the British government which is held to be a death blow to any accord on armaments. The blame for failure of negotiations is laid by the French on Chancellor Hitler and his Nazi government of Germany.

The note described the increased German military budget as a "menace" and declared the German government, without awaiting the results of negotiations in progress, has shown its determination to continue all forms of rearmament in violation of the treaty of Versailles.

"The German government," the note charged, "intends to increase immediately on a formidable scale not only the strength of its army but also its naval and air forces."

"Whatever explanation may be advanced, facts of such exceptional gravity can lead to only one observation and conclusion: They prove the German government has made impossible further negotiations."

The French laid down one condition upon which they would re-engage in disarmament conversations, and it is regarded as insuperable. That condition is that Germany return to the League of Nations and to the league's disarmament conference at Geneva.

The note concluded by calling for the final meeting of the disarmament conference to announce publicly that it is useless to continue its labors and to show the world where the blame lies.

CERTAIN tax increases written into the tax bill by the senate and passed by that body are regarded by house leaders as quite undesirable. Chairman Doughton of the ways and means committee declared they were entirely outside the original intent of the new revenue legislation, and a fight against them was planned in conference.

When the measure reached the senate it contained provisions estimated to produce $258,000,000 a year in new revenue, chiefly by stopping the loopholes through which legal tax avoidance had been possible.

The bill fell quickly into the hands of the senate "liberal" element, and provisions were inserted to add $220,000,000 to the yield provided by the house. Also, the senate inserted the provision for publicity of all income tax returns, which has been proposed many times but usually knocked out before final enactment.

SO FAR as the Democrats go, the Wirt affair is ended, the Democratic majority of the committee of investigation deciding to report to congress that the Gary educator's charges of a red plot to overthrow the government are unfounded.

McGugin and Lehigh, the Republican members of the committee, formulated a minority report expressing their opinion that the inquiry should be broadened in scope. McGugin asserts there is plenty of evidence from many sources to prove that certain members of the brain trust are seeking to overthrow the established social order of the United States.

Representative Hamilton Fish of New York told a gathering of Republican women that Doctor Wirt failed to prove his case because his sources of information were too remote, but that he, Mr. Fish, was going to prove it so there would be no doubt about it. Regardless of patriotic motives, the Republicans in congress are not to abandon just yet the campaign material supplied by the Wirt case.

When the Bulwinkle committee called before it the six who were with Wirt at the dinner in Virginia they all, with astonishing unanimity, denied practically everything that Wirt said occurred that evening. Each of them asserted that the doctor monopolized the conversation, talking mainly about gold devaluation, and that it was almost impossible to interrupt him. They verified only one statement which Wirt had ascribed to Miss Hildegard Kneeland, a division head in the home economics of the Agriculture department. This was that she had objected to Wirt's proposal that a restoration of conditions in the country as they were in 1928.

Miss Kneeland, in acknowledging this statement as hers, elucidated at the committee members' request and said she would advocate, instead of 1928 conditions, better distribution of property, minimum wage laws, unemployment insurance, mother's pensions, government control of the stock market.

Chairman Bulwinkle and some other Democrats declared Doctor Wirt had laid himself open to charges of perjury, but naturally they would prefer to drop the entire affair rather than to prolong it by trying to prosecute the doctor.

CONSIDERATION of air mail legislation was begun by the senate after President Roosevelt's new plan had been made public. His proposal was that contracts to carry the air mail be let to commercial companies on competitive bids, and that meanwhile a commission should be named to study the question of air mail transport and the development of commercial and military aviation and report to the next congress.

Four air lines filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court complaints seeking to enjoin Postmaster General Farley from carrying out his order annulling the air mail contracts. The complaints, brought by the Boeing Air Transport, Inc.; Pacific Air Transport; Varney Airlines; and National Air Transport, Inc., all subsidiaries of United Aircraft and Transport, Inc., charge that Mr. Farley as an individual canceled their contracts without a hearing, illegally, and deprived them of property "without due process of law in violation of the Fifth amendment of the Constitution."

JAPAN has issued a manifesto asserting its responsibility to maintain peace in eastern Asia and objecting to the giving of help to Chinese air and military forces by other nations. Especially the Japanese dislike the sales of airplanes to China by American and Italian manufacturers.

MORE than 1,200 citizens of Lexington, Mass., while preparing to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the battle of Lexington, decided to fire another shot that, though it couldn't be heard around the world, might be counted on to make a slight noise in Washington. They signed and sent to their state delegation in congress a protest against certain policies of the government. Here in pa is what they wrote:

"We protest against federal interference in business under the guise of promoting social reform and economic recovery."

"We protest against the passage of legislation without more careful consideration by congress."

"We protest against the extension of legislation originally designed solely for emergency purposes."

THE wheat advisory commission, sitting in Rome, reached the first international agreement for price stabilization and urged the governments represented to adopt it before May 1, when a committee of experts will meet in London to put the price system into operation.

Four men with wide powers will be designated, under the agreement, to sit in London and control the world movement of wheat. Quotas will be granted and prices will be raised or lowered in the various countries as far as exports are concerned, according to quota shipments.

Sales below or above quotas will govern the increase or reduction in prices. The advisory commission considers this to be a good method of controlling quotas through prices. It was officially announced the minimum price plan, supplements the London wheat agreement.

THE first measure in United States history to limit a crop was sent to the White House for approval after the house agreed to the senate alterations in the Bankhead compulsory cotton control bill. Final action by the senate was taken after the bill had been attacked earnestly by Senator Bailey of Texas and other southerners.

Most radical so far of the New Deal measures, the bill restricts the South's output of cotton this year to 10,000,000 bales by placing a tax of 50 per cent upon all cotton grown in excess of that figure. The secretary of agriculture is to apportion to each farmer, through his agents, the amount of cotton he may grow.

CONDEMNATION and seizure of private property in the interest of the administration's great housing program has begun in Atlanta, Ga. Secretary Ickes, acting as Public Works administrator, asked Attorney General Cummings to file condemnation proceedings against 134 parcels of land there in the name of the Federal Emergency Housing corporation. In addition to these parcels the government is buying outright 70,000 square feet of land to complete what is needed for a $2,000,000 housing plan for negroes.

It was indicated that similar action in connection with housing plans will be taken in Chicago and other cities. Condemnation proceedings are to be resorted to only to expedite the program, says Mr. Ickes, and the government is willing to pay a fair price at all times.

"ALFALFA BILL" MURRAY, governor of Oklahoma, doesn't propose to permit releases of property for delinquent taxes in his state.

These sales were scheduled in eleven counties, six others having already called them off. The governor called out his ever-ready National Guard, declaring that "protection for the homes of the people in stressful times like these is a vital policy transcending any temporary loss in taxes." He ordered the arrest of any county official who attempted to conduct a delinquent-tax sale.

The counties to which guardsmen were sent are scattered. In most counties the military department consisted of an officer and three men. Adjut General Barrett said a greater number was not sent for economic reasons, but added that "more troops will be ready to go if necessary."

REDUCTION of passenger rates in the South and West proved to be a goose that laid many golden eggs for the railroads in those regions, but now the NRA, which has no control over the railroads, is trying to persuade the Interstate Commerce commission to kill the goose because the bus operators are complaining. A hearing has been called in Washington for April 23 and the bus operators, the railway officials and the public will be heard. The first named proposal that the railroads raise coach rates to 2 cents and pullman rates to 3 cents and that the motor bus code be changed to halt special excursion rates and chartering of buses. Most of the railroads are willing to do this.

JOHN J. BLAINE, for years one of the prominent political figures in Wisconsin, former governor of that state and also United States senator, died of pneumonia at his home in Bos-cobel. He was one of the La Follette group of independent Republicans and was defeated for renomination to the senate in 1932 by John B. Chapple, who was beaten in the election by W. Ryan Duffy. At the time of his death Mr. Blaine was a director of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington—Anyone who attempts to interpret Washington news or appraise its effects meets a circumstance frequently where the only course is one of watchful waiting. There is no alternative. Complex situations must be disclosed to a slight degree, if there are such purposes, and some scent must be had of the factors and influences at work. Otherwise, appraisal of the potential effects usually will miss its mark under circumstances of that kind.

Dr. Wirt's Charges—Of such a type were the charges by Dr. William A. Wirt, the school superintendent from Gary, Ind., who asserted that "brain trusters" of the Roosevelt administration were seeking to overthrow our form of government and establish a communistic or Russian-Soviet state in its place. Doctor Wirt's accusations came out of the blue, so to speak, because there was no advance notice of them. Of course, there were thousands of persons who were uneasy about the trend of events and the plans of the New Dealers. Apparently, however, most of them were unwilling to make themselves a target for the unbelieving by becoming vocal about their opinions. So, the setting in which Washington observers found themselves was, to say the least, a new one.

With these facts in mind, I have awaited an exposition of Doctor Wirt's charges before attempting to analyze them or to fit them into other things that have been happening to make a complete picture. His appearance before the house committee of inquiry left nothing to be desired in the dramatics. He was there, accompanied by that famed attorney, former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, which was, in itself, a surprise. And Doctor Wirt stood up against the barrage of attempts to discredit him! He never flinched; he fought back, and he was apparently convinced of his own findings, a fact that gave him added courage.

Doctor Wirt wasted no words in telling of the famous party in a nearby Virginia home where Lawrence Todd, Washington representative of the Russian Soviet news agency "Tass" and several "satellites" of the brain trust were at dinner with the Indiana educator. He quoted Todd as the authority for the statement that President Roosevelt was the "Kerensky" of the present revolution and that presently Mr. Roosevelt would be supplanted by a "Stalin," even as occurred in Russia.

Of course, Mr. Todd has no part in the government, officially, and a good many of those who scoffed at Doctor Wirt originally contended the charges were just "baloney." But he made the statements under oath and their effect now is the thing with which we are concerned. For to say that the charges have had no effect is to make a statement that the moon is made of green cheese.

To those of us whose job it is to keep a finger on the pulse of public sentiment, it has been apparent for several months that a reaction against many of the New Deal principles had set in. I, for one, however, was unable to gauge it accurately. I could not tell how deeply rooted these convictions were. It required some such incident as the Wirt charges to focus attention on the fact that there were doubters before most of us here could gain an idea of the "oppositionalist" movement that appeared to exist. Let me say at this point, too, that it is apparent Mr. Roosevelt is not the only target; the criticism seems to be more of the ideas prompted by his brain trust advisers than the President's own reform or recovery principles. There is a decided difference, one realizes, between the two, for one group in the administration is promoting reform and another recovery.

Here is where the Wirt testimony becomes important in its effect. By making the charges, Doctor Wirt directed attention to the two schools of thought. In effect, he has called upon the country to distinguish between reform and recovery programs, and has asked the question whether we shall sacrifice recovery in order that reform ideas may be forced down the throats of those who find it difficult to swallow untried theories.

There can be no doubt that several millions of Americans who, heretofore, were willing to trust Mr. Roosevelt to run the whole show, are now making individual examinations of the structure which the New Dealers have, or propose to, set up. I think it equally true as well that these examinations by individuals will result in a crystallizing of opinions more than has happened up to this time. They undoubtedly will find some good and some bad, some workable and some unworkable, items among the New Deal plans. That ought to be a wholesome thing for the country. History seems to prove that a cross section of our national mind is nearly always correct after the hysteria dies down. Thus, the opinions I gather around Washington stress the importance of the reform that obviously is going to result from New Deal methods. But they emphasize equally the importance of the Wirt testimony in balking an onrushing wave of so-called reforms that so many persons consider to be actually destructive of the basic and proved practices of our commerce and industry.

And, after all, that is the point at issue in this country today. Doctor Wirt quoted Mr. Todd as having said that "Roosevelt is in midstream and the current is too strong for him to turn back." I still have faith in our system of government and I have more faith in a majority opinion of the people of the United States. Since Doctor Wirt testified, they are on their guard. It may be that the sun of the brain trust theorist is setting.

One more observation about the Wirt affair: In a long service in Washington, I have seen few hearings as badly muddled by a committee of congress.

Badly Muddled—Each of the members of the committee knew, of course, that the atmosphere was surcharged with politics. Some of the Democrats obviously were afraid that Doctor Wirt was going to explode a bombshell of politics that would do their party no good at all, and some of the Republicans were afraid that Doctor Wirt would not explode that bombshell. Consequently, there was haggling without end. I believe the consensus among the hundred-odd correspondents who were reporting the hearing was that Representative Bulwinkle of North Carolina, a Democrat and the chairman, reflected no particular credit upon himself or the committee as inquisitors. Criticism of Representative McGugin, a Republican from Kansas, also was heard, for Mr. McGugin went just as far in supporting the witness as Mr. Bulwinkle did in harassing him.

In the background of the committee, haggling, stood the tall, gray-haired figure of "Jim" Reed. Senator Reed, when he was in the senate, was probably the most feared of all debaters. His vitriolic retorts and cutting statements seldom failed to make spines quiver. His presence as Doctor Wirt's counsel failed at first to check Mr. Bulwinkle, but the fact that he was there provided Mr. McGugin with assurance of help in any battle of words.

Certain evidence of people's views always is reflected in congress rather quickly after changes in sentiment take place, and it is no different now. There was a time during the first months of President Roosevelt's administration when anything he sent to congress was put through, and no questions were asked. Currently, however, there is a disposition among members of both political parties in congress to inquire into the character of legislation they are putting through. For example, the bill that the President wanted for controlling the security exchanges, like the New York Stock Exchange, was advertised by Democratic leaders at first as being ready to go through without question. Mr. Roosevelt said he wanted "teeth" in it, and teeth were put in it, plenty of them. Indeed, the proposed legislation would have left little of the stock exchange to operate. Rigid control was a mild expression compared with that original stock market bill.

Stock exchange members, brokerage houses and plain investors suddenly awakened to the fact that the bill was going to do things to them. They started to fight. They found responsive chords in the house and senate. Reason and logic, as opponents of the bill understood those words, began to prevail and, presently, rumors of proposed changes in the measure began to crop up. And what's more, the changes began to be accepted by a majority of the committees that had the bill in charge, despite frequent reiterations by Senator Fletcher, chairman of the senate banking committee, and Chairman Rayburn, of the house Interstate Commerce committee, that the President wanted the teeth left in.

It is to be admitted, I think, that there was a lot of monkey-doodle business going on among some members of security exchanges. My belief is that they did not always give the individual investors in stocks a fair shake. But some of the reformers included in the administration's brain trust appear to have overlooked the good in whatever amount it exists in the stock exchanges.

But, to get to the point of the story. Many persons hold to the view that the government should not spread a parental wing too far over private affairs. It has been done already beyond the anticipation of a majority of the people. They want to be free to deal in stocks, to speculate, even to gamble, if you please, without having bureaucracy here in Washington to tell them what to do.

The legislation will go through eventually. Of that there is no doubt. In its final form, however, it will not be the handiwork of the reformers. There will be reforms brought about by it, only they will be for the purposes of correcting abuses and not for the purpose of trying out theories on somebody's money.

OLD WORD "TORY" BACK ONCE MORE; LONG IN DISUSE

"Tory" persists like a word that answers a human need. Four times in four centuries it has lapsed from usage only to be revived. From Ireland it crossed to Scotland, migrated to England, voyaged to America to have a part in opposing the revolt of the colonies, vanished with the withdrawal or deportation of Tories and the end of royalism. "All the people were now 'Tory'." In this country the term "Tory" remained simply as history. No till the advent of the New Deal and NRA did it reappear in political discussion.

Much of past struggle is wrapped up in the name "Tory." Originally old Irish (trí-íadhe), it referred to the hunted atlans of the bogs. Elizabethans applied it to the dispossessed natives in Ireland who harassed the English settlers on seized lands. Transferred to England, it was derisively applied by the Roundheads to the Cavaliers, who nicknamed their opponents Whigs.

In America, a revival of parties occurred at the Constitutional convention. The most constant difference was between those who wished a "national" government as against a "confederate" government, those who thought power should be derived from the states as such, and those who insisted it must come from the people. The first Whig party was formed in 1834 from a fusion of National Republicans and others to oppose the Democrats.—New York Times.

SOUFFLES CHEAP LUNCHEON DISH

Also Delectable Served as Dessert for Dinner.

By EDITH M. BARBER

SEVERAL letters have been received from readers interested in souffles. Perhaps one of the reasons for the interest is that eggs are so inexpensive just now. Another reason, perhaps, is because almost every one appreciates a souffle for a luncheon dish or for a dessert.

If you have once put a souffle among your standard dishes you will probably use it very often, for although it takes a little time to make it and bake it, you are always repaid by satisfied customers for your meals. If you make it according to the method I am giving you today you will bake it in a pan of hot water and have no fear of its falling at the psychological moment. Nothing is more discouraging than to take a beautiful, light souffle out of the oven and have it change its appearance on the way to the dining room.

Perhaps some of you are commenting that you can make a good souffle without the use of a pan of water. If that is the case, don't use it, but in general, it is souffle insurance. It is possible to make a good souffle without using a pan of hot water if a special foundation such as is used in French restaurants is followed. I am giving a recipe which a chef in the oldest French hotel in New York showed me how to make. I am also going to give you a standard recipe for the simpler type, which you may vary to suit yourself.

Chocolate Souffle.

1 cup milk
1/2 cup flour
4 eggs, separated
1/2 cup sugar
2 squares melted chocolate

Heat the milk to the boiling point; add the flour and beat in with a wire whisk. Remove from fire and beat until very smooth. Add the egg yolks, unbeaten, one at a time, beating them in very well. Add one-quarter cup of sugar and the melted chocolate. Beat the egg whites and add to them the remaining sugar. Spread baking dish liberally with creamed (not melted) butter. Sprinkle with a heavy coating of granulated sugar and then pour in souffle mixture. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 25 minutes.

Standard Souffle.

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
8 eggs, separated
1 cup cooked strained vegetables shredded cheese or ground meat.

Melt butter, stir in flour. Add milk gradually, stirring until thick and smooth. Pour gradually onto well beaten egg yolks. Add vegetables, cheese or meat and season to taste. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into buttered mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 30 to 40 minutes or until firm.

When baking a pie with two crusts, as an apple, pick the top crust with a fork to let out the steam. This will prevent the crust from bursting at the sides and letting the juice run out.

When buying oranges, lemons and grapefruit, select those that are heavy as they contain more juice.

Indian "Put on the Spot"

Centuries Ago Is Found

Bakersfield, Calif.—Seated before his small fire, baking a mess of clams for his dinner, John Yokut, Tualumnu Indian, was "put on the spot," authorities disclosed recently.

Three stone-tipped arrows were fired into the back of his head and a fourth into his spinal column at the base of the brain.

The murder occurred several hundred years ago.

It was discovered when Smithsonian institution archeologists found John's skull on the shore of ancient Buena Vista lake. John apparently never moved from his position in front of the fire, they said. The remains of the fire, the fossilized clams, and the victim's skeleton all were discovered just as the assassins left them.

Pet Sparrow Is Buried in Coffin With Master

Guayaquil.—What killed Senor Candel's sparrow may become as famous a question in Guayaquil as "Who killed Cock Robin," but it will not be answered so easily.

Don Rafael had made a pet of a sparrow that flew into his room through the open window every morning to feed on crumbs from his breakfast tray. During Don Rafael's last illness the sparrow was a frequent and unmolested visitor to the sickroom.

The sparrow watched the undertakers preparing the body, and just as the coffin was about to be closed the little bird fell to the floor. Its body was still warm when picked up, but its heart had stopped, so it was placed in the same coffin with its friend.

America Leads World in Use of Eyeglasses

Kansas City, Mo.—America has the best lighted homes and offices in the world, but, paradoxically, has the greatest number of eyeglass users, according to Dr. Anton Elschning, head of the eye clinic at the University of Prague.

It does not follow, however, says Doctor Elschning, that sight of Europeans is any better than that of Americans.

"For one thing, many women wear glasses in this country while they don't in Europe," he said. "European women probably need glasses, but they are too proud to wear them."

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

When the Fusion administration came into power and Gen. John F. O'Ryan was appointed police commissioner, there was a big upheaval in the department. Of all the high ranking officers, but one was retained in his old capacity. That one was John Sullivan, assistant chief inspector in charge of detectives. His record was some over with a fine tooth comb. It was found that through a dozen administrations he had fought for honesty in the department. It was found also that his service from the very beginning had been a combination of courage and intelligence. Back in 1903, he stopped a runaway horse before it dashed into a group of school children. He was in a hospital for weeks with a broken kneecap. He solved a puzzling series of robberies working on his own time and capturing three holdup men single-handed. That brought him his first promotion. He trapped a petty politician who was swindling housewives and was promoted again. As a result of high honors in an examination, he became captain of detectives. Since then he has solved crimes with no other evidence than a knot or a broken key. His name seldom appeared in the newspapers. He was never that kind of a detective.

There are many Sullivan anecdotes, even if he won't talk about himself. He is given credit for knowing every gangster in New York. Some time ago, government agents spent six months and a lot of money looking for a member of the late Frankie Yale's gang. The police department wasn't asked for help but finally in desperation, one of the government men appeared to Sullivan. He walked over to a boarding house across the street and brought back the fugitive. His memory for places and localities is as good as it is for faces. He conducts the line-up and has obtained many a confession because a suspect has slipped in giving his address, it being highly disconcerting to have a six-foot inspector with a piercing gray eye fling back, "You're lying, that place is a vacant lot."

Inspector Sullivan's opinion of criminals is not high. In his opinion, the only saying that there is honor among thieves is all wrong. Once an interviewer asked him about the code of the underworld.

"That's the bunk. Criminals are dirty rats with no courage and no honor!"

A story now going the rounds gives me a chuckle because it might be called, "New York Courtesy": A man got up and gave a woman a seat in the subway. The woman fainted. When she was revived, she thanked the man—and he fainted!

On one of the coldest days of the year, I saw Joseph P. Day, who has sold so much New York real estate he doesn't know the total value, walking along the street with no overcoat, and duly mentioned the fact. Now I learn that Mr. Day, who was sixty years old last September, hasn't worn an overcoat in the last 25 years. He carries $3,000,000 life insurance and is a director in the Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

Brass rails are rather scarce now. For a while, they were plentiful. Not only were they available for customers of hold-over speakies but a number of proprietors of legal places, despite the rules against vertical drinking, put in bars. The alcoholic beverages control board took no action until recently. Then word went around that if the bars didn't come down, the licenses would. So there were many alterations and sitting and drinking now is the order of the day and night. Even in most of the clubs, bars are only for service and not for leaning and elbow-resting purposes.

Subway eavesdropping: "She's so stuck on herself that when she didn't win that beauty contest, she went around saying the judges were crooked."

How It Started

By Jean Newton

"Horse Power"
AS TO the origin of the term "horse power," the unit stating the power used to drive certain machinery or to estimate the capability of engines, as, "That's a 70 horse power engine."

For those laymen who use the term casually and would be interested to understand its significance, it is the power required for the performance of work at the rate of 33,000 English units of work per minute; hence the power exerted in lifting 33,000 pounds at the rate of one foot per minute. When first introduced more than a century ago the method of estimating the effects of engines was by what were called "horse powers." Actually, the power of a draught horse of average strength, working eight hours a day, is about four-fifths of a standard "horse power" unit.

From the original "horse powers" the "s" was dropped and "ten-horse" or "fifty-horse" became the qualifying expression.

CARS ARE SO USEFUL

Professor Briggs was met by his wife at the garden gate.

"Where's the car, Septimus?" she asked.

"Car, my dear," said the professor vacantly; "did I take it out?"

"You most certainly did!" exclaimed his wife. "Don't you remember, you drove it to town."

"How odd!" he blithely returned.

"I remember now. I arrived in town, stopped the car, and got out. Then I turned round to thank the gentleman who gave me a lift and wondered where he had gone to."

One Sure Way

Higgs was worried about his garden.

One day he met an old market gardener.

"Just the man I want to speak to," he said; "I don't seem able to tell my garden plants from weeds. How do you distinguish between them?"

"The only sure way is to pull them out," said the market gardener. "If they come up again they're weeds."—Stray Stories.

Ideal Neighbor

Smith entered a big London store and made his way to the gardening department. "I want three lawn mowers," he said.

The assistant stared hard at him. "Three, sir?" he echoed. "You must have a very great estate."

"Nothing of the kind," snapped Smith grimly. "I have two neighbors."

Mrs. C.—No. That's the way I got my husband.

No Sense of Humor

Wear Sam—Alas, Dusty, what caused the family to throw you out on your ear and call the dog?

Dusty Rhodes—Alas, Sam, I scarcely know. I was to saw some wood in return for a pie, and when I asked the lady was it all right with her if I sawed the pie and ate the wood, all at once she seemed to get sore.

Sadly Different Meaning

"Yes," said the gloomy man, "before we were married she used to say 'Bye' so sweetly when I left her. Now it's 'Buy-bye'!"

"Ah," said his friend, "she puts a different spell over you."—Stray Stories.

The Hussy

"See that girl over there?"

"Sure—very pretty girl."

"She takes rings from men she don't even know."

"You don't mean it! How shocking."

"Fact—she's a telephone girl."

Such a Little Thing

"So your sister is married! Is she happy?"

"Very. The only thing that annoys her is her husband."—Toronto Globe.

Sleeping Planes New Luxury in Air Travel

Asleep or awake, American Airways' new convertible Condor sleeping planes represent the ultimate in air travel luxury. Spacious upper and lower berths, comprising each compartment, are one inch longer than those on the standard American sleeping car. For daytime flying these berths are quickly convertible, in flight, into comfortable seats. Each plane has six compartments, providing sleeping facilities for twelve passengers. These planes are the first flying sleepers ever put in service on any of the world's airlines.

RABBIT HASHINGS

Why, we sometimes wonder is somebody always taking the joy out of life. Just as we begin to think that the boys and girls are gonna give us something to write about they all hafta go and get married. Ah me. Such is life.

One time a preacher friend of ours met a man he had married about ten years before. Said the man "Parson is it right for you to profit by the mistakes of others?" "Certainly not" our preacher friend replied.

"Well then" insisted the gentleman won't you give me back that $10.00 paid you for marrying me?"

We are reliably informed that a certain little gal around has decided to disagree (on her own motion) with her bottom land sugar daddy. Re-enter Ann, Mutt and sister are big brothers, insistence have at last admitted the war began March 3, last.

And Walter and Cliff were bashful or something Sunday about going thru Bellevue with their (?) gals.

We pause to dedicate a song to the gal over on the corner, "Goin' to Heaven on a Mule."

Noticed that our Barefax article was again with us, as usual quite bare of facts. Seems that the boys' ideal of literature is five syllable words. Thanks E.

Tho you may have been married by a Justice of the Peace, after a couple of years you'll wonder if it wasn't by the Secretary of War.

Two can starve quicker than one.

When a wife gets a new fur it's her old man who gets skinned.

PROJECT REPORT

Clayton Clore, True Blue 4-H Club project captain gave reports on his poultry group. The results: Janie Hightower has fifty Wyandotte chickens; Louise Rice has about fifty chickens which are five weeks old. Jack Clore has fifty Wyandottes one week old; Mildred Snelling has not begun her project at the present. The club is progressing nicely.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Relating to the Corn-Hog Production Adjustment Program, and Contract

Question 6—What is the purpose of administrative rulings?

Answer—They are, among other things, for the purpose of elaborating on certain phases of the contract which could not be completely covered in the contract form, and also to care for special circumstances which are found infrequently. In other words, administrative rulings are designed to make clear the contractual obligations and to insure a fair deal for all concerned.

Question 7—Who composes the County Allotment Committee?

Answer—The County Allotment Committee is composed of the President and of two to four members elected from the Board of Directors of the County Corn-Hog Control Association.

Question 8. Who composes the Community Committee?

Answer—The Community Committee is composed of three to five members for each organized community, elected by and from the membership of the County Corn-Hog Control Association, living in the community from which they are elected.

Question 9—How are corn acreage and production, and hog production determined?

Answer—From his own reports, which are checked by his Community Committee and the County Allotment Committee. Later these figures may be corrected and adjusted by the County Allotment Committee.

"Summer Vatican" for Pope Pius

This is the villa of Castel Gandolfo, built by Pope Urban VIII in 1620, which has been refitted to serve as the summer residence of Pope Pius, as it did for his predecessors until they became "voluntary prisoners" in the Vatican in 1871. The villa is 1,400 feet above sea level and is surrounded by beautiful gardens.

Disguise Taste of Milk When Child Dislikes It

Milk, the natural nourishment for babies, continues to be an important part of their diet for several years, and is used in one form or another during all the years of a life. Most children like to drink milk, but occasionally a child is found who actually dislikes the taste of it. It may be that the child was forced to drink it when his appetite was satisfied, and ever after, the memory of that time presents itself, when a glass of milk is set before him. It may be that the flavor of milk given the child to drink during and after weaning was distasteful compared with mother's milk. Sometimes the change of milk causes an upset system, and milk ever thereafter actually disagrees with the child.

There are adults whose systems react unfavorably to milk, and while these are isolated cases, they exist, and it is not purely a notion that they cannot drink milk. So small a group are these, however, that it does not interfere with the fact that milk is a universal food and a favorite beverage.

To tempt the appetite of those children, and adults also, who dislike the taste of milk, it can be made more palatable to them by certain disguises. For example, a well known method is to add a half or full teaspoon of vanilla, with or without a little sugar. Another excellent change can be made by melting a quarter square of unsweetened chocolate, heating a half tumbler of milk just enough to make it blend smoothly with the melted chocolate, sweetening it with a half teaspoon of sugar, or a little more or less, to suit the person's preference, and adding milk to fill the tumbler. Chill in the refrigerator. A spoon of whipped cream can be placed atop the glass when served, and so make a party dish out of it. Most children delight in this milk beverage.

For variety, add a little beaten egg to a glass of milk, also a dozen grains of salt and a quarter teaspoon of sugar. If the egg yolk is a rich yellow the milk will be tinted by it and be a pretty beverage. One egg will be sufficient for this modified eggnog. If it is stirred into a pint of milk. Keep the beverage well covered in the refrigerator and it will be ready to serve any time during the day and even keep for a second day.

Drinking through a straw may be sufficient to tempt a child to drink milk without having it prepared in different ways.

Irish Schools Criticized

Because teachers and pupils in rural schools of the Irish Free State must spend so much time in reviving the Irish language they have no time to take up scientific farming instruction. This, T. Derrig, Free State minister for education, told a group of educators meeting in Dublin. The old idea of learning reams of matter in flowery language, which young people rarely understood, and which bore no relation to the facts of life around them, is dying hard, he said. He added this was intended to train memories, but the best memories were found in schools where the poetry and plays were not learned.

"Two things I wanted"

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood.

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin.

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores... in two convenient sizes... the larger is more economical.

EDDIE RYLE

Eddie Ryle, born October 20, 1858, in Boone County, was the last of a family of 23 children, 17 full brothers and sisters and six half brothers and sisters.

His father's name was David Ryle, whose first wife Betty Stephens, of East Bend, Boone county, Ky., and whose second wife was Minerva Nelson, of Erlanger, Kenton county, Ky.

The deceased was next to the youngest son of this large family, only two of the first group of children lived to be grown and married, and to quite an old age. Twelve of the last group lived to be grown and ten of them married, lived to a good old age and left families.

Many of their descendants are here today.

The Ryle family was one of the pioneer families of Boone county, Ky., having emigrated five brothers and one sister from N. C. in the days of Daniel Boone in 1770 and settled first near Petersburg, Ky., in Boone county and then from the North Bend of the Ohio river to East Bend opposite Rising Sun, Indiana.

One brother, the eldest, brought his wife with him from North Carolina. The others married after moving to Kentucky. They were a highly respected Scotch Irish family were devoted to their own families and relatives. They owned large farms and many contented slaves. The family was very hostily as was the custom among the early Kentucky settlers. They leave descendants, some of the most respected citizens of Kentucky.

Eddie Ryle married Annie E. Clements, daughter of Richard Clements and Margaret Riley Clements, Aug. 11, 1882. To this union were born three children, two girls and one boy, Edna Eugenia, who died May 5th, 1905, in Latonia, Ky., and buried in Highland cemetery.

An infant who died at East Bend, and Courtney Cowen, born April 28, 1888, who with his wife Helen Manwaring Ryle, and three girls, and one boy, are here today. The names of the children are Thelma, Thomas, Virginia Lee, Edna Elizabeth and Robert Clements.

Eddie Ryle joined Big Bone Baptist church in Boone county, was baptized in 1883 under the pastorate of Rev. James A. Kirtley. Transferred membership to First Baptist church of Erlanger, pastorate of at the Baptist church Sunday, April 29th. Everybody invited.

Garnett Dolph and family, of Newtown, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dolph.

Rev. O. M. Huey, 1894, to the First Baptist church of Latonia, Ky., about 1902, under the pastorate of the Rev. C. A. Earl, and was a member of the church at death.

The deceased began working for the L. & N. Road in 1897, and was a faithful and loyal employee for 37 years. He moved to Latonia in 1899 and has lived at the present residence since 1908. Respected and loved by family and friends. He was of a retiring disposition. He was stricken with a paralytic stroke Feb. 26, 1934, and passed into a blessed peaceful rest March 9th, 1934, at the age of 75 years, 4 months and 17 days. The community has lost a good citizen and the family a loving, kindly helpful father. Eddie Ryle and his wife Annie E. Clements Ryle, of their golden wedding anniversary August 11, 1932, having lived the time of his death lived together 51 years, 6 months and 29 days. The elder members of the family were Revolutionary and Confederate soldiers—strong in political democratic faith and Universal in religious belief.

TOURNAMENT HELD AT HEBRON AND FLORENCE THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY OF LAST WEEK VERY SUCCESSFUL

The annual Boone County Scholastic Tournament held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week at Hebron and Florence proved very successful from every standpoint. Much interest was shown this year by both students and parents. Two new features, debating and extemporaneous speaking were introduced this year and were declared very interesting to all attending.

At the time we close our forms we were unable to obtain the list of high school winners. However, we will publish this list in next week's issue. The following are winners in the elementary grades:

Arithmetic:

- 5th Grade, Joseph Anderson, Constance, first.
- 5th Grade Marvin Lutes, Florence, 2nd.
- 5th Grade Velma Ogden, Hamilton, 3rd.
- 6th Grade, Bertha Newberry, Hamilton, 1st.
- 6th Grade, Russell Rowland, Belview, tied for 2nd.
- 6th Grade, Bill Reeves, Constance, tied for 2nd.
- 7th Grade, Esther Jones, Hamilton, 1st.
- 7th Grade, Ruth Tucker, Florence, 2nd.
- 7th Grade, Pauline Norris, Burlington, 3rd.
- 8th Grade, Josephine Grant, Hebron, 1st.
- 8th Grade, Earl Dolwick, Constance, 2nd.
- 8th Grade, Marjorie Hendricks, St. Pauls, 3rd.

English:

- 5th Grade, Wanda Fisher, Constance, 1st.
- 5th Grade, Janet Brothers, Burlington, tied for 2nd.
- 5th Grade, Ruth Jones, Hamilton, tied for 2nd.

BURLINGTON NINE

TO MEET INDEPENDENCE FRIDAY OF THIS WEEK—LOCALS HAVE STRONGEST TEAM IN MANY YEARS—RYLE AND CLORE BATTERY.

The local high school base ball team will meet the Independence team at the high school diamond in Burlington, Friday of this week. Independence is said to have a strong team, and will give the Burlington boys some strong opposition.

The local team has been going through some rigid work-outs and according to their coach the team is rounding into shape nicely. If the dope bucket contains the right materials, Burlington will walk away with the Independence team, Friday.

It is claimed by many of the old time ball players in this town that the locals are stronger this year than they have ever been.

Ryle and Clore will compose the battery, backed by seven of the most capable players in this section, with every player suited to his place. The coach deserves much praise for his work in developing a team which shows such form in such a short time.

AN EXPLANATION

We wish to make reply to a statement in the writings of "Hasher" two weeks ago. In the outset we wish to say this is not done in the spirit of controversy, but merely as an explanation to the public of a matter which perhaps has been misunderstood.

The item we refer to is that of caps and gowns. You perhaps have wondered why the Board of Education deemed it necessary to adopt a ruling requiring all high school graduates to appear for a diploma in a cap and gown. We are glad that the question has been raised in order that we might give some of the things leading up to this ruling. Our public schools are supposed to be conducted for all classes of people, rich, poor, and those of intermediate means. Among our graduating classes we find children from all the different classes of home. When graduation time comes it was a common practice for the class to decide on certain matters pertaining to graduation, one which was the graduation clothes. Often times it was decided to get a certain kind that was often far beyond the ability of the poorer people to pay and they then were compelled to choose between three ways out of the situation: One to drop out of school and not graduate, another to buy less expensive clothes and be humiliated on commencement night by appearing in clothes not as good as some other member of the class, the third was to require parents to go far beyond their means in providing commencement clothes. We give you two instances, and could give many more, that led up to the ruling requiring all graduates to appear in cap and gown: A girl who was a popular student in high school and one whose parents were heavily involved financially reached graduation time and we were told that her father gave her $50.00 to buy her commencement clothes, we are told the girl in dire disappointment asked, what could she buy with only $50.00? The other instance was a case of an old man who had reared his orphan granddaughter and sent her to high school. When her graduation time came he tried to furnish her with a graduation outfit as good as the other members of the class had. He came to me to know if there was not an orphan fund that he could get some help from, and when told that there was no such fund, he told me of the difficulty he was having raising money to buy her clothes, that would enable her not to feel ashamed on her graduation night and on the other occasions. He states that he had sold everything that he could spare and had raised $40.00 but the class had four different activities and had decided to use a particular kind of dress on each occasion. He had bought three and was trying to borrow money to buy the fourth to complete her outfit for her graduation.

After considering such stories as the above and many more of the same nature the Board of Education decided that it was better to require the pupils to rent a cap and gown which could be rented for $2.50 or less, then no pupil would be made to feel humiliated because of inferior appearance. There was no thought in this matter of copying after the colleges only to the extent of being uniform.

As was stated in the beginning, this is merely an explanation and is in no way intended to be controversial.

—Superintendent of Schools.

Eugenia Poole, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Poole, passed away Monday night from effects of measles. Eugenia was born April 10, 1933. Services at St. Paul church, Florence, Kentucky, Wednesday. Services were conducted by Father Egbring. Burial in Verona cemetery. Chambers & Grubbs were in charge of funeral arrangements.

Rev. John S. Chambers, of New Liberty, was a business visitor here Tuesday.

HOLD FOURTH MEETING

The True Blue 4-H club had their fourth meeting on April 12, 1934. Juanita Ryle, group captain of the third and fourth unit gave the report. Mrs. Madeline Walton was elected as leader, but did not accept the place.

Quite a few have started their garments, Mary Emily Burcham, Espy Hensley and Frances Dean Presser. More will start this coming week.

COUNTY TEACHERS

HOLD PICNIC AND FISH FRY MONDAY NIGHT AT HAMILTON—FINAL MEETING OF SCHOOL YEAR—FIFTY TEACHERS PRESENT.

A fish fry and social on the Ohio River Monday night marked the final meeting of the Boone county teachers. The meeting was held from four o'clock in the afternoon until eight o'clock in the evening.

This meeting was solely for the purpose of pleasure and no program was rendered. Everyone enjoyed themselves immensely, and the fish, cooked over rock furnaces built by the teachers were delicious.

Fifty teachers from various communities in the county were present to enjoy this occasion. As the hour arrived for them to depart for their respective places, they expressed their desire to meet again next year.

The following teachers were in attendance: Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Asbury, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. R. Huey, and Mrs. Huey's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Garland Huff and daughter, Barbara, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Baker, Miss Rebecca Sleet, Miss Jane Bristow, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Allphin, Mrs. Sara Huey, Dean Caston, Miss Virginia Jones, Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Lents, Miss Rachel Pottinger, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Kirkwood, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Lamb, Edwin Walton, James Smith, Geo. Cook, Miss Kathryn Evans, Miss Sadie Rieman, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Norris.

The regular meeting of the Eastern Star will be held Thursday night. All officers are urged to be present as there will be important business to transact.

C. W. Myers, of the Myers Motor Co., of Florence was a business visitor in Burlington Tuesday.

TOBACCO CONTRACTS

SENT TO WASHINGTON THIS WEEK—PAYMENTS PROMISED WITHIN NEXT THREE WEEKS—FARMERS TO RECEIVE BETWEEN $60,000 AND $100,000.

Burley tobacco adjustment contracts of growers in Boone county were being checked this week by County Control Committeemen, G. C. Ransom, J. F. Cleek and A. S. Burcham before being sent to Washington.

Seven hundred tobacco growers of this county signed these contracts and will benefit to the extent of between $60,000 and $100,000 in rental payments. These payments have been promised within the next three weeks and will help farmers in getting their crops started.

Members of the local associations and county control committees have efficiently assisted the County Agent in making the summaries of the county sign-up and in putting the contracts into final form.

COMMUNITY SALE PROVES SUCCESSFUL

The community sale held at Florence last Saturday was a huge success, according to reports. Fair prices were received for all articles offered, and a large crowd was in attendance.

R. G. Kinman, Bob Miller and Check Tanner are the sponsors of these sales and will endeavor to get the highest dollar for every item placed in their hands. There will be another sale this week, Saturday, May 5th, at the same time and place. See advertisement on another page of this issue.

PLAY TO BE GIVEN AT NEW HAVEN

A play entitled "Regatta" will be given by the senior class of the New Haven high school, Saturday, May 26th at 8:00. Everyone is cordially invited to witness this performance.

AGED DEVON LADY PASSES TO FINAL REWARD

Mrs. Elizabeth Connley, aged 87 years, passed away Wednesday morning at her home near Devon, after a long illness. The remains were removed to the Tallaferro Funeral Home for preparation.

COLLEGE LEAFLETS

TELL HOW TO SPRAY
Leaflets Nos. 20, 21 and 22, published by the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, give directions for spraying raspberries, apples, peaches and plums.

Leaflet No. 20 deals with spraying black and red raspberries. Black raspberries require two early sprays, and red raspberries one when the canes or sprouts are about a foot long and another when the berries are about half-grown.

Leaflet No. 21 deals with codling moth sprays, and is of interest principally to commercial orchard operators.

Leaflet No. 22, dealing with the spraying of peaches and plums contains information of interest to home orchard owners and commercial producers alike.

LOCAL CITIZEN

CALLED TO FINAL REWARD THURSDAY, APRIL 26—WAS ONE OF BURLINGTON'S OLDEST CITIZENS, BEING 78 YEARS OF AGE.

George Blythe, aged 78 years, passed away at his residence in Burlington, Thursday, April 26th, at 5:00 p. m., after an illness of several months duration.

Mr. Blythe had been a resident of Burlington his entire life, and was one of Boone county's most prominent farmers. He will be missed, not only in his own community, but through out the entire county. He was active in community and church work, always ready to lend a helping hand for the betterment of any good cause.

Only one brother, Rev. David Blythe, of Pasadena, Calif., remains of a family of thirteen. Mr. Blythe's father was one of our early settlers, having come to this country from Scotland in early life.

He is survived by his widow, one son, D. R. Blythe, one daughter, Mrs. Jennie Boldon, of Woodman, Colo., three great grandchildren, one brother, Rev. David Blythe, of Pasadena, Calif., and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services were conducted from his late home Sunday at 2:00 p. m. by Rev. J. W. Campbell, in the presence of a concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends, after which the remains were laid to rest in the I. O. O. F. cemetery at Burlington.

Pallbearers were, A. B. Rouse, N. E. Riddell, Walton Dempsey, A. P. Walton, Harry Walton, Anthony Hassner.

Chambers & Grubbs had charge of funeral arrangements.

BELVIEW WINS OVER BOB AND GENE TEAM

The Belview base ball team defeated the Bob & Gene nine last Sunday by the score of 10 to 1. Belview collected 14 hits from Afterkirk, while Bob & Gene gathered 7 hits from Joe Brady. Hitting honors go to Britch Stephens of the Belview team.

The Belview boys will meet the Heller Birds of Cincinnati, Ohio, Sunday, May 6th at the Belview ball park. This game will be a good one and all fans are urged to attend.

LOUISE TOSCHLAG

Louise Tochlag, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Tochlag, Palace and Garvey Ave., Elsmere, passed away Wednesday night at St. Elizabeth Hospital after a short illness with pneumonia. Funeral was from the Tallaferro Funeral Home, Thursday with blessing at St. Henry's church at 1:30 by Rev. Edmond Corby, pastor, after which she was laid to rest in Mother of God cemetery, Latonia, Ky.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Florence Christian church will give a strawberry and ice cream social at the church, June 9.

SAFE CRACKERS

ATTEMPT TO BURN WAY INTO GHEENT BANK—SECOND ATTEMPT—CHEST CONTAINING $195.00 IN NICKELS AND DIMES LOOTED.

Evidence was discovered at 5:30 Friday morning of an attempt of burglars to enter the safe of the Gheent Deposit Bank, Gheent, Carroll county, Ky., by the janitor when opening the doors. Entrance gained by forcing a door. Evidently the thieves had worked for a number of hours with an acetylene torch but were unable to burn their way through three heavy layers of steel to the inner part of the safe where the paper money was. Only the first layer was burned through. However they reeked the bank's heavy safe, value at $1,800. The yeggs forced open a chest in which nickels and dimes were kept and secured $195.00. The bank's loss is fully covered by insurance. Hiram Duguid is cashier of the bank.

This is the second attempt to rob this bank, the first attempt being made about a year ago.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

President Shows Confidence in Tugwell by Promoting Him—High Tax Senators Win a Victory—National Milk Control Program Withdrawn.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S reply to the attacks on Rexford G. Tugwell, which were renewed by opponents of the administration after the formation of the new cabinet, comes in the form of promotion for the head of the brain trust. He has been serving as assistant secretary of agriculture, and is now advanced by the President to the newly created position of undersecretary of agriculture, his salary being increased from $7,500 to $10,000 a year. A new assistant secretary can now be appointed who will relieve Mr. Wallace and Mr. Tugwell of some of their heavy duties. The department has been considered understaffed. The post of undersecretary was created by a recent act of congress.

Tugwell's appointment will have to be confirmed by the senate, and it was considered certain the Republicans would take advantage of the opportunity to make fresh attacks on him and his theories of government.

The President also advanced Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, a Boston banker, from assistant secretary to undersecretary of the treasury, which position had been vacant since Raymond Moley stepped out. The higher personnel of that department is now being placed on a permanent basis for the first time since Henry Morgenthau, Jr., became its head.

MEMBERS of the American Society of Newspaper Editors assembled in Washington heard a warm and elaborate defense of the New Deal delivered by Professor Tugwell, who is in part responsible for most of the recovery measures adopted by the present administration. Denying that those who are advising the President seek to bring about radical changes in the life and economic policies of the American people, Professor Tugwell described himself as a "thorough conservative."

"We have a saving irreverence of authority," said Professor Tugwell in speaking of the characteristics of the American people, "which gets us out of holes. These basic traits determine the structure of our laws and of our government. No one, with the slightest sense of history, would try to fit such a people into a regimented scheme, would try to think for them instead of getting them to think for themselves."

"The New Deal is not something which can establish itself in the mind of a dictator or a small governing group. That was the fatal theory of the system from which we are turning away. Its base has to be as broad as the economy which has to be brought under control and as deep as the minds and the hearts of the people whom it affects."

VICTORY in the conference was won by the senate high tax bloc, for the house conferees accepted virtually all the senate increases in estate and gift taxes, the capital stock and excess profits taxes and liberal compromises over income-tax publicity and consolidated returns.

The conference agreement was complete except for the Couzens amendment, adding 10 per cent to all individual income-tax returns, next year. The house will take a separate vote on this, and it was believed the senate would not insist on it if it were rejected by the house.

With the revenue bill thus disposed of, the senate finance committee began public hearings on the administration's reciprocal tariff bill, which the house has passed.

SENATORS who urge the remonetization of silver held a conference with President Roosevelt but received from him no encouragement for silver legislation, though no conclusion was reached. The possibility of silver purchases was discussed and the President indicated a disposition to give this matter consideration, but on the whole there was no indication the government will embark on such a policy.

The silver senators were not at all satisfied with the President's attitude and held a meeting at which they voted to support mandatory legislation for the benefit of silver.

Later it was reliably stated that the President was maturing a plan for international stabilization of currencies and that silver figures prominently in it. Mr. Roosevelt, it was revealed, favors the inclusion of silver in the metal base of currency issues to the extent of 30 per cent, the remaining 70 per cent to be gold. This change can be safely made, however, the President points out, only by international agreement whereby all the signatory nations would admit silver to their reserves against which paper money is issued.

In the London economic and monetary conference Senator Key Pittman offered such a plan, proposing that central banks keep 20 per cent, or one-fifth, of their metal cover or reserve for currency in silver. The proposal was not acted on at the conference.

CHESTER C. DAVIS, head of the Farm Adjustment administration, announced that the national milk control program designed to help dairy farmers had been withdrawn "because we do not feel that it has sufficient support from the farmers." If sentiment changes it may be revived later, but for the present, only minor features are to be carried out. These include dairy purchases for relief purposes and reduction in the number of diseased cattle.

The program, worked out after months of study and argument, called for benefit payments of from $105,000,000 to $300,000,000 to dairymen who joined in the plan. In return, the producers were to reduce their milk flow 10 per cent below the peak months of the 1932-1933 period.

As in the case of other farm programs, the funds for benefit payments were to come from a processing tax. This was to be one cent a pound on butterfat and the figure was to be raised gradually to five cents a pound. A statement issued by the farm administration said the milk decision "is in accord with the administration's fixed policy to attempt no adjustment program which does not have the support of a substantial majority of those engaged in the industry."

CUBA asked for the extradition of Gerardo Machado, deposed president of the island republic, so a general police alarm was sent out from Washington for his arrest. United States marshals went first to the apartment he had been occupying in New York, and were told by his secretary, Julio Fernandez, that he had left for parts unknown. Federal port authorities and border officials were told to watch for the fugitive. If they can get him back, the Cuban authorities intend to try Machado on charges of murder based on wholesale shootings which occurred a few days before he fled from the island. They also plan to ask extradition of Gen. Alberto Herrera, Machado's former chief of staff, who like his master took refuge in the United States.

Machado has lived in seclusion with members of his family in the Bahamas, Canada and this country since his flight from Cuba. He established his New York residence about six months ago.

WITH unexpected celerity the railway executives and rail union chiefs reached an accord in the wage dispute, and the danger of a strike was averted for another year. At the instance of President Roosevelt but without government interference they worked out their own settlement after the federal negotiators had failed to get results and Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman had withdrawn as mediator. Under the arrangement decided upon the 10 per cent wage cut which has prevailed in the railroads during the last two years is to be gradually wiped out in the next twelve months. Two and a half per cent of the existing wage cut is to be restored July 1, another 2 1/2 per cent on January 1, and the remaining 5 per cent on April 1, 1935.

In other words, instead of a 10 per cent cut rail workers will have only a 7 1/2 per cent cut prevailing between July 1 and January 1, a 5 per cent cut prevailing between January 1 and April 1, and full pay restoration after April 1.

These terms worked out by the employers and employees are actually more favorable to the workers than the terms which President Roosevelt twice asked them to accept.

When informed of the settlement, Mr. Roosevelt said: "I am very glad that the railroads and their employees have been able to settle their wage dispute by mutual agreement. The country should be, and will be, grateful to them for this disposition of what might have developed into a troublesome controversy. I congratulate both sides on the wisdom and restraint which they have exhibited. They have set a good example."

OSCAR DE PRIEST, negro congressman from Chicago, won a victory in his fight to remove the house restaurant bar against members of his race. He obtained adoption of his resolution for investigation of the right of Lindsay Warren of North Carolina to fix the rules and regulations for the restaurant—which of course doesn't mean that negroes will be served in that dining room. The vote was 237 to 114, and the balloting followed the Mason and Dixon line almost without exception.

Mr. De Priest showed his wisdom when he learned that some Communist organizations were planning to take advantage of the occasion by staging a demonstration against "Jim Crowism." He said no friend of his would take part in this.

OPEN hearings will begin May 2 by the senate committee on privileges and elections on petitions for the removal from office of Huey P. Long, senator from Louisiana. Walter P. George of Georgia gave out notice that "only charges sufficient in substance and form" and which were not considered by the special campaign expenditure committee last year would be investigated. Notices were sent to Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond, Mrs. Ruffin G. Pleasant and former Governor of Louisiana John M. Parker, all of whom have filed petitions seeking removal of the "kingfish."

In the run-off Democratic primary in the Sixth Louisiana district to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Bolivar E. Kemp, Senator Long's candidate, Harry D. Wilson, was decisively beaten by Jared Y. Sanders. Nomination in the primary is equivalent to election.

JOHN DILLINGER, the notorious outlaw, and several members of his gang fought their way out of a trap laid by federal agents and possemen ten miles east of Manitowish, in northern Wisconsin. In three desperate gun battles three men were killed and eight wounded, and the bandits escaped into the woods. Three women who had been with the Dillinger gang were arrested. Two others were believed to have fled with the desperadoes. These two came from Minneapolis and were thought to have warned Dillinger of the impending raid on the camp where he had been for several days.

Some hours after the battles in Wisconsin three members of the gang were seen by three deputy sheriffs in a suburb of St. Paul, Minn. A running gun fight ensued and one of the gangsters apparently was wounded, but the trio escaped and stole an automobile in which they headed for the bridge across the Mississippi river.

Federal and local officials throughout all that region were on the lookout for the Dillinger gang with the tacit understanding that the desperadoes would be shot on sight.

AMERICAN Federation of Labor chiefs have begun a drive to unionize the telephone workers of the country. They charge the American Telephone and Telegraph company is violating the NRA laws through its company unions. It is also asserted that financiers are buying up small telephone companies in the Middle West and Chicago and at unreasonable prices and then forcing the stock on their employees at fat profits for themselves.

Besides demanding that stock sales to employees be outlawed under the pending NRA code for the telephone industry, the A. F. of L. workers told Deputy Administrator L. H. Peeples that the NRA should force the telephone companies to stop expansion of dial telephone systems until such a time as employment conditions become normal.

OFFICIALS of the Department of Agriculture believe the wheat carry-over into 1935 may amount to 340,000,000 bushels, and are studying the export markets to find a possible outlet for part of it. But they cannot develop an export policy until the work of the international wheat conference at Rome is completed.

The wheat carry-over on July 1 this year is expected to be about 285,000,000 bushels, to which may be added 75,000,000 bushels surplus from this year's prospective crop of 700,000,000 bushels.

Secretary Wallace has suggested that processing taxes on wheat might be increased and that the amount of the tax earmarked to promote exports might be raised from 2 to 4 or even 5 cents.

A 5-cent tax on the 400,000,000 bushels yearly processing of taxable wheat would return approximately $20,000,000, compared with the $7,000,000 to be spent in exporting wheat this year.

This total would be sufficient to export about the 90,000,000-bushel quota given the United States under the international agreement on the basis of the differential of 2 1/2 cents between the domestic and world prices.

PASSAGE through the Panama canal of the American fleet of 111 vessels, on the way from the Pacific to the Atlantic, was carried out successfully, but not in the hoped-for 24 hours. The time consumed was almost double that, which led the Tokyo press to declare the movement was a "failure."

IN AN extemporaneous address at an exhibition in connection with the federal subsistence homestead projects, Mr. Roosevelt answered various critics of his administration with the declaration that the New Deal is a program of evolution, not revolution.

Praising the homestead system as one of the administration's foremost achievements in helping depression-stricken families to gain a fresh start in life, Mr. Roosevelt denied charges that the program contemplated "regimentation" of great numbers of people. "There is no regimentation," the President said. "We are not going to take people by force from one community and put them in another."

In the long run, he said, the subsistence homesteads will cost the government less than it would cost to keep these families on direct relief.

"We will work out a system for those families, brain trust or otherwise, in an effort to discover new things for communities to do," he said.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—The senate has started another investigation. It has determined to go on a fishing expedition into the several industries that manufacture things that are used in making war. There will be a long-drawn-out inquiry; there will be seizure of papers and there will be smearing, some justified and some unjustified, of leaders in the shipbuilding, munitions and aircraft industries. It is liable to be a nasty thing before it is concluded and a report made to the senate.

There was no noise about passage of the resolution which was proposed by Senators Nye of North Dakota and Vandenberg of Michigan. The resolution creates a special committee which already has begun work. Its passage actually was noted in the newspapers that I saw with no more display than a couple of paragraphs. But the proposition ought to be among those to which attention is closely directed. Unless the bulk of the observers is wrong, the investigation that the Nye-Vandenberg resolution started is going to have a far-reaching effect both in domestic affairs of the United States and in the international field.

One of the reasons why it is so important to give thought to the investigation is the particular time at which it arrives among the window displays of government activities. It hardly need be stated here that international relations are strained in many parts of the world. There is nothing on the horizon to indicate that they will improve. Strained relations, if they continue, lead inevitably to war, and I reported to you several months ago that some nations are headed in that direction if the information our government has is correct. It is naturally to be expected that overt acts on the part of some of the disturbed powers are going to follow, and the disclosures which the Nye-Vandenberg committee are prepared to make will help the international situation not one bit. Indeed, there is no reason to believe otherwise than that the impending disclosures will complicate the situation and create more hatred and suspicion. In other words, as I see it, the disclosures are more than likely to hasten that which seems inevitable, namely, war in several parts of the world.

Senator Pope of Idaho, temporary chairman of the committee, told me that the country is likely to be shocked "when it learns the ramifications of the situation," referring to the operations of the shipbuilding, aircraft and munitions companies. "While he did not say so, I drew the inference from his remarks that he believes there has been collusion of some kind or other among some of those industrial leaders in order to engender ill will among nations already suspicious of each other."

"We are going to find out how many American shells are going to be used to kill American soldiers later," said Senator Pope.

And so we are off on another crashing, smashing, bull-in-the-china closet type of inquiry. All of us remember the famous investigation of shipbuilding activities at the Geneva armament conference. The committee smeared one William Shearer when Shearer was serving as agent for several of the shipbuilding concerns. None was sure when that investigation started where it would lead. The same can be said of the current inquiry.

To my way of thinking, however, the inquiry is much more important in the effect it will have upon international relations than in the smearing of men and corporations. Frankly, the opinion I have formed after many conversations with men and women of sound judgment is that this is an exceedingly bad time for such a fishing expedition. Any disclosure of relations between a munitions company and a foreign nation are going to be seized upon by that nation's neighbors as evidence and there will be blood in the eye in a hurry.

I hope my observations and conclusions will not be taken as condoning any crookedness. My point is that business relations between a private corporation and its customer should be allowed some degree of secrecy so long as they are not contrary to public good. Governments are going to buy munitions; they are going to buy aircraft, and they are going to build ships. The question naturally follows, then, whether it is proper or improper for an American plant to sell something it makes to a foreign nation even if it knows they are to be used in fighting. I can see where those commodities ought not to be sold for use against America, but our government buys such supplies constantly and buys them from American makers. If other governments can buy them here, I fail to see why they should not be allowed to do so unless such sales have the aftermath of dragging the United States into war.

These Japanese assertions, or inferences, that "white hands" must stay out of China are not reassuring. The inability of the Europeans to get together in a solution of their own problems is also disconcerting. It cannot be doubted that some of the foreign nations are sitting atop of a powder keg. It is just possible that the Nye-Vandenberg resolution may strike a match above the powder, as well as serving to embarrass and delay efforts of the various industries to get production expanded that more employment will result.

General Johnson and his NRA has come into more trouble. The National Recovery Board of Review, a detached group responsible only to the President, has written a report of findings in several cases where small plants have complained about the effect of the codes. And the report of the board, headed by Clarence Darrow of Chicago, the famed attorney, is a scathing denunciation of some of the code provisions. In fact, some members of the review board take the position that the codes have permitted the great industries to grind the smaller ones, the little fellows, to a commercial death.

The President's views of the report are not known at this time, but it has leaked out that Mr. Roosevelt is willing to have the review board call a spade a spade. Knowledge of his attitude came through devious channels. There was rumor around Washington that the President was going to try to kill off the board by withholding funds from it. The board was the idea of some of the senators, anyway, and it was believed the President felt none too warmly toward it. Yet it has now been established that the President is going to uphold the hand of the board, notwithstanding extreme pressure that is coming from NRA quarters to get rid of it.

In some Washington offices there is a very definite belief that Mr. Roosevelt is entirely willing to let General Johnson retire. General Johnson's bombastic style of speech and his "crack-down" threats have not been so well received in many places and there is opinion available that the general ought to fade out of the NRA. Mr. Roosevelt can't fire him. That would be a dangerous thing to do from a political standpoint. It does seem, however, that a change is coming.

Business leaders have begun to preach more strongly against the codes and they are getting more and more adherents. Some economists who were thoroughly "sold" on the codes have begun to doubt that the types of regulations adopted are all that they have been advertised. As the things are put in practice, their weaknesses develop. Whether they can be corrected for practicable application remains to be seen.

With all of this war talk hither and yon, I inquired from the War department and found that roughly one-third of our army forces are garrisoned outside of the United States. The latest official tabulation shows the army as having 12,156 officers, 885 warrant officers, and 123,459 enlisted men, including around 11,000 Philippine Scouts. Of these, 2,200 officers, 140 warrant officers and 35,036 enlisted men are on posts outside of continental United States.

The matter of the location of our army personnel is pertinent at this time, too, because of the possibility that the United States government sooner or later will grant independence to the Philippines. I hope it is later, rather than sooner, for I hear so much discussion of dangers that appear certain to develop if the Philippines become a nation unto themselves. The consensus seems to be that the natives will be able to govern themselves, but whether they can protect themselves is another matter.

The United States has an army strength of 553 officers, 51 warrant officers and 4,064 enlisted men in the Philippines, in addition to the Philippine Scouts who number 62 officers and 6,398 enlisted men. That is quite a force and an influence against any ideas that foreign powers must overcome before they seize the Philippines. It should be mentioned that the force and influence existent there also includes some rather important American gunboats and a naval base, Pearl Harbor, which undoubtedly is the defense key. So no bloodthirsty foreign statesmen are going after the little islands as long as our forces are there.
